"In explanation of my inside knowledge of the case I don't mind saying that he was a distant relative of mine, and in the family circle, where his nearsightedness was well known, he owned up to the facts as a good joke. He said he had a vague idea when he started across the street that Harding was a farmer client who had promised to pay him a fee that morning."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

How the Spanish Gypsy Dances.

I held my breath as I watched the gypsy in the Seville dancing hall. I felt myself swaying unconsciously to the rhythm of her body, of her beckoning hands, of the glittering smile that came and went in her eyes. I seemed to be drawn into a shining whirlpool, in which I turned, turned, hearing the buzz of the water settling over my head. The guitar buzzed, buzzed in a prancing rhythm, the gypsy coiled about the floor in her trailing dress, never so much as showing her ankles, with a rapidity concentrated upon itself. Her hands beckoned, reached out, clutched, clutched delicately, lived to their finger tips. Her body straightened, bent, the knees bent and straightened, the heels beat on the floor, carrying her backward and round. The toes pointed, paused, pointed, and the body drooped or rose into immobility, a smiling, significant pause of the whole body. Then the motion began again, more vivid, more restrained, as if teased by some unseen limits, as if turning upon itself in the vain desire to escape, as if caught in its own toils.—Arthur Symons in London Saturday Review.

The worst mosquito infested neighborhood in the world is the coast of Borneo. The streams of that region are at certain seasons unnavigable because of the clouds of mosquitoes.

The horseshoe in China as well as in other countries is looked upon as a harbinger of good luck. For that reason Chinese mandarins when buried have horseshoe graves.

All Eyes On Texas.

Great is Texas. Her vast cotton crops and marvellous oil discoveries amaze the world. Now follows the startling statement of the wonderful work at Cisco, Tex., of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. "My wife contracted a severe lung trouble," writes Editor J. J. Eager, "which caused a most obstinate cough and finally resulted in profuse hemorrhages, but she has been completely cured by Dr. King's New Discovery." It's positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The Graves of the Fallen Soldiers were Strewn with Flowers.

REV. McMAHON,

Of Dearborn, was Speaker of the Day. Business was Suspended and Large Crowd Gathered to Honor the Dead.

Yesterday afternoon the Memorial services were observed at this place and a large crowd was in attendance. The music committee engaged a band from Adrian and the people were treated to some fine music.

At two o'clock Co. C headed by the band left the armory and marched down Logan to Ottawa, thence to Chicago where they were met at the G. A. R. rooms by all the members of Beers Post. As the years are diminishing the ranks of the old soldiers, now 35 years after the war, many of their places were filled by our private citizens. Beers Post was followed by the floral car.

The procession marched directly to the opera house where a good program was given, consisting of music by the band, songs by the choir, reading, "Lincoln's Speech," by Cora Austin, recitations by Miss Anna Ferguson and Mrs. Maus and remarks by H. C. Daniels, commander of Beers Post. Rev. McMahon, of Dearborn, was then introduced and gave a fine oration. Rev. McMahon was a member of the 5th New York Zouave. He spoke briefly of the victories of the Civil and Spanish-American wars and mentioned the names of the heroes of each. He also said had it not been for the Civil war, the Union would not have been strong enough to have fought for the Philippines. Our nation would still have been divided into small colonies, so many of the states withdrawing from the Union.

After the speech the lines were again formed and marched to the cemetery by Chicago and Union streets, about 50 carriages following in the procession. The graves of the fallen soldiers were decorated and the death salute fired. After music by the band, the lines were again formed and to martial music marched back to the G. A. R. rooms and the armory.

Low rates, direct line, excellent train service via Queen & Crescent Route. W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A. Cincinnati, O.

Pathologists have often pointed out the fact that physical and mental enervation are apt to go hand in hand, and the intellectual degeneracy of etiquette monarchs may have a good deal to do with the Sybaritism of their palace life.

The plebeian functions which mediæval sovereigns were obliged to perform by proxy included the adjustment of their gala gloves. They had flunkies to remove their cravats and warm their nightshirts, unplait their pigtails and tuck up their bedclothes around their shoulders. In the morning courtiers competed for the honor of holding their washbasin. Peers of the realm waited on bended knees to buckle their shoes. If the inheritor of a legitimate throne lifted a spoon to break an egg, lynx eyed lackeys anticipated his needs with the agility of trained conjurers. Like his food, his information on current topics was served ready dressed and cooked, till he turned into a masticating machine and repeater of conventional twaddle.—Lippincott's.

Saved Each Other.

A short time ago a guard on one of the Northern expresses while at a big station in the midlands had been talking to the engine driver. Presently he stepped aside and gave his "Right away!" when a gentleman who was late sprang on to the footboard while the train was in motion and tried to obtain admission to one of the compartments.

As the carriage came along the guard seized him by the coat and pulled him off, remarking that he must think himself lucky, for he had practically saved his life.

As this conversation was going on the guard's van came by, and the guard, with that gracefulness acquired by constant practice, sailed majestically on to his van.

The gentleman, who had taken in the situation, thereupon seized him by the coat and pulled him off, saying as the train sped away:

"One good turn deserves another. You saved my life; I have saved yours. Now we are quits."—London Telegraph.

The Sort of Table He Wanted.

The following conversation was overheard between a joiner and his customer a short time ago:

Joiner—Please, sir, I've brought the table you ordered me to make.

Customer—Well, put it down here, my man, and let's see what sort of a job you've made of it.

The man set it down in the middle of the room, and the customer examined it with the air of a critic.

Customer—Why, my man, there is here a crack filled up with putty.

Joiner—Yes, sir. Well, sir, I know about that, but it won't be noticed when it sets hard.

Customer (coming across some more putty)—But here's some more, my man. What is the meaning of this?

Joiner—Well, sir, you see, a little bit of wood chipped off the corner, and I just put a little putty there to fill up. It won't do no harm, sir, when it's set hard.

Customer (finding some more putty patches)—Look here, my man, this won't do. Why, here's a big lump right in the middle of this leg. What can you say about that?

Joiner (scratching his head and trying hard to find some excuse by which to retrieve his honor)—Well, sir, that's no harm whatever, and the putty when it sets hard will be firmer and harder than the wood. So, you see, it will be all the better if you wait a bit, sir.

Customer (sarcastically)—Here, my good man, just take this table home and bring me one made of putty altogether. I want a good strong one, and you can fill up the cracks with wood.—London Tit-Bits.

Companions In Misery.

"I am not especially sensitive," said the man with the billiard ball pate in talking to friends with scanty hair who had been telling experiences, "but I confess it rankled when an absolute stranger hailed me as 'Old Baldy!' I was sprinkling the lawn one hot evening last summer and had laid aside hat and coat. I was somewhat astonished on looking up to see a stranger hanging over the picket fence intently watching me. I continued to play the hose, but when I looked up again the man was still there studying and with evident amusement. I glared at him.

"'Hello, old Baldy!' he shouted, making a profound bow.

"'Are you speaking to me, sir?' I demanded.

"'Hello, old Baldy!' he repeated.

"'Why, you verdant chump,' I replied, rushing toward him, with the nozzle, 'I'll turn the hose on you!'

"'No, you don't,' he answered, removing his hat with a flourish and making another low bow. 'I'm the limit,' he said. I then saw there was not a hair on his head. We went off together and had a drink."—New York Sun.

A Chiropodist's Advice.

A chiropodist advises that foot comfort is much enhanced if all callous places on the feet are made perfectly smooth. This can be done easily and the feet kept in excellent condition by using a fine pumice stone every morning after the bath. The pumice stone should, of course, be wet, and if rubbed daily over the points on the feet that have hardened or shown a tendency to harden the places can be made and kept smooth. After a corn has been removed, too, a light rubbing daily of the place where it has been will often prevent its return.

HIS FIRST RECOGNITION.

The Turning Point In the Career of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The first reading of "The Scarlet Letter" has been told in T. W. Higginson's book of essays, "Contemporaries." The reading was given to the author's dearest critic, his wife. During the entire winter when he was at work upon the book he seemed oppressed by some secret anxiety.

"There was a knot in his forehead all the time," said Mrs. Hawthorne.

Finally one evening he went to her and said that he had written something which he would like to read aloud. The work amounted to very little, but still he would like to read it. All that evening he read, but as the romance was unfinished at bedtime his wife made no comments, knowing that he disliked criticism until one had heard the whole.

The next night he read again, and now her suspense grew so unendurable that in the midst of a moving scene she sank from her low stool to the floor, pressed her hands to her ears and declared that she could not bear to hear it.

Hawthorne put down the manuscript and looked at her in amazement.

"Do you really feel it so much?" he asked. "Then there must be something in it."

The next day the manuscript was delivered to the publisher, and on the following morning Mr. James T. Felds, the publisher, appeared at the author's door. When he was admitted, he caught the little boy of the family in his arms and asked, "You splendid little fellow, do you know what a father you have?"

He had sat up all night to read the manuscript and had posted out to Salem in the early morning. After his interview with the publisher Hawthorne came down stairs with a firm step and walked about, his face illumined by new hope and vigor. The world had found him out. Recognition was at the door.

FRANCE THE TEUTONIC.

Parts of the Republic Are as Much German as the Fatherland.

The northern third of France and half of Belgium are today more Teutonic than the south of Germany. This should not occasion surprise when we remember the incessant downpour of Teutonic tribes during the whole historic period. It was a constant procession of Goths from all points of the compass — Franks, Burgundians and others.

France was entirely overrun by the Franks, with the exception of Brittany, by the middle of the sixth century. All through the middle ages this part of France was German in language and customs as well. The very name of the country is Teutonic. It has the same origin as Franconia, in southern Germany. In 812 the council of Tours, away down south, ordained that every bishop should preach both in the Romanic and the Teutonic languages.

The Franks reserved their German speech 400 years after the conquest. Charlemagne was a German. His courtiers were all Germans. He lived and governed from outside the limits of modern France. The Abbe Sieyes uttered an ethnological truism when, in the course of the French revolution, he cried out against the French aristocracy, "Let us send them back to their German marshes whence they came!"—London Express.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the Little Conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

Three Kings Before Victoria.

Victoria ascended the throne at an inauspicious moment. Kingship had fallen into a miserable disrepute. The last three monarchs who had sat upon our throne had done little to make their office easy or glorious. George III had obscured whatever virtues were his by an obstinacy of opinion which lost us a vast colony and which might well have enslaved us to a foreign power

George IV had died unwept and unpitied As he had made his distinguished office a scandal, as he had made his throne ridiculous by a deplorable levity of taste and conduct, so he had forfeited the affection of his people and alienated their sympathy long before death overtook him. "There never was an individual," proclaimed The Times but a few weeks after his death, "less regretted by his fellow creatures than this deceased king. What eye has wept for him? What heart has heaved one throb of unnecessary sorrow?" And The Times expressed in those bitter words nothing less than the popular judgment.

Nor can it be said that William IV graced the throne of Britain. Loved for his homely virtues, he raised a smile of kindly contempt by his lack of dignity and his frank misunderstanding of kingly ceremonial. On the day of his accession he escaped from his council and was found throwing shillings to a noisy crowd in a back street, and never did he acquire the rudiments of tact which should be the first wisdom of kings.—Blackwood's.

A Scottish Echo.

The late Sims Reeves was fond of telling a story that related to an early engagement in Glasgow which was arranged through a metropolitan agency One of the items on the programme was "Hail, Smiling Morn!" and of course Mr. Reeves was put down for the solo portion. The chorus consists of an echo, and the London agent assured the soloist that a satisfactory choir had been engaged.

The whole matter was settled hurriedly. Mr. Reeves was at first disinclined to accept, as other engagements prevented him from reaching Glasgow in time for a rehearsal with the choir.

"Don't worry about that, my dear sir," said the agent. "You will find the choir perfect."

The concert was a success, and in due course "Hail, Smiling Morn!" was called for. When the soloist came to the lines requiring an echo, he delivered them in his best manner—"At whose bright presence darkness flies away." Imagine his horror when the echo repeated his words in the broadest Scotch:

"Flees awa', flees awa'!"

Yet Sims Reeves averred that not a person in the audience smiled or appeared to see anything incongruous. When he talked over the matter with a bailie after the concert, the good man assured him:

"That's nothing at all. You were a little wrong in your pronunciation, and the echo was correct. You see, it was a Scottish echo."—Youth's Companion.

She Gave Herself Away.

Judge Davis was one day in his private office when he was president of the senate and acting vice president. A woman came into the room to see him. He turned and said, "Well, madam, what can I do for you?" She was neatly dressed in black, with an air of extreme poverty. She told a wretched tale of sorrow and suffering, winding up with the climax that she and her little family were actually starving and had not tasted food for two days. The judge seemed deeply moved. He excused himself for not attending to the case for the moment, as the senate was nearly ready to open.

He looked at his watch with an air of vexation, as if it were not going, and said, "Can any one tell me what time it is?" His visitor pulled out a gold watch and told him the time. The judge said, "Can it be true that your children have been without food for two days when you have a gold watch in the house?" The woman saw the point of the judge's question and called out, "You are a hateful old thing!" and flounced out of the room. She was a professional dead beat.

A Pair of Lovers.

Two American men in Venice spent their first evening loafing round the lagoons in a gondola, it being moonlight, of course, and all the rest of the sentimental, charming things it is always in Venice.

"Here comes a gondola," stage whispered one American to the other, "that probably contains a pair of lovers. See how absorbed those two dim figures evidently are in each other. Gondolier other gondolas, the witchery of the moonlight and the place—to all of it they are oblivious. Oh, what a spot for sentiment! The air is full of it!"

And as the two gondolas glided past each other the Americans heard the unmistakable accents of a fellow countryman. "I'll see your three and raise you five."—Philadelphia Record.

Took Him at His Word.

"Men on newspapers often have peculiar experiences," said W. A. Fairchild of Chicago, "and such a one befell a friend of mine some time ago. The friend in question was city editor of a great daily, and in the course of his manifold duties it fell to his lot to take to task one of his reporters. The reporter in question was an Englishman, slow of thought and action and miserly of speech. Through the tirade to which he was subjected he said nothing, and when it finally ended he left the presence of his superior without any comment.

"But, as the result proved, he did some tall thinking. City editors when 'riled,' as is well-known, are not particularly choice or economical in the language they bestow on their unfortunate reporters, and among other things the Englishman had been told that he was no better than—in fact, was—a crazy man and that his proper habitat was a lunatic asylum and not the hall bedroom of a Chicago boarding house which he occupied.

"The Englishman took this part of the city editor's remarks as his text and acted upon them. He promptly went to an asylum, had himself thoroughly examined by three or four alienists and secured from them an official certificate to the fact that he was sane. With this he appeared at the office of his paper the next day, and, entering the editor's sanctum, he slapped it down before his astonished and dismayed superior. 'Now, you go and get one,' was his only comment and for once that city editor capitulated."—New York Tribune.

Bunkoed.

"His name was Alexander, and his weakness was the horses," said the reporter. "Surprising as it may appear, he won sometimes and enjoyed a brief nodding acquaintance with fortune. When the bookmakers got it back again, he took to drink and in the end went about trying to pick out a good place in which to kill himself.

"He bought a drink in a cheap hotel, and the quality of the liquor led him to believe he had found the place. He wished to do no man injury, but any one who sold that sort deserved to find a dead man on the premises. He hired a room, small, bleak, well calculated to make a man willing to blow out the gas, even if he had an aversion to it, which Alexander had not.

"He plugged the apertures, closed the transom, hung his coat over the keyhole, turned out the gas and lay down. Then he lighted it again and wrote a few foolish letters of farewell, so hard is it for even a tired mortal to quit with no word. Then he put out the light, saw that the gas was flowing freely and lay down.

"He noticed that it was ten minutes to 1 o'clock in the morning. He fell asleep, certain it was all over. (Oblivion.)

"He woke. The sun was streaming in. It was high noon. Yes; he was alive. He could not understand it. There was no gas in the room, yet it was still turned on. He finally discovered that in hotels of that sort they turn the gas off at 1 a. m. 'Bunkoed!' he said and went cheerily on his way."—New York Sun.

A Joke That Failed.

Professor Rogers and Dr. Dale were once lecturing in England, and at every town which they visited Dr. Dale noticed that his colleague, who always spoke first, made the same speech. In fact, so often did the professor give that speech that the worthy doctor knew it off by heart, and this fact led the latter to think of a way of taking the wind out of his friend's sails.

On their arrival at a town in south Lancashire Dr. Dale asked Dr. Rogers to allow him to speak first, an arrangement to which the latter readily agreed, so Dr. Dale rose and proceeded to deliver the speech of Dr. Rogers, looking every now and then out of the corner of his eye to see how that worthy gentleman was taking this practical joke. Dr. Rogers sat calm and composed, and when at length his turn came to speak he just as calmly rose and delivered, to Dr. Dale's utter astonishment, quite a new speech.

At the conclusion of the meeting Dr. Dale said to his colleague:

"I thought I had taken the wind out of your sails tonight."

Dr. Rogers replied: "Oh, no. I delivered that speech when I was here a month ago."

The Cannon and Science.

The president of the French Academy of Sciences remarked in a recent address that the cannon is one of the most instructive laboratories that science possesses. It was the modern cannon, he said, which suggested the application of explosive gases to the driving of engines. The experience of the immense pressures obtained in cannon also led to the use of pressures in steam machines which a few years ago would have been regarded as impracticable. Thus experiments intended primarily for the purposes of war had resulted in the advance of the triumphs of peace.

Both at Rest.

"I suppose," said the stonecutter, "you'll want 'Requiescat in pace' at the bottom of your wife's monument?"

"No," replied the bereaved Mr. Peck; "make it 'Requiesco in pace.'"

"That means 'I rest in peace,' doesn't it?"

"Yes, and I want you to sign that 'Husband.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

An Itinerant Infant.

Going down the road in North Carolina, I accosted a bright looking little colored girl and inquired her name.

"Virginia Alabama Mississippi Benson," she said so hurriedly that I had to ask her to repeat it several times, and I failed to discover how so insignificant an atom in this great universe had received such a tremendous title. Learning that she lived in a little cabin near by, I inquired of her mother.

"So's to 'member th' places we've lived at," was the reply, and further questioning drew out the interesting fact that the child had been made a family record and christened so that her parents might not forget the names of the states in which they had resided.—Chicago Record-Herald.

WASP STINGS.

People Who Have Died From the Effects of Them.

In an article on the stings of wasps a British medical journal cites the two following cases which have come under its notice: A strong, healthy girl of 27 was stung on the neck by a wasp and fainted. On regaining consciousness she complained of a general feeling of numbness and partial blindness and vomited. She suffered severe abdominal pain. She recovered in the course of a few hours Two months later she was stung again, this time on the hand. Her face became flushed, she again complained of numbness and blindness, suddenly became very pale, fainted and died 25 minutes after she was stung.

Another case was that of a girl of 22 years, who was stung by a wasp behind the angle of the jaw. The sting was at once extracted and ammonia applied. In a few minutes she complained of faintness and would have fallen if she had not been supported. Her face assumed an expression of great anxiety, and a few minutes later she was tossing on the bed, complaining of a horrible feeling of choking and of agonizing pain in the chest and abdomen. Brandy gave no relief. There was nausea, but no vomiting. She rapidly became insensible and died 15 minutes after receiving the sting. The most probable explanation of such cases seems to lie in what is known as idiosyncrasy—that is, abnormal sensitiveness in particular individuals to certain toxic agents. It is well known that drugs vary much in action on different people. What is a safe dose for one is dangerously large for another. The inability of some people to eat strawberries or shellfish is another instance of the same phenomenon. The active agent of bee stings is generally believed to be formic acid. It therefore seems very desirable that we should have more accurate information regarding the action of this drug on different species of the lower animals and through them on man himself.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Pair of Horses That Stopped When the Whistles Blew.

A pair of intelligent horses attracted the attention of a large crowd on Nassau street at noon one day last week. They were attached to a heavily loaded ice wagon coming down the steep grade between Cedar street and Maiden lane and were holding back the wagon with a noticeable effort. When they were half way down, the whistles blew for 12 o'clock. Suddenly the horses drew in toward the curb and began to plant their hind feet well forward to stop the wagon.

The driver made no effort to check them, and their hard work at once attracted notice. Pedestrians looked at the horses and then at the driver, who had a broad grin on his face. By hard work the wagon was stopped. The driver sat still and watched his animals. One of them immediately began rubbing his head against the neck of the other and with nods and pushes succeeded in rubbing his bridle off. Then the other horse took his turn at rubbing, and his bridle came off.

Fully 200 persons had watched this, and when it was completed the driver got down from his seat and swung a bag of oats over the nose of each animal. They stood there and ate their midday meal. The driver was patient and proud of his team. He petted them and talked to them and when they were through drove off whistling.

"Talk about the laboring man dropping his shovel at the sound of the noon whistle," said one man—"that beats anything I ever saw. No one hereafter need try to convince me of the intelligence of the horse. That ice wagon team settles it."—New York Sun

An Absurd Superstition.

A popular belief is that the sound produced by a little insect known as a "death watch" portends the death of some relative or friend. That the noise made by this little creature resembles the ticking of a watch is undisputed, but that it in anywise foretells the dissolution of a human being is absurd. Observation has established the fact that these little insects infest decaying timber and posts, and that the peculiar noise is caused by them in gnawing and boring through the rotten wood fibers in quest of food.

Then and Now.

In these days of cheap literature, when the masterpieces of English writers can be had for 6d., it is interesting to note that just 1,000 years ago the Countess of Anjou gave 200 sheep, one load of wheat, one load of rye and one load of millet for a volume of sermons written by a German monk.—London Standard.

Roguish Ravens.

The raven of southern Europe is a bold fellow—not unlike his cousin, the crow. Some notices of the bird, given by an English traveler in Corsica, offer amusing proof of this.

A youth whom I employed to carry my camera could never look on ravens with any equanimity, for he had suffered much from their thievish impudence when sent to the bush to gather firewood.

On one occasion he lost his dinner, a loaf of bread wrapped in a napkin, although he was working close to the spot where he had laid it and had turned his back for only a minute.

But the most unpardonable insult he had ever received happened on a day when he was out gathering wood. As he was stooping down to bind a bundle of fagots a raven suddenly swooped from behind, lifted the cap from his head and flew away with it to a lofty crag, from which she uttered croaks of triumph.

The cap was subsequently seen lined with straw and serving for a nest.

Proper Return.

"I hurl the lie back in your teeth!" he cried.

Which was quite appropriate, for they, too, were false.—Philadelphia North American.

THEY'RE MIGHTY LUCKY

Michigan Taxpayers, That the Legislative Bill Was Not a Great Deal Longer.

THIS IS A GREAT STATE, NOW,

And It Costs Money to Run It Properly —Comments on Legislative Work Done and Undone.

Lansing, Mich., June 4.—While the saving in appropriations made by the Forty-first legislature, whose regular session will finally end Thursday at high noon, is not very large, yet the people of the state are to be congratulated on the fact that the aggregate is not vastly greater than that of two years ago. Those persons who so loudly and constantly clamor for a reduction in appropriations for state purposes invariably have their minds on the "good old times before the war," or possibly on some less remote period when the affairs of Michigan were easily carried on at far less cost than is absolutely necessary now in view of the great increase of population and the consequent increased demand for accommodations for all classes of individuals for whom the state is bound to maintain. They also lose sight of the fact that methods are not the same now as they were forty years ago, and that many things that were not dreamed of at that time are considered absolute necessities in this day. Michigan is a great and growing state, and its actual needs must be supplied if the various state institutions are to be maintained at the standard of those of other states, the numerous classes of unfortunates and dependents cared for as they should be, and there be no retrogression from an educational standpoint. The sooner the people of the state come to fully realize these facts the better it will be for their peace of mind. There will be less growling and criticism, and more happiness and contentment.

Resources Constantly Increasing.

Another important thing which should be borne in mind in considering this matter is the fact that the resources of the state are constantly increasing as is the assessed valuation of the property of the state. For this reason the state is prepared to look after these increasing duties and responsibilities without the individual taxpayer having any increased burden. Although, as I have already said, this year's appropriations aggregate only a little less than those of two years ago, there is no doubt that the tax rate for state purposes for the next two years will be very materially decreased.

Total of the Appropriations.

The total of the appropriations for the ensuing two years is $6,509,718.24, which is just $124,734.43 less than the aggregate of two years ago, when appropriations amounting to $6,634,515.67 were made. This year's state tax will be spread on the valuation as fixed by the state board of equalization, which will meet in this city in August. This board meets every five years, and is composed of the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, auditor general, commissioner of the state land office and state treasurer. The valuation of the real and personal property of the state as fixed by the state board of equalization in 1896 is $1,105,100,000. It is estimated by those informed upon the subject that this valuation will this year be increased to about $1,300,000,000. It will thus be seen that while the appropriations for state purposes have not increased this year there has been a marked increase in the ability of the state to pay, and this fact should be ample cause for congratulation.

Bills Passed in the Rush.

Quite a few important bills were passed during the closing hours of business last week, and not a few equally as important were killed in the crush, as it were. One measure in which the people of the rural sections of the state generally, in view of the rapid increase in electric railways, will be interested, is that which amends the act relative to the incorporation of railroad companies so that projectors of suburban and interurban electric railways need secure the consent of only two-thirds of the owners of abutting property in townships for a right of way. This provision is as follows:

"When any corporation is organized under this act for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a street, suburban or interurban railroad, whose cars shall be operated by motive power other than steam engines, such railroad may be constructed upon any public street, lane, alley or highway of any village on such terms and conditions as shall be agreed upon between the railroad company and the village board of such village; and such railroad may be constructed upon any public street, lane, alley or highway of any township upon such terms and conditions as shall be agreed upon by the railroad company and the commissioners of highways of such township; provided, the railroad company shall have obtained the consent to the construction thereof of two-thirds of the owners of the property adjoining the roadbed of such railroad in such township; and if such consent from any owner cannot be obtained by agreement, then for such consent compensation shall be made by the railroad company to such owner, which shall be ascertained as herein prescribed for obtaining money or franchises for the purposes of its incorporation."

Sureties on Liquor Bonds.

A final attempt was made in the house to pass the Dingley bill, which provided that sureties on liquor bonds should file a sworn schedule of their property with a view of having it determined if they were responsible for the liability they assumed, but it was unavailing. Practically no change was made in any of the liquor laws, this probably being the result of the attitude of the liquor dealers of the state, who asked for none of the numerous radical changes advocated in previous years, and in return fought any changes designed to hamper them.

Freight Rate Bill Got Left.

It is a matter of regret that the senate failed to pass the Hardy bill, providing for the appointment of a commission to classify and regulate freight rates to be charged by railroads operating in Michigan. The failure of this bill to become a law, however, is due very largely to the fact that its introducer and other friends in the house delayed action on it by that body until the very close of the session. They sent it to the senate on the very last day, and could hardly expect such an important measure to be passed by that body absolutely without a moment's consideration. The labor in the house was not in vain by any means, for the progress made this year will make this one of the most prominent topics to be considered by the next legislature, and there is little doubt that a law of this nature will be on the statute books two years hence.

Another Matter of Regret.

It is also a matter of regret that the senate failed to pass the bill reducing railroad passeger fares in the upper peninsula, and the measure prepared by the auditor general to prohibit the operation of fradulent diamond contracts and other tontine companies which operated so extensively in Michigan until that official raided them a few months ago. Another important measure which fell by the wayside after passing the house was the Dingley joint resolution providing for the submission to the people of a proposed constitutional amendment whereby a complete divorce between state and local taxation should be effected, leaving the state to raise its own revenues entirely independent of the localities. The only important amendment proposed to the constitution, and one which the people will vote upon at the next general election, is one authorizing legislation that will permit the imposing of indeterminate sentences upon convicts. This is in line with the best methods of handling convicts. Several years ago the legislature enacted an indeterminate sentence law which was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

Gov Bliss Puts in a Word or Two.

Since the business of the session was suspended Governor Bliss has been having his say about the bills submitted to him during the final days of the session, and as a result several have fallen outside the breastworks. Notable among these are the bills making an appropriation for an additional state normal school, the Lowry-Ward bill exempting real estate mortgages from taxation, and the measure proposing a change in the method of paying the expenses of caring for contagious diseases dangerous to the public health.

Veto of the Normal School.

The veto of the normal school bill was based on the belief that the state could well wait two years for another institution of this kind, although it would, of course, be very satisfactory if normal schools could be scattered about the state where they would be within easy reach of all the young people who wish to avail themselves of the privileges afforded by them. The fact was pointed out by the governor that the capacity of the three normal schools now in operation are far from being taxed, and that the present legislature has made provision for materially increasing their accommodations. In view of all this, the governor was convinced that there is no imperative need for another school.

Thought the Change Unwise.

Under the present law the county at large is made to stand the expense of suppressing contagious diseases, the theory being that the entire county is vitally interested in having the disease stamped out. The vetoed bill provided that the supervisors might assess this charge against the county at large or any division thereof, and the governor thought the change an unwise one. It will be readily seen that there was a possibility of saddling onto sections of the county much more than their just share of this expense, just as is done when it comes to equalizing valuations.

Most Important Measure Vetoed.

The most important measure vetoed, however, was the mortgage tax bill. The governor went into this matter quite exhaustively in his veto message. He cited the fact that the state tax commission is of the opinion that the change would result in dropping approximately $100,000,000, or one-twentieth of the taxable property of the state, from the tax rolls, and that the experience which followed the law of 1891 would be renewed—neither would the rate of interest be lowered, nor would the mortgagor escape paying the tax. The 1891 law was almost precisely similar to the Lowry-Ward bill, and it will be recalled that the workings of the former measure were so disastrous that the clamor for its repeal forced the Republicans to make its repeal a campaign issue, the contest being fought out on the pledge that the obnoxious law would be repealed. Further than this, it is declared by a number of the most accomplished lawyers in the state that the bill would wipe out, so far as taxation is concerned, the entire bonded mortgage indebtedness of railroads, and seriously interfere with, if not entirely subvert, the successful application of the new ad valorem tax law for railroad companies.

May Hear from It Again.

It is by no means certain that the people of the state have heard all they will from the present legislature, for it is quite probable that a special session will be convened in the early autumn. Governor Bliss is not at all pleased at the failure of the legislature to enact several important measures that he diligently urged during the session just closed, and he has about made up his mind to call the legislature together again for the purpose of acting on these bills. These include bills reducing railroad passenger fares in the upper peninsula, taxing sleeping car companies, increasing the tax of telegraph companies, prohibiting the sale of cigarettes, amendments to the inheritance tax law, which is now in such shape as to cause the state to lose taxes that would otherwise come into the state treasury, and needed amendments to the general tax law suggested by the state tax commission. He also wants the question of separating state and local taxes submitted to the people. Most of these measures passed the house, but were permitted to die in the senate.

Detroit, Mich., June 4.—The pay roll of the striking machinists shows over 350 men entitled to draw pay, either from the treasury of the international or from the local union. The money is expected from headquarters Wednesday. Only members who have been on the books of the union for several months can draw strike benefits, but the union pays out of its own treasury benefits to non-union men and apprentices who have gone out in sympathy, or have been discharged for refusing to run the machines of those on strike.

Due bills were being made out yesterday and the men were signing the pay roll to facilitate the disbursements when the money arrives. The number at work has not yet been closely determined, as there are many who have not appeared at headquarters. The officers say that at least 350 men are at work under the new scale in Detroit.

Toronto, June 4.—The annual convention of the International Association of Machinists opened here Monday. About 200 delegates were present.

In his annual address President O'Connell showed that during the past two years 197 charters were issued, with a membership of 7,404.

"A reduction in the hours of labor has been our hope since the association started," said O'Connell. "Up to May 1, the number of shops working less than ten hours per day was only 1,870. I am firmly convinced that our nine-hour movement will result in reducing the hours of labor for 150,000 machinists.

"Machinists employed in the railway service have been more than anxious to take part in the movement on May 20, but we have felt that many roads could not be sufficiently prepared by that date and have advised against such move taking place except in special cases. Very great progress has been made for the past three months by our organization with the railway machinists, and I recommend that a date be set for the inauguration of the nine-hour day for machinists employed in the railway service."

New York, June 4.—There was a partial resumption of work at the shops of the Crocker-Wheeler Electric company in Ampere, N. J., yesterday, the company having secured some non-union men to take the places of strikers. President Wheeler said that places would be found for any of the old hands who wished to return at the former rate of wages and hours of work.

There was a big crowd of strikers at the works today, but they made no attempt to interfere with any men that desired to pass into the works.

Washington, June 4.—Vice-President Gannon of the Southern Railroad said that so far as the road was concerned the strike incident was closed. He refused to say how many of the machinists had returned to work at the regular hour Monday morning in accordance with the ultimatum given them at all the shops, but said that the road was filling the places of all those who refused to resume work.

Newport News, Va., June 4.—The machinists in the employ of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company, to the number of 500, which virtually includes all the skilled mechanics in the machine department, went on strike, their demands for a shorter working day having been refused by Superintendent Post. The yard will continue in operation until the absence of the machinists shall interfere with the work in hand.

Chicago, June 4.—There will be no settlement of the machinists' strike in Chicago until after June 11. This was the decision of the local manufacturers yesterday when the members of the Chicago Association of Machinery Manufacturers pledged allegiance to the National Metal Trades' association and agreed not to enter into negotiations with any of their employes until after the great gathering of employers in New York city on June 11. While the manufacturers were discussing their future action the machinists were not idle, a number of machinists leaving three plants of the Crane company to join the strikers.

Statements differ as to the number of men who left the Crane plant. Assistant Business Agent Ireland of the machinists insisting that nearly 175 men quit work, while Secretary J. B. Murphy, for the company, said that not more than 16 or 17 men quit. Besides the men in the Crane plants 80 workmen struck in three other places while agreements, according to Mr. Ireland of the machinists, were signed with five firms whose names will be given out later.

Reception to American Visitors.

London, June 4.—The visiting delegates of New York chamber of commerce and Mr. Choate received a number of members of the London chamber of commerce last night at Claridge's hotel and conferred with them upon various topics. The lord mayor was present, as well as Lord Brassey, Mr. Albert G. Sandman and Sheriff Lawrence. The Americans have declined invitations to dinner extended by the Glasgow chamber of commerce and the American chamber of commerce in Paris.

U. S. Treasury Statement.

Washington, June 4.—The statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $163,138,370; gold, $94,667,631.

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals of the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. Dr. Blackford says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land.—Chicago Chronicle.

FIGHTING FUSILIERS.

English, French and German Soldiers in a Mixup.

Tien Tsin, June 4.—There was a serious affray Sunday between international troops. Some British Fusiliers who were acting as police here sought to prevent French soldiers from housebreaking, when they were attacked with bayonets and bricks.

The Fusiliers, in self defense, fired in the air. This brought a number of Germans to the aid of the Frenchmen. They numbered together 200 men.

Five Fusiliers fired again, killing a Frenchman and wounding three others.

In subsequent fighting four Fusiliers, five Germans and one Japanese were wounded. The arrival of a German officer and a strong guard ended the fray.

PAN-AM. EXPOSITION.

Better Weather Livens Things Up at the Big Fair.

Buffalo, June 4.—The distinctive feature at the exposition Monday was the general beginning of active operations in practically all the exhibits where power is used. The shoemakers, the government engravers and printers, the looms, lathes, engines and motors and other machinery and manufacturers started work.

The weather was a decided improvement over that of any day for a week, but it still remains cool. Three hundred nobles of the Mystic Shrine, members of Moslem Temple of Detroit, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon.

Today's feature will be the real opening of the stadium. The splendid carnival of athletics will begin at 2:30 in the great arena.

Senator Beveridge Abroad.

St. Petersburg, June 4.—United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana arrived here yesterday. He was met by Charlemagn Tower, the United States ambassador, Secretary Pierce and Consul General Holloway. The senator at once began an inquiry into Russian industrial and commercial conditions and had an interview with M. A. Rothstein, the banker. He expects to see many important personages, will remain here about a week and will then visit Moscow, the neighboring factory towns, the Volga valley and the iron works around Yekaterinenburg (in the Ural mining district). Later, Senator Beveridge will traverse Siberia. He believes America should and will have a splendid Russian trade. Jeremiah Curtin, former secretary of the United States embassy here, is revisiting friends. He says Sienkewicz's latest work dealing with John Sobieski, is progressing well. Sienkewicz will later begin a ten-volume series on Napoleon.

The Tariff Conference.

Berlin, June 4.—The tariff conference, which begins today in Berlin and at which the larger German states will be represented, will endeavor to reach a general understanding between the various governments of the empire as to the basis upon which the new commercial treaties must rest. Special attention will be given to the question how far Germany may increase agricultural duties without placing in jeopardy the projected long term treaties with leading countries, including the United States. As the delegates are accompanied by the department chiefs and secretaries, the deliberations of the conference are likely to be prolonged. Count von Buelow, the imperial chancellor, will preside.

BOODLE TESTIMONY

Two of the Promoters Now Before the Grand Jury

OFFICIALS GETTING ANXIOUS

Some Grand Rapids Politicians Appear Very Anxious About the Evidence of Witnesses Now Before the Grand Jury—Other State News.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 4.—The grand jury resumed its investigations with two witnesses on the string, whose presence in town made those suspected of being involved in the scandal decidedly nervous. These witnesses are E. H. Garman and R. A. Cameron, the eastern promoters who would have received the water contract had it gone through, and whose $100,000 promotion fund was divided among the local conspirators.

Cameron and Garman, in spite of every effort made by local boodlers to keep them away, arrived in town yesterday morning and were taken to the residence of their attorney, Mark Norris, where they held a prolonged conference with the prosecuting attorney.

Yesterday afternoon Cameron went before the grand jury and will continue his testimony today. Then Garman will be given a hearing. It is stated that Cameron's evidence gave the origin of the boodling scheme. He told who demanded the promotion fund, who received it and how it was distributed. He reinforced his verbal testimony with telegrams and letters and gave the jury a copy of the key to the cipher used in the negotiations. It is believed his testimony involves several city officials.

As soon as he heard of their arrival in town, Mayor Perry went to the police court and asked that warrants be issued for the arrest of Cameron and Garman on a charge of attempting to defraud the city by means of worthless checks. The two witnesses are under safe conduct from the prosecuting attorney and the mayor's application was denied.

She expects to marry him and secure her child kidnaped by her second husband, Ira Washington, of Tampa, Fla. Mrs. Castello says she will give a good sum to the new Kalamazoo hospital and to the sailors' hospital in San Francisco. Allen Cameron is an officer on the United States transport Wright.

A Ghastly Find.

Flint, Mich., June 4.—When Ida Jeffers, an employe of James Dodds, merchant tailor, went to work yesterday morning she was horrified to find the body of Hugh McPhee lying on the floor of the workroom with a deep gash over the right eye. McPhee opened the establishment at 6:30 as usual, and had begun sweeping. He was evidently stricken with an attack of heart failure, to which he was subject, and in falling struck the stove, cutting the gash and inflicting minor bruises. He was about 45 years old and married.

RETIRED FOR EIGHT YEARS.

Paroled Convict Who Couldn't Behave Sent Back.

Lansing, Mich., June 4.—Gov. Bliss has issued his warrant for the return to Jackson prison of Louis F. Arno, who was sent to state prison for life for debauching Pearl Butler, but whose sentence was last December commuted to 15 years by Gov. Pingree, who subsequently paroled the convict. Arno is now under arrest in Detroit for embezzlement.

In view of the fact that immediately after his release from prison, Arno married the Butler girl without securing a divorce from his wife, it is interesting to note that the reasons cited by Gov. Pingree for giving him his liberty were that the best interests of society would be subserved by permitting him to support his wife and two children, who were being cared for by the Detroit poor commission.

Arno will have eight years to serve under his commuted sentence.

CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK.

A Youth and His Companion Rob an Old Woman.

Adrian, Mich., June 4.—It will be remembered that Mrs. Ruth Ayers, aged 82, of Springville, was bound, gagged and robbed one night last April, and that Charles E. Jessup, her son-in-law, is in jail here awaiting trial for the deed. She was here last Wednesday to give testimony in the justice court, and while in the city her house was robbed again. This time by the young son of Charles E. Jessup. The boy is 13 years old, and he worked up a scheme with a younger boy, son of Mrs. Miller, who is another daughter of Mrs. Ayers, and they entered the house, robbing it of about $300 in gold and greenbacks. The theft was detected by Charles Desermia, who conducts a general store at Springville. Young Jessup passed a $5 gold piece on him, and he became suspicious. Afterwards he got hold of the Miller boy, and after some questioning the boys confessed the whole business. The money was found in two different places on the premises, where it had been buried. Nearly all of the money has been recovered, except a two dollar and a half gold piece, which was passed at Onsted. A $10 greenback was also found torn to pieces and flying around in the wind in the road on Sunday. Nothing has been done with the boys on account of their youth.

Charles E. Jessup, who was accused of robbing the Ayers woman, was arraigned for the second time in circuit court. He pleaded not guilty. It is thought his trial will commence one week from Wednesday.

Died from His Wounds.

Cassopolis, Mich., June 4.—Nick Conner, colored, aged 35, who shot his wife and himself Sunday, is dead. His wife had left him, and he had made threats against her life. Meeting her on the street, he commenced firing at her at short range. The third shot penetrated her lungs, inflicting a serious wound, but it is thought she will recover. After shooting his wife Conner turned the weapon on himself, putting one bullet in his breast and another in his forehead. Conner claimed that another colored man had been the cause of his wife leaving him.

Fire With Serious Results.

Cumberland, Md., June 4.—Thomas Burger & Son's sash and door factory, together with their immense lumber yards, were destroyed by fire last night. The loss is about $50,000; partially covered by insurance. The fire started in the boiler room. Two dwellings adjoining were partially destroyed, one of the occupants, Mrs. Jacob Gogley, an aged woman, being overcome by smoke, and was carried out for dead. She will hardly recover from the shock. Jack Hodel, a volunteer fireman, was blown from the building by exploding oil and badly scalded.

The minister brought with him to America Messrs. Ye and Min, two young noblemen of high rank, who will sojourn for a while in the United States.

Killed an Actress.

Chicago, June 4.—Edward Forshay of Kansas City, an actor, last night shot and killed Miss Edna Stokes, an actress whose home is at Sedalia, Mo., with whom he was deeply in love. Forshay evidently intended to take his life after killing the woman, for upon his person when he was arrested were letters bidding farewell to his mother and another Chief of Police O'Neill of this city.

RAY'S RECRUIT
BY
CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.
AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"Try it from that side," said Ray, and over she popped, light as a bird. A third and a fourth time was the leap repeated, Stella enjoying being the center of attraction and improving on her efforts. Then came the attempt at the wider hurdle, a man being stationed at each end to give her the idea of posts between which she must jump. This, too, proved a bagatelle. And all this time Hunter had never opened his lips to speak. Now, in obedience to the captain's signal, the trooper reined up close to him.

"What do you think of her jumping?" asked Ray.

"She has been well taught, sir," was the answer, in low, quiet tone. "I think she will give Mrs. Ray little trouble, but she has never been ridden with the sidesaddle and skirt, I understand."

No, she had not. Hogan produced the sidesaddle and a cavalry blanket. In two minutes the mare was housed in the one and Hunter rolled, as to his legs, in the other. This time mounting was not so easy. Stella despised that blanket and would not suffer it to come near her, and that blanket was to be tried in lieu of a riding skirt. Mainwaring sat on his horse, shouting all manner of suggestions, sorely trying Ray's sense of subordination. At last, impatiently, he hazarded the remark, "Phoo, Ray, that man can't ride. There's a dozen men in my old troop would have had her over the hurdle, blanket and all, by this time."

The blood rushed to Hunter's face, and he bit his lip hard. Thus far Ray had been holding the mare's head by the bit—a hub, so to speak, about which she circled, first one way, then the other, to dodge the blanket swathed form. Now the trooper was heard to speak.

"Pardon me, captain, but may I take her myself?"

Instantly the two ladies exchanged a glance. "I told you he looked like a gentleman," said Mrs. Ray, in low tone.

Then began a very pretty piece of coaxing. With one firm hand at the bit, the blanket still strapped about his waist, Trooper Hunter had managed to reach Stella's neck with his right hand, and, patting her softly, was murmuring gently. "Makin love to her in Irish," Hogan muttered to Duffy. Several additions had been made to the group by this time. The colonel, Dana by his side and followed by his orderly, came riding around from the direction of the stables and, doffing his cap to the ladies, sat in saddle, an interested spectator. Several wives and children of the soldiers had been attracted from their quarters to the fence, while a little farther back, aloof from the general run of Sudstown people, with a pale blue shawl, one of Mrs. Freeman's discarded evening wraps over her head, pretty Mrs. Merriweather stood to gaze.

Hunter slowly lifted an edge of the blanket and let Stella nose it, which she did, feigned to be much frightened and attempted again to pull away. But at last, wearying of fruitless efforts, she consented to smell of it and then nudged it disdainfully aside. The next thing she knew Hunter had slipped both hands back, one to the pommel, the other to her mane, and with agile spring alighted on the saddle, threw the right leg over the horn, and, despite her plunging, Stella found herself once more under his weight, firmly held as ever. Five minutes' petting made her forget her burden, even when shown the shadow of the skirt. In less than ten she had leaped the hurdle to and fro half a dozen times and was realizing she had made a fool of herself. And then some unhallowed inspiration seized the major.

"What I want is to see how she'll behave under a cavalry saddle. You've ridden one often enough, I suppose?" he said, scowling at Hunter.

"Never until I came here, sir."

"Mean to tell me you've never been in the cavalry?"

"I told the major as much a fortnight ago," was the firm yet respectful reply.

"Well, where'd you learn to ride, then?" asked Mainwaring, who had a fixed idea that no one not of the cavalry could be at home in the saddle—this, too, despite long years among vaqueros, Comanches and cowboys.

"I learned to ride as a boy, sir."

"Well, dismount and put on that McClellan saddle," said Mainwaring curtly.

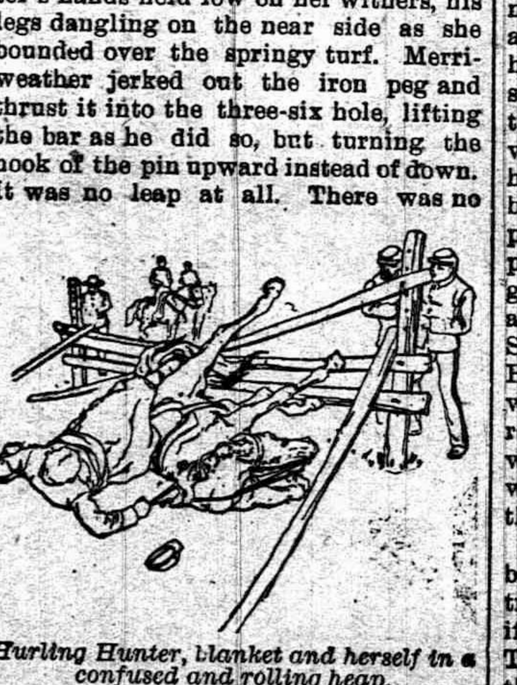
Atherton heard the order, saw the quick glance of the soldier toward his captain and the half vexed expression in Ray's face, and, glancing at Mrs. Ray, hesitated no longer.

"No, no, major, don't change the saddle. Let us see how she'll take the bar again. Set it loosely, you men, so that it will slide off the pegs if she strikes."

Sergeant Merriweather was busily setting the peg at three feet again, when, glancing up to see that the opposite end was at the same notch, he caught sight of the slender figure of his wife standing well back of the group at the fence, her eyes fixed, not on him or on the ladies, but with deep, intense interest in her gaze, upon the tall, erect young soldier on the spirited mare. Up to this moment Merriweather had been silently carrying out his instructions, all his attention given to them or to Stella. Of the man in saddle he took apparently no notice whatever. Now, forgetting everything else in hand, he stood there, half bent over, gazing, with heaven only knows what thoughts surging through his brain, straight and steadfast at his unconscious wife.

"Sergeant, don't you hear?" At last the impatient words seemed to reach him, and the flustered face of his comrade at the opposite post recalled him to himself. "The captain says set it at 3 feet 6. Quick! She's coming."

Coming she was, with a rush, Hunter's hands held low on her withers, his legs dangling on the near side as she bounded over the springy turf. Merriweather jerked out the iron peg and thrust it into the three-six hole, lifting the bar as he did so, but turning the hook of the pin upward instead of down. It was no leap at all. There was no reason why she should strike, no reason why, if she did strike, any harm would occur. But it was all done in a second of time. Sitting sideways, instead of astride, Hunter was at a disadvantage. He could not "lift her" as he was accustomed. The excited creature dashed at the bar as though reckless of its added height; the off fore foot struck the tough, unyielding wood, tripped her, threw her headlong on the turf, hurling Hunter, blanket and herself in a confused and rolling heap. A woman's shriek went up at the instant, but it came not from the lips of the women on the field.



Hurling Hunter, blanket and herself in a confused and rolling heap.

It seemed but another instant before Hunter was on his feet, reins in hand, while Stella was struggling to rise. Forgetful of himself, he sought to see if the mare were harmed. Ray and Hogan sprang to his side. "Are you hurt, man?" they eagerly asked, but he laughed it off.

"Not at all, sir. I'm only troubled about her."

Panting, wide eyed and startled, Stella stood, with heaving flanks, wondering what it all meant. Ray hastened to reassure his wife. Atherton rode up to satisfy himself the soldier was uninjured. Over beyond the roadway and fence two of the laundresses were leading Mrs. Merriweather, shocked and actually weeping, away. At them the sergeant stood gazing fixedly, his discolored face working with passion, and Captain Blake had twice to bid him pick up the bar before he answered and obeyed.

"That's what you call a stand off, I suppose," muttered the man at the opposite post as Merriweather brushed him by. "Don't tell me I don't know who floored you." But the sergeant never heard. He was hastening after his wife.

"Ray," said the colonel as they were riding into the garrison a few minutes later, "that was a piece of gross carelessness on the part of your sergeant. That man has been getting less reliable every month for the last two years. You'd better think twice should he apply for re-enlistment."

"Gerald," said clear sighted Mrs. Blake, as she clung to the arm of the captain, after leaving Mrs. Ray at her gate, "I'm glad that didn't happen in your troop. Are you sure Sergeant Merriweather set that pin properly? Wasn't it his wife that shrieked?"

"Pet," said Mrs. Mainwaring to her niece just as the young doctor lifted his cap and looked for an invitation to enter as he met the two ladies returning from a call at the Rays' an hour later, "you and Dr. Jayne came near getting another patient this afternoon, and a most interesting one, they say, a mysterious swell in the sorrels. He might serve to make you forget the handsome unknown who played doctor for you the night of the collision. She hasn't told you about that, I suppose, has she, doctor?"

"M—ah, no, no, indeed," said Dr. Jayne in evident dismay. "What was he like, pray?"

"Oh, divinely tall and most divinely fair," said Mrs. Mainwaring, laughing. "Kate has his flask and handkerchief yet, waiting for him to return and claim them—and her."

And that evening Miss Leroy wondered whether aunts were always so disagreeable or whether this was merely her own fault, and entirely her fault, because she had admitted that, though there were agreeable men in the regiment, they were all married.

CHAPTER IX.

Conway, convalescing, had been bundled back to town, leaving blessings on the head of his fair nurse and reader. Corporal Shannon, kicked by a mule in the quartermaster's corral, was installed in his place. The daily reading was going on in the hospital despite social duties that grew more exacting as Miss Leroy became better known and more appreciated. Over in the sorrel troop's quarters Hunter, despite inflexible reserve as to his past, had won the good will of most of the men. Quin, a garrison bully, pitching upon a smaller comrade for a fancied affront, had been himself pitched into a snowdrift and when he rushed at his antagonist was floored flat by as neat a swing on the jaw as ever the —th had heard of. It was a new blow, in fact, to the regiment, and the story went from barrack to barrack that the sorrels had got a swell boxer as well as rider. Curiosity as to Hunter's antecedents burst all bounds. Major Mainwaring's assertion that he had seen the fellow somewhere before and knew he must be a deserter was sufficient to make the recruit an object of interest in garrison society, even if he had not won distinction as trainer of Mrs. Ray's beautiful mare, whose delicate mouth and eastern schooling made her somewhat too sensitive for ordinary cavalry handling.

Ray, once the light rider of the regiment, could have coached her beautifully, but Ray was growing bulky with years, and an old bullet wound in the thigh received during a Sioux campaign years before was troubling him as winter wore on. What no one understood was how Ray came to select Hunter, for Ray declared he had no previous knowledge of him whatever, which was true. Truscott, when appealed to for his opinion, smiled gravely, as was his wont, and said Ray had as unerring an eye for a horseman as he had for a horse. But it was in Sudstown, where dwelt the wives and daughters of the soldiery, that Trooper Hunter's goings and comings, doings and sayings, were becoming matters of such absorbing interest. He was credited with being fabulously wealthy, among other things, for he certainly had money at his command. He also had friends and acquaintances—some said a wife and family, or at least a ladylove—somewhere in town, for he had twice asked for passes, and more than once was believed to have gone thither without that formality. Mrs. Merriweather, who held her head so high above the other women, was accused of "setting her cap" for the stranger, and she laid herself open to calumny by declaring to one or two envious dames that Mr. Hunter was a frequent caller, only Dan didn't like it and had warned him off. "Indeed, he got to coming too often for his own good," said she, which meant worlds of helpless regret on her part.

Men sought the confidence of the new soldier, but gave it up in ignorance as deep as that with which they came to him. Some he laughed at, some he snubbed, none he gratified. It was fortunate he knew how to fight, for there were evil spirits that would have mauled him otherwise on general principles, but Ray kept a sharp lookout for his protege. He at least should have fair play, despite the hints of the first sergeant that Conway could tell something about him, and had even asked him, Sergeant Fellows, where he could find Hunter the night he came out with a warrant and was knifed by Healy. Ray rode to town and demanded of Conway what he knew or suspected, and Conway said, "Nothing, at least nothing that I could prove."

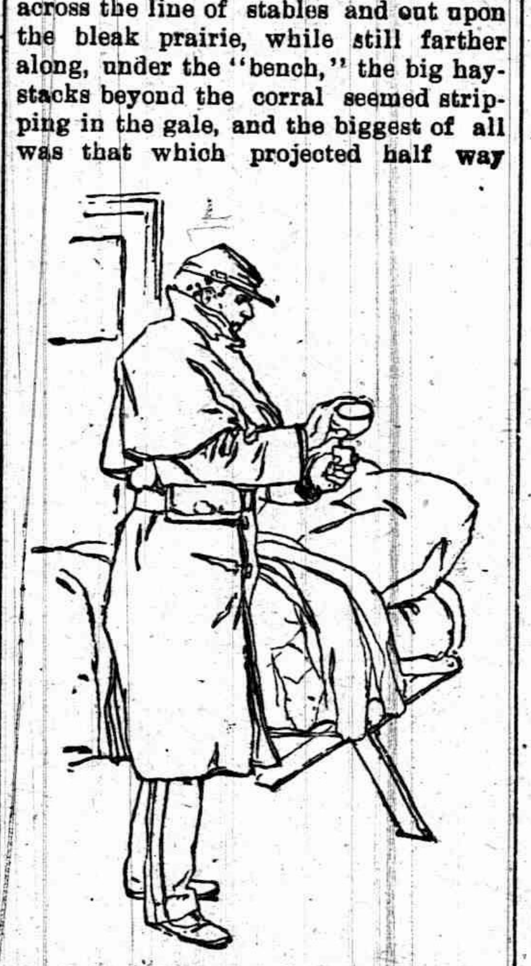
Ray had flouted the idea of Hunter's being connected in any way with the train robbers—indeed, it was doubtful if the leaders would ever be caught. They were lost to all search, deep in the hills, and their luckless accomplices were still held awaiting the action of some federal official yet to arrive. Stannard and Mainwaring had had almost an open rupture all on account of Hunter, who, daily exercising and training Mrs. Ray's pretty Stella, was, nevertheless, performing all other duties with his troop. Mainwaring, noting how successful Hunter had been with Stella, concluded that he should like to have him try his hand on Velvet, Mrs. Mainwaring's saddler, who had never been known to jump, and was confounded when the trooper most respectfully but positively begged to be excused. Atherton was away, summoned to meet the department commander at Pawnee. Stannard was in temporary command. Mainwaring asked that the trooper should be directed to perform duty for him, for which he was perfectly willing to pay, or else be ordered to cease doing it for Ray. Stannard said no soldier could be compelled to perform menial service for any officer if he didn't wish to, and if he did not wish to train Mrs. Mainwaring's horse he should not be made to. Mainwaring declared training horses could not be menial service in the eyes of a true cavalryman, and Stannard said that it was if a man thought so. Mainwaring got very wroth and swore that between them, Stannard and Blake and Ray, they were bound to spoil a man who gave promise of being a good soldier, despite his shadowy antecedents, and again demanded that he be ordered to cease handling Stella for Ray. Stannard said he only did it for the love of the thing, for practice and recreation and not for emolument, and he should not be denied. Then Atherton came back; Mainwaring appealed to him from Stannard's decision, and Atherton said he'd investigate and decide next morning.

But it was decided for him that night.

"Ray," said he at evening stables, "whoever set that huge haystack so close to the stables had no idea of prudence. If it were to catch fire, your premises would go. I shall order it removed tomorrow."

Sergeant Merriweather, stable sergeant of the troop up to a week before, heard these words, and so did Sergeant Conro, to whom he was pointing out certain defects in the mechanism of a grain shoot from the loft above their heads. It was storming, and grooming was being conducted inside. Merriweather stopped short in his explanation, stared at the colonel as though the words had dazed him in some way, and then had to be reminded of the subject which he was discussing.

The wind that had banked the snow clouds in the southeast during the day veered toward nightfall and blew strong from the southwest. At tattoo it was whisking the hay from the quartermaster's corral and sending it streaming across the line of stables and out upon the bleak prairie, while still farther along, under the "bench," the big haystacks beyond the corral seemed stripping in the gale, and the biggest of all was that which projected half way across the open space in front of the line of gable ends and just opposite that of Ray's troop. At tattoo the gale was almost a blizzard, and Atherton, ever on the defensive against fires, bade the troop officers look well to their company kitchens and see that all the ranges and stoves were securely banked, then went over to the guardhouse in person and held brief consultation with Blake, who was officer of the day, and his officer of the guard, who, as ill luck would have it, was Lieutenant Brady, at whom Atherton looked with scant favor. He was a young man whom Blake described as "one of the detriments of the service." He had been fairly well educated somewhere, had enlisted when it was too evident he was in no condition to make a living otherwise, but that was in the summer of 1876, when 2,500 men were suddenly raised by congress to fill the gaps in the regiments engaged in the Sioux war and the riffraff of the Atlantic cities was rushed to the frontier.



Brady had taken a stiffer brace for fear of consequences.

Will-o'-the-Wisp Salvation.

A well known rector of an east end church was approached one day by a lady who said she desired to rent a seat in a row nearest the door of his church. The rector responded that the seats in that row were all free and that she was at liberty to occupy any one of them, but she persisted, saying that she desired to have it for her own.

Being somewhat curious as to her reasons, the clerical gentleman said; "But, madam, tell me why you wish to sit so far back?"

After some hesitancy she responded that she simply couldn't bear to have any one "sit behind her."

"Yet you will be sitting behind others, who perhaps feel the same way," said the rector laughingly.

"That may be," replied the devout lady earnestly, "but you know I have such a wretched little wisp of hair at the back of my head that it would certainly interfere with my devotions if I knew any one was looking at it."—London Tit-Bits.

Business Is Business.

He had obtained a place in a real estate office and was doing everything he could for the interests of his employers. The other evening he was at a social gathering and was asked to sing. He responded with "Home, Sweet Home." His friends were a little surprised at the selection, but he was heartily applauded. Stepping forward, he said: "I am glad you liked the song. There is nothing like 'Home, Sweet Home,' and let me say that the company I represent is selling homes on terms to suit within 12 minutes' ride of the city. Everybody ought to have a home. If you don't want to live there, it's the chance of your life for an investment."—Exchange.

The Tammany Tiger.

The origin of the tiger as an emblem of Tammany is said to date from the time when William M. Tweed, then foreman of "Big Six" Fire company, took a fancy to a picture of a royal Bengal tiger in the fifties. Tweed adopted the emblem for the Americus club, and it soon was accepted by all Tammany.

A PERSEVERING MONKEY.

Professor Garner's Story of Nellie and the Matchbox.

Monkeys are always happy if they have plenty to eat and something to play with. Professor R. L. Garner, in his "Apes and Monkeys," says that he recalls no investment which ever yielded a greater return in pleasure than a certain little pocket match safe, which cost 25 cents. He gave it to a little monkey, Nellie by name, after putting into it a small key to make it rattle and some bits of candy.

She rattled the box and found much pleasure in the noise. I showed her how to press the spring in order to open the box, but her little black fingers were not strong enough to release the spring.

However, she caught the idea and knew that the spring was the secret which held the box closed. When she found that she could not open it with her fingers, she tried it with her teeth. Failing in this, she turned to the wall, and, standing upright on the top of her cage, she took the box in both hands and struck the spring against the wall until the lid flew open.

She was perfectly delighted at the result, and for the hundredth time at least I closed the box for her to open it again.

The next time Nellie received the match safe she was in her cage, and through its meshes she could not reach the wall. She had nothing against which to strike the spring to force it open.

After looking around and striking the box several times against the wires of the cage, she discovered a block of wood about six inches square. She took this and mounted her perch. Balancing the block on the perch, she held it with the left foot, while with the right foot she clung to the perch. With her tail wound around the meshes of the cage to steady herself, she carefully adjusted the matchbox in such a manner as to protect her fingers from the blow. Then she struck the spring against the block of wood, and the lid flew open.

She fairly screamed with delight as she held up the box.

CAME IN TO BE HANGED.

A Story Told of Abel Erasmus, the Boer, and Lord Wolseley.

A good story is told of the old Boer, Abel Erasmus, and Lord Wolseley, then Sir Garnet Wolseley, in connection with the part Erasmus took in Wolseley's campaign in 1879 against Sekukuni, the chief of the Bapedis, on the borders of Swaziland. After the capture of Sekukuni he was immediately brought before Sir Garnet Wolseley, who asked him how he, a miserable Kaffir, living in a cave, dared to defy the great queen of England. The chief replied that he had been instigated to do so by Abel Erasmus.

Sir Garnet in describing the scene at a public dinner given to him at Pretoria on his return from the campaign said that he wished there and then to let Abel Erasmus know that if ever he found that Erasmus had been inciting any chief to levy war against England and he was able to lay hands on him Abel Erasmus would hang as high as Haman.

A few days after the dinner Sir Henry Brackenbury, Sir Garnet's military secretary, was sitting in his office when a tall, bearded Boer entered and asked permission to speak with him.

"I am Abel Erasmus," he said, "and I have very important business to do here."

He explained that he had come to see Sir Garnet Wolseley, for he had heard that Sir Garnet had said that if he could lay hold of him he would hang him, and so he had come to be hanged. Sir Garnet was in the next room, and Sir Henry Brackenbury thought it would be advisable to consult him on the subject. Sir Garnet, however, happened to be too busy at the moment to see anybody, and Sir Henry after reflection persuaded his angry visitor to take his leave and allow the hanging to stand over for the time.

An Aldermanic Bull.

Some time ago a follower of one of the city aldermen cast covetous glances upon a desirable newsstand under the elevated railroad stairs. Straight he went to his friend, the alderman, and made known his wishes, which were that the news dealer should be evicted from the locality.

"All right, me boy; leave it to me," said the city father and began to pull wires. Finally he got an order directing the newsdealer to show cause why he should not get out, but that obstinate individual still remained. Then he drew up a formal complaint, which was duly laid before one of the judges. The complaint, after telling how the newsdealer had been ordered to leave and had not done so, concludes:

"And now we have to complain, your honor, that not only is this same stand still there, but the defendant has replaced it by a bigger one."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Found the House.

The late Sir Frederick Gore-Ouseley, professor of music at Oxford, was once going to call on a friend in London and asked a fellow musician the number in which he lived in a certain street.

"I don't know his number," answered the other, "but the note of his door scraper is C sharp."

Sir Frederick went off, contentedly kicking the door scrapers all down the street until he came to the right one, when he rang the bell and went in.—London Standard.

CAR OF SAND.

Had Just Passed his Examination for Mail Clerk and Intended to Leave the Employ of the Lima Northern that Night.

Last Saturday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock, while they were preparing to unload a car of sand at the car shops, in some way the jacks on which it was resting, slipped, and the car fell, killing Robert McClure, crushing the life almost instantly from his body. Dr. North was summoned immediately, but Mr. McClure died just as the doctor reached his side. He was taken immediately to Undertaker Tansley's where an inquest was held Sunday. It was decided that no one was to blame. Mr. McClure had expected to leave the employ of the Lima Northern that night, having passed his second examination for mail clerk. His last words to his wife on leaving home were, "Well, in four hours I will be out of the car shops," but little did he think in what manner.

Mr. McClure, who was 28 years old, leaves a wife, formerly Miss Lucy Middlebrook, of Clinton, and one son, a little boy of four years. He was a young man of exemplary habits and has lived here all his life. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McClure, and beside his parents he leaves two sisters, Misses Jennie and Nina, and a brother, Sam who came home from Lansing, where he is attending college, Sunday night.

Robert was a member of Co. C who conducted the funeral this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of his parents, Rev. W. F. Jones officiating. A sextette composed of the following furnished the music: Harry Tansley, Ben Pulver, Levi Hayden, Will Dickinson, Arthur Harding, Clarence Jackson.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Samuel Hunt has been elected president of the Detroit Southern. This action, which was anticipated, was taken at a meeting of the directors in Detroit Monday. Besides the election of a president, only a temporary organization was effected. According to the current reports at Detroit the new board of directors will represent some of the strongest financial interests in Detroit and New York. Among those who will be on the board will be Jas. F. Joy, Senator James McMillen and Don Dickenson, all of Detroit. These gentlemen are not only to be directors, but will become heavily interested in the property. It is claimed they are going to use the property to help free the city from the domination of the Vanderbilts. It is claimed the Detroit syndicate will be in a position to give the road better terminals and make it a stronger line out of Detroit. The stockholders will meet again in the near future to elect a permanent board of directors and officers.—Toledo Blade.

Clarinda Walker.

Miss Clarinda Walker was born in Lebanon, Madison county, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1824, and died in Jackson, Mich., June 1, 1901, of disease of the heart.

"Aunt Crinnie," as she was known by all her acquaintances, has lived for many years in and around Tecumseh. For many years she was at Newburg with her sister, Mrs. Clark, then at Tecumseh with the same sister and afterward at Brooklyn with her brother Scovel. Aunt Crinnie's life has been spent in loving care for others, always generous, always cheerful, always kind, never thinking of herself but of those around her, a life filled with goodness and love and care for all save herself. She died as she lived, peaceful and contented. Her last days were made happy by Scovel Walker and his mother with whom she lived.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. S. Louisa Haight, at the Universalist church, Tecumseh, Monday afternoon and she was buried in her own lot at Brookside cemetery.

She leaves deeply to mourn two sisters, Mrs. C. A. Stacy, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Loana Houghton, of Humbird, Wisconsin, besides numbers of nephews and nieces.

Those present at the funeral away from Tecumseh were Mrs. S. J. Walker, S. S. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Codor, of Jackson; Mrs. Byron Carlton and Mrs. Nichols, of Adrian; and Miss Dot. Wooden, of Battle Creek.

Robbed Again.

While Mrs. Ruth Ayers, of Springville was attending the trial of Chas. Jessup at Adrian last Wednesday, her house was entered by her two grandsons, Fred Jessup, 13 years old, and a boy by the name of Miller, a son of a daughter of Mrs. Ayres. They secured $300 in gold and greenbacks and buried most of it. They were detected by Chas. Desermia, who keeps a general store there and he made them confess. The money was found buried on the Ayres farm. On account of their ages, nothing will be done with them by the officers.

At the Great Fair in Russia.

Americans with a nice sense of smell find the characteristic odor of the fair at Nijni Novgorod, Russia, rather harassing to their nostrils. One visitor from Yankeeland described it as a mingled odor of boots, cart-grease, Russia leather, harness, sweat and stale incense—rather a trying combination of scents. Despite this mixture of perfumes the fair-grounds are healthy, thanks to the wise provision of an elaborate system of sewers flushed by steam pumps every night.—Francis J. Ziegler, in June "New" Lippincott.

FROM DUTCH GUIANA

Her Many Friends will be Delighted to Read Another Letter from

MRS. LUCY HAIGHT-COLP.

Through the Kindness of Mr. Ed. Russell we are Allowed to Print the Following Fine Letter.

Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, S. A.
April 7th, 1901.

DEAR UNCLE EDWARD:

It is nearly three months since we reached Surinam (the Dutch name for Dutch Guiana) and I know you have been wishing to hear something about our new home. The weather has been very warm and the indolence of the country is really catching. Somehow the days, the weeks and the months are going and I feel almost as though I were standing still, while time is passing and leaving me motionless.

Paramaribo, the seaport and only town of any importance in Dutch Guiana, has about 30,000 inhabitants, a mixture of white, black and brown. The people are very hospital, lazy and stupid; perhaps we would be the same under similar conditions. The colony is not self-supporting, depending upon the mother country, Holland. Very few of the people have ever been away from here. The city is lighted in the old, old way, by street lamps. There are no sidewalks nor even paths. Everyone walks in the middle of the road.

Fancy, if you can, never having seen a steam locomotive, street car, electric lights, nor even a cook stove. Is it any wonder that one is reminded of the frog that lived in the well and thought the stories a friend from the ocean told him, could not be true; surely there was nothing worth knowing in the world that could not be found in his well. The people are at least one hundred years behind the times. However in one respect they are quite up to date, the price a foreigner is charged for anything.

Mr. Colp came to the mine soon after arriving at Paramaribo, but I remained in town until a few weeks ago when he returned and brought me back to the mine with him. Congratulate me on having made a favorable impression at least on one family who have named a wee baby girl for me.

We are a two days' journey from the seaport. Starting early one morning in a steamboat, we spent the day on the Surinam river. At night we camped in a little negro village; the following day came twelve miles over a very bad trail, a trail over which everyone who has ever come here has walked, with the exception of your humble servant. I made the journey in a rocking chair which was placed on two long poles, the four ends of said poles resting on the heads of negroes. I played that I was a lady of high degree in the Orient, being carried by my slaves. In fact I never felt so elevated in my life. At the end of the trail we were met by a horse and carriage (incidentally by a driver also) and came then six miles over a very fine road.

As in Central America, our house is principally porch. From the house to the assay office, two hundred feet away, is a broad white gravel walk on either side of which is a row of pineapple plants, while all around the house are banana trees. There are also lemon, mango and pepaja trees, giving the place quite the appearance of a plantation as a fruit farm here is called. Of course I am the only woman here, but have become so accustomed to an isolated life that I find I am "never less alone than when alone."

What we would call a forest or woods is called "the bush." Living in it there is a distinct type of black people, called the bush negro. At one time they were slaves in the colony, but becoming tired of the yoke of slavery they freed themselves, fled to the bush (woods) where they chose their chief, made their own laws, and to this day they remain a free and distinct race. They are very black, wear almost no clothing and those of rank have the faces, necks and arms tatooed. The black people throughout the colony have a language heard in no other part of the world. It is a mixture of all languages and is called "talky-talk."

There are some funny little creatures around here that look very much like toads. They make a noise which is a great deal bigger than they are and sounds quite like the bleating of lambs. We laughed so the first evening we heard it, Mr. Colp saying I had forgotten to feed the sheep and they were reminding me that they were hungry. Sometimes when the baboons are chattering, the parrots and other shrill-voiced birds screaming, you would think you were at the animal fair. Every morning we are awakened by the noises of birds and beasts.

With regards to all friends.

Your niece,
LUCY HAIGHT-COLP.

His Hair Stood on End.

"Up to five years ago," said a prospector to a St. Louis Republic reporter, "I didn't believe in such a thing as a man's hair standing on end." And then the old gentleman told the story of the fright that led him to change his mind:

"I was in the mountains of Idaho with a friend, and we ran short of fresh meat, so one day I took my gun and started off alone. I went into a ravine and was making my way along a little brook when I came suddenly upon a queer sight. Not four feet in front of me, in the full blaze of the sun, lay four mountain lions asleep.

"For half a minute I thought them dead, but as I stood staring at them, with my heart in my mouth, every one of them sprank up with a growl. And they faced around at me, looking ugly, sniffing the air, with their whiskers drawn back, showing the white line of their teeth, switching their tails and looking like demons.

"As for me, I stood rooted to the spot. I couldn't move from sheer fright. A queer, numb sensation began in my ankles and crept up my body, and I literally felt my hair rise.

"I stood there motionless for several minutes. Then one of the beasts dropped his tail and whined. The others followed his example. My presence mystified them. A few seconds later they turned about and crept away down the ravine, looking back stealthily two or three times to see me.

"When they were out of sight, I began to breathe again. I didn't care to hunt any more that day and made for the camp at top speed. That was the time my hair stood on end, and my scalp was sore to the touch for a week afterward."

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Sidney Lee, who jumped into fame with his "Life of Shakespeare," contributes an article on "Shakespeare and Patriotism" to the June number of The Critic.

* * *

Ex-President Cleveland contributed to the Saturday Evening Post of June 1 an able paper on The Waste of Public Money. In this article Mr. Cleveland sounds a warning note against National extravagance and the criminally reckless expenditure of public money.

* * *

H. W. Horwill treats The Opportunity of the Small College, which, he maintains, consists of power to give a better training on fewer subjects, with stronger social advantages and much more consequent benefit to the student than the great miscellaneous universities can possibly give.—June Atlantic Monthly.

* * *

Apropos of the interest in all matters electrical, stimulated by the Pan-American Exposition, Mr. William C. Andrews contributes to the Review of Reviews for June an account of "How Niagara has been Harnessed"—the complete story of the engineering triumph which has brought about, within the past decade, the utilization of waste energy in the form of electric power development at the Falls.

The Century for June is a College number, the opening paper, by Miss Alice Fallows, being an exposition of the delights and difficulties of "Working One's Way Through College," and the two closing "body" articles being devoted to a consideration of "Alleged Luxury Among College Students," the writers—President Hadley of Yale and Provost Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania—agreeing that there is little to excite alarm in present conditions at least in the institutions over which they respectfully preside.

The June magazine number of The Outlook, which is its annual recreation number, contains an article of extreme value by Philip W. Ayres, on "The Forester and His Work." Mr. Ayres tells of the life of the forest, its importance to mankind, and the tracks of forest land that have already been reserved and it is hoped will be reserved, by the Government. The article is illustrated by photographs of trees, woodland and forest of the West and South. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.)

Unpaid Accounts Drove a Woman To Suicide.

Not so very long ago a woman threw herself before a New York elevated train, and was instantly killed. Her sister testified afterward that she was a "fashionable" dressmaker, and had over $15,000 worth of outstanding accounts which she could not collect. The people from whom she bought her goods were persistently asking for their money but she could not pay them because her customers did not pay her for her work. It so preyed upon her mind that after weeks of sleepless nights she determined to kill herself. And she did.—June Ladies' Home Journal.

Roofs and Chimneys.

There is no doubt but the form of a roof has much to do with the draft of a chimney. The flat roof offers no resistance to the passage of air, but as the pitch is increased the current is more and more disturbed until with a high pitched and many gabled roof it is broken into innumerable eddies, some of which are sure to curl down and force the smoke and gases in the flue into the rooms below. Chimneys on such roofs should be built higher than ordinary.

Bunching the Hits.

Case and Comment tells a story of an Illinois attorney who argued to the court one after another of a series of very weak points, none of which seemed to the court to have any merit until the court finally said, "Mr. —, do you think there is anything in these points?" To which the attorney replied, "Well, judge, perhaps there isn't much in any one of them alone, but I didn't know but your honor would kind of bunch them."

Touched a Sore Spot.

"Do you find it difficult, senator," she asked, "to keep in touch with your constituents?"

"I beg your pardon, ma'am," he replied, with a scared look, "but really I must ask you not to use that expression with reference to my affairs. Touch is a word that I can't stand since the papers used it in explaining why I voted for that street railroad bill four years ago."—Chicago Herald.

IN OLDEN TIMES

Many Things were Different Now-a-days the Public Profit by Experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a headache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III. of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, every time you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over, you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

Sensible Conclusion.

Two doctors once had a disagreement—as the best of doctors sometimes will have—and lost their tempers.

"I hesitate to say just what I think of you," angrily exclaimed one of the two, "for you have not many years to live! Consumption has marked you for a victim."

"Oh, it has, has it? How do you know?"

"By the 'clubbing' of your fingers," referring to the wasting away of the fingers near where they join the hands. "Do I need to call your attention to that?"

"Perhaps not," retorted the other. "But do you know you bear the unmistakable indication of an early death yourself?"

"Where, sir?"

"In those hollows at the back of your neck near the head, where you can't see them. They denote a fatal lack of vitality."

"In that case," rejoined the one who had spoken first, extending his hand, "we are foolish to quarrel. Let us prescribe for each other."

They are still alive and apparently in excellent health.—Youth's Companion.

Awnings In Big Lots.

"To supply some of the big modern buildings with awnings," said an awning maker, "costs as much as it would to build a moderate sized house.

"Not all of the great buildings require awnings. Some of the very largest have their principal exposure in such a direction that they are not needed, the sun not shining on these windows during the hours the offices are occupied. And then, of course, there are great buildings that do not require awnings on some sides, but need them on others or in courts, and so on.

"Here, for instance, is a building with about 1,000 windows, of which 600 or thereabout are supplied with awnings.

"Another building I have in mind has about 1,600 windows. I don't know how many awnings they have there, but if it is supplied in the same proportion as the other that would give it about 1,000 awnings. I dare say that, in fact, you would find in the city single buildings with more than a thousand awnings.

"You see, just the awnings for some of these great modern buildings amount to quite an item."—New York Sun.

"I love company," said a local Mrs. Partington. "It makes things bright and lively—it breaks the anatomy."—New York Sun.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. They were as stable as gold; their price did not vary a cent in twenty years. The very name of Oliver Ames & Son, was a synonym for honesty. It was current all over the world.

On the same principle Benson's Porous Plaster is the universal standard external remedy. To say it is a "good" plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external remedy is available, Benson's Plaster is used almost as a matter of course.

Benson's Plaster quickly relieves and cures where other modes of treatment are either exasperatingly slow or have no good effect whatever. Coughs, colds, lumbago, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lame back, etc., are at once benefited and soon cured.

Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters have none of the curative virtues of Benson's. More than 5,000 physicians and druggists have commended Benson's Plaster as a remedy in which the public may have implicit confidence; while, in a comparative test with other plasters, Benson's has received fifty-five highest awards. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations.

For sale by all druggists or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

English Ideas of Lynching.

At a recent dinner in London the conversation turned on the subject of lynchings in the United States. It was the general opinion that a rope was the chief end of man in America. Finally the hostess turned to an American, who had taken no part in the conversation, and said:

"You, sir, must have often seen these affairs."

"Yes," he replied, "we take a kind of municipal pride in seeing which city can show the greatest number of lynchings yearly."

"Oh, do tell us about a lynching you have seen yourself," broke in half a dozen voices at once.

"The night before I sailed for England," said the American, "I was giving a dinner to a party of intimate friends when a colored waiter spilled a plate of soup over the gown of a lady at an adjoining table. The gown was utterly ruined, and the gentlemen of her party at once seized the waiter, tied a rope around his neck and, at a signal from the injured lady, swung him into the air."

"Horrible!" said the hostess, with a shudder. "And did you actually see this yourself?"

"Well, no," said the American apologetically. "Just at that time I was down stairs killing the chef for putting mustard in the blancmange."—Modern Society.

Kind Heartedness.

The gingham shirted boy had made a break to pass the ticket seller at the circus entrance, but that gentleman had caught him and rudely thrust him back.

"Poor little devil!" said a seedy looking man in the crowd. "If I had the money, I'd buy him a ticket myself."

The crowd looked sympathetic, but said nothing, while the boy sobbed as if his heart would dissolve.

"I've only got a nickel, little feller," went on the seedy looking one, "and that won't do you no good. Say," he continued, turning suddenly to the crowd, "let's do one good act in our lives. Let's buy him a ticket."

It looked for a minute as if a collection was to be started, but a benevolent looking old gentleman nipped it in the bud by slipping a half dollar into the hand of the boy, who promptly disappeared into the tent.

"I thank you a thousand times for that kind act, sir," said the seedy looking man.

"You seem to take quite an interest in the little fellow," remarked the benevolent one.

"Well," I should think I ought to," answered the seedy looking man proudly. "That's the only son I got!"—Indianapolis Sun.

A Lesson In Politeness.

The Philadelphia Record says that a railroad contractor who recently returned from abroad tells of an experience that befell him in Munich illustrative of the difference in prevailing customs. Armed with a number of letters of introduction to European railroad officials, he made it a point to inquire into the workings of the various systems and was treated with uniform courtesy.

At Munich he thought he had acquired all the information he was after, and as he passed out of the office of the man with whom he had been talking he put on his hat. He had scarcely been ushered out when it occurred to him that there was one matter about which he had forgotten to inquire.

"I immediately retraced my steps," said the Philadelphian, "and again entered the office, neglecting to remove my hat. I saw the same official with whom I had been talking, and, apologizing for taking up so much of his time, I put the question to him. Without a word he reached up, took off my hat and placed it in my hand. Then he answered my query and bowed me out. It made me feel rather cheap."

On a Business Basis.

Gerald developed a journalistic instinct at the early age of 14. With the consent of his father and some assistance from the same source he bought an "amateur printing outfit" and started the Elmhurst Monthly Journal, subscription price 25 cents a year, payable in advance.

"I suppose you call yourself the editor and proprietor of this office," remarked an envious young associate who dropped in at his "sanctum" in the basement of the paternal dwelling one day.

"Of course I do," responded the youthful journalist. "I don't owe a cent on it."

"Proprietor! Humph! Everybody knows you got $25 from your father to start it with."

"Yes, sir," stoutly rejoined Gerald, "and his subscription for The Journal is marked paid 100 years ahead on my books!"—Youth's Companion.

A Cold Snub.

Hostess—Are you a musician, Mr. Jones?

Jones (who is dying to give an exhibition of his powers)—Well—er—yes, I think I can lay claim to some knowledge of music.

Hostess—I am delighted to know it. My daughter is about to play, and I should be very glad if you would kindly turn over the music for her."

Made the Application.

"How are things?" the barber asked pleasantly of the shrinking man in the chair.

"Dull, very dull!"

And the knight of the razor looked for a moment as if he thought the remark was personal.—Philadelphia Times.

Why We Wink.

No satisfactory determination has been made of the reason we wink. Some suppose that the descent and return of the lid over the eye serve to sweep or wash it off; others that covering of the eye gives it a rest from the labor of vision, if only for an inappreciable instant. This view borrows some force from the fact that the record of winking is considerably used by experimental physiologists to help measure the fatigue which the eye suffers.—Popular Science.

Hard Work.

USING ANÆSTHETICS.

THE FACTS ABOUT THE EFFECTS OF CHLOROFORM AND ETHER.

Evil Deeds Are Not Easy to Do With the Aid of These Drugs—Some Popular Misinformation on the Subject Corrected.

A curious case of robbery under chloroform which was decided in London not long ago was followed with great interest by writers on medical jurisprudence. Hitherto many such writers have expressed great doubt about these cases, for the process is by no means so easy of use as people think.

Very extravagant ideas prevail among the public as to the power of anæsthetics, owing perhaps to the license employed by novelists when they describe "fancy" cases in their books.

One reads, for instance, of a man in a railway carriage waving a handkerchief before the face of a fellow traveler and producing instantaneous unconsciousness. This is absolutely impossible. Another imaginative writer recently described a murder carried out by pushing a towel saturated with a powerful anæsthetic under the bedroom door of his sleeping victim. This also is nonsense.

In another tale the more feasible plan is carried out of entering the sleeping man's chamber, pouring the anæsthetic on the bed, the murderer standing by and watching his victim die. But even this is stretching the truth rather severely.

The true facts about chloroform and its companion anæsthetic, ether, are as follows:

First, with regard to administering the drug during sleep, doctors have made very exhaustive experiments, for it would be of great advantage to a patient on whom an operation has to be performed, to chloroform him while asleep and save him the horror which so many people have of the inhalation, and they sum up the results, showing that very rarely can chloroform be administered to a sleeping person without awakening him. Grown people are, with the rarest exception, awakened by the irritating fumes. If a man were tired and if his nose were naturally insensitive to unpleasant odors, and especially if he were under the influence of drink, it might be possible to make him unconscious while asleep. But not even every doctor could do it. The operation would require the highest skill, and the most skillful administrator would succeed only once in a hundred times.

If we take the case of spilling the chloroform in a room and thus impregnating all the air of the room, the thing is out of the question. Yet not only do novelists assert that this can be done, but many people have been actually charged in real life with doing it—for the purpose of blackmailing them, for injuring them or perhaps to throw off suspicion from the pretended victim who has committed the robbery himself. If the room measures, say, 12 feet square and is 9 feet high, it would probably take a gallon of chloroform spilled on the floor to make a man unconscious. All the chinks and crannies would have to be stopped up first, moreover, and the operator himself would have to be poison proof or he also would succumb.

As a matter of fact, the only way to render a person unconscious by the use of chloroform is in the way practiced by surgeons in the operating room. And this is by no means an easy task. There are several ways of doing it. The chloroform may be dropped on a handkerchief, which is then held over the face at some little distance, or it may be dropped on a sponge, or it may be used in one of the innumerable machines invented for the purpose. But the vapor must be mixed with air before it is breathed. That is the reason the handkerchief or the sponge is held some inches from the face. As a rule it takes from five to eight minutes to make the person unconscious, and during this time he generally struggles very violently.

It is probable that many of the charges of chloroforming which have been made are false. Sometimes the pretended victim asserts that he has become unconscious immediately. But it has been shown in evidence that the time necessary to bring about this result is at least four or five minutes. Sometimes he says he could not cry out, yet he describes all the circumstances of the administration minutely. Now, the first effect of the chloroform is to produce confusion of the mind, while, on the other hand, the patient can cry out almost up to the last. He becomes mentally confused before he loses the power of speech. These few facts are sufficient perhaps to demonstrate that some charges of possible chloroforming are necessarily untrue.—London Mail.

Not Quite What She Meant.

A very stout lady while out walking in a certain part of Edinburgh came to a gateway which appeared to be the entrance to a private road. Not being certain, however, she asked one of two messenger boys who were standing at the entrance whether she could get through the gateway or not.

The boy looked her up and down and across. Then, winking to his friend, he replied:

"I dinna ken, missus, but think ye micht try, as I saw a horse and cart gang through a wee while since."—London Tit-Bits.

He Knew When He Was Well Off.

Teddie slept in a big bed with his mother, and one winter's night, being right in the middle of it when his mother's bedtime came, she suggested to him to move on his side. He blinked up at her rebelliously: "No, I t'ink I won't move. It's cold everywhere I ain't."—Harper's Bazar.

World's Longest Stairway.

The Philadelphia city hall contains the highest continuous stairway in the world, and tourists who have boasted of their muscular ability in climbing the stone steps of the Bunker Hill monument at Charlestown, the Washington monument or the monument to General Brock near Queenstown, Ontario, will tell their friends of their feat of ascending the 598 steps which lead from the seventh floor of the city hall to the landing about the feet of William Penn's statue. It extends from the seventh to the sixteenth floor and contains 598 steps of iron, arranged about a square central shaft, in which runs an electric elevator. To reach the tower stairway the climber may mount 245 granite stairs in the stairways at the northern end of the building, thus making a total climb of 743 steps.

Tower climbing is one of the fads of tourists. Hitherto the Bunker Hill monument, with its four hundred odd stone steps, and the Washington monument, which has a few more, have represented the acme of opportunity for tests of physical endurance in this country.—Philadelphia Press.

Alvary Finished the Kiss.

"A beautiful scene," said an old theater goer, "may be utterly ruined by some trifling mistake, and an error of seemingly infinitesimal dimensions throw out an entire company. Oftentimes, however, the ready wit and presence of mind of an actor or actress may save the day and turn what might otherwise have been disaster into triumph. One of the most difficult of all scenes to carry off successfully occurs in the opera of 'Siegfried.' You will remember that Siegfried awakens Brunnhilde from her long sleep with a kiss. Wagner has so arranged it that the kiss seems as long to the audience as the immortal slumber itself. In reality it lasts about 70 seconds, but it seems unending. It is a most trying situation for the singers, for the audience is extremely likely to grow restless.

"Some years ago at a performance of 'Siegfried' in St. Louis Alvary—poor chap!—was singing Siegfried to Mme. Sucher's Brunnhilde. He had got about half-way through his lengthy osculation when the gallery began a succession of smacks, constantly increasing in volume. It was a critical moment; but, as the event proved, one that was to add to Alvery's already large wreath of laurels.

"Slowly he raised his magnificently handsome head and turned toward the audience and silently looked the galleries into silence. In ten seconds he had completely mastered them, and you could have heard a pin drop in the great house. Then he dropped his face on that of Brunnhilde, and that kiss went on to its appointed and Sapholike finish without further interruption from the audience. It was as fine an exhibition of the control a great personality can exercise over an audience as I have ever witnessed."—New York Tribune.

His After Dinner Speech.

There is no field of mental effort in which success in its most flattering form may be won quicker than on the after dinner platform. The man who can amuse and instruct such an audience, for instance, as that which assembles each year at the New England society dinner, perhaps the most critical in New York, may awake to find himself famous. A few hours before Henry W. Grady of Atlanta was to speak at the New England society's dinner in 1886 a correspondent of a southern newspaper asked him what he would say, and he replied:

"The Lord only knows. I have thought of 1,000 things to say, 500 of which if I say they will murder me when I get back home, and if I say the other 500 they will murder me at the banquet."

The ovation which the young, smooth faced southerner, almost unknown in New York, received at the dinner that night when the last ringing sentence of his speech had been spoken never has been equaled on a similar occasion, and his fellow citizens at home stood for hours in the rain in crowds waiting to greet him on his arrival as the spokesman of the new south. His progress from a local to a national reputation had been made in a bound.—Ainslee's Magazine.

One of the Queer Sights of Brooklyn.

"Speaking of queer things that happen in Brooklyn," said a member of the finance department, "a few nights ago I was going out on a late train on the Fifth avenue elevated road. There were few passengers in the car. Sitting opposite me was a demure looking Brooklynite with a large bundle under each arm. The bundles were closely wrapped with newspapers.

"Suddenly a violent internal movement agitated the bundle under the man's left arm, and a moment later the head of a large game rooster broke through the paper. As soon as the rooster's head was clear he crowed loud and defiantly. Then the bundle under the other arm heaved and struggled, another beak and comb appeared, and the crow of defiance was promptly answered by one of challenge.

"Then for five minutes those two roosters crowed at 30 seconds' intervals, while their owner struggled desperately to get them back into the wrappings where he had thought them effectually concealed. He indignantly refused the request of the other passengers to put them on the floor of the car and let them fight it out."—New York Sun.

The Talking Macaulay.

Macaulay is an (almost) never ceasing talker and pours out the prodigious stores of learning, wit and eloquence with such an absorption in his subject that I doubted when I heard him if he would not go on just the same if everybody left the room. Somebody asked the Duchess of Sutherland (after dinner at Stafford House) if he liked the society of women and whom he seemed to prefer. She answered, "Oh, he only looks upon us all in the light of interruptions."—Lady Granville's Records.

Profitable Change.

A well known conjurer one day visited a Scotch village. After performing many astonishing tricks he asked for a halfpenny, which a collier lent him. The conjurer then said he would turn it into a sovereign. He did so, as the people thought, and handed it around for them to see. When it reached the collier, he coolly pocketed it and said to the astonished conjurer, "Will ye cheenge me anither?"—London Telegraph.

A Confidence Between Members.

"I understand," said one member of the legislature, "that the senator whom we recently elected was beset by footpads and robbed in Paris."

"Dear me," answered the other member of the legislature. "Those Frenchmen have such a brutal and direct method of getting a man's money away from him."—Washington Star.

The Redcoats.

An incident at the siege of Rouen, in 1591, shows that red was looked upon as the English color, for in mentioning the death of one of the Earl of Essex's captains it is remarked that the Frenchman who shot him got near enough to do so by putting on the red coat of a dead English soldier. In 1643 the king's life guards, as also the queen's and Prince Rupert's, wore red coats.

It Brings Her, Etc.

"What do you do when your wife gets sulky and refuses to talk to you?"

"Why, I begin to praise Mrs. Allgood, across the street, or some other woman I know she detests."

"And that brings her, eh?"

"Yes, it brings her and sometimes everything throwable that happens to be in her reach too."—Salt Lake City [illegible]

Two Narrow Irish Escapes.

An Irishman, seeing a vessel very heavily laden and scarcely above the water's edge, exclaimed, "Upon my sowl, if the river was but a little higher the ship would go to the bottom!"

"In a moment," said the proprietor. "I am working at something a little more important than hunting for a clew just now."

And while the detective waited the merchant wrote as follows at his desk:

"The burglar who broke into Katzenhefter's shop on the night of the 15th and carried away a silk hat, a pair of French calfskin boots, a fur trimmed overcoat, a black broadcloth suit and two suits of silk underwear was a black hearted villain and scoundrel, but a man whose judgment cannot be called into question. He knew where to go when he wanted the finest clothing the market affords."

"Jacob," he said to the bookkeeper, "send a copy of this to all the papers and tell 'em I want it printed in big black type, to occupy half a column, tomorrow morning. Now, Mr. Hawkshaw, I am at your service."—London Answers.

Thrift In Children.

A savings bank account is a great incentive to thrift in children. If one is begun for the baby, even with a very small sum, and added through childhood and youth with a certain proportion of the money that otherwise would be spent carelessly and thoughtlessly by the child, there will be a very respectable amount on the credit side of the ledger when the depositor is 18 years old. ONE BURGLAR DEAD

And the Other Two Will be Tried for Murder

TORONTO OFFICER'S BRAVERY

Burglar Rice, Who Killed Constable Boyd, is Supposed to Have Killed a Man While Committing a Robbery in Chicago.

Toronto, June 7.—Jones, Rice and Rutledge, who were brought here from Chicago and have been found guilty of robbing the Aurora, Ont., post-office. The two living burglars will now be arraigned for murder, as Jones died yesterday.

Crown Attorney Curry says Rice, who, it is alleged, fired the shot which killed Boyd, is supposed to have killed a man during a robbery in Chicago.

Constable Stewart played a brave part in the tragedy in which County Constable Boyd was murdered in the desperate break for liberty made by Frank Rutledge, Fred Rice and Thomas Jones, the Aurora bank burglars.

When Boyd was shot dead by Rice, Stewart realized that resistance meant certain death. Throwing up his hands, he shouted: "I give up! Get out of here!"

The prisoners, who were still handcuffed together, jumped out of the hack. As soon as their backs were turned, Stewart drew his revolver and shot Jones, breaking his arm. Rice and Rutledge returned a fusillade of bullets and made a dash for a passing car. Stewart sprinted after them and put a bullet through Jones's body.

By jerking the trolley off the car wire, Stewart brought the car to a standstill. His revolver being empty, he attacked the desperadoes with his baton. The prisoners fought like madmen, but soon lay helpless on the floor of the car, each bleeding from half a dozen wounds.

Rice is said to be the son of a wealthy retired farmer of Champaign, Ill., and was graduated from the university of that place several years ago.

Rutledge, alias Dyer, burglarized a store in his native town of Streetsville, Ont., in 1888, when he was 19 years of age. He was sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary. While waiting to be conveyed to the penitentiary, he almost murdered his guard in an attempt to escape.

Miss Vina Seacey, the "veiled lady," whose constant attendance at the trial excited all sorts of speculation, was arrested. She is supposed to know something about the conspiracy. She refuses to talk. She is believed to have come from Chicago.

A woman representing herself as a sister of Jones, the burglar, claimed the body. She was described as Kate O'Brien, alias "Press" O'Brien, the notorious confidence woman, and was taken into custody but subsequently released. The jury exonerated Constable Stewart for killing Jones. The trial of Rice and Rutledge for murder will begin today.

U. S. Brewers Elect Officers.

Buffalo, June 7.—The U. S. Brewers' association, after considerable debate, adopted a resolution with the object of bringing the country brewers into their association. During the debate it was stated that as a rule the country brewers were not members, and this was regrettable to many members because of the fact that country brewers exert considerable political influence. The resolution provides for sending agents throughout the country. The convention adjourned after electing these officers: President, N. W. Kendall of New Haven; first vice-president, Joseph Theurer of Chicago; second vice-president, John D. Brown of Chicago; treasurer, Herman F. Scharmann of Brooklyn; trustees, Edward Ruhl of Boston, John P. Ober of Pittsburg, Percy Andrew of Cincinnati, and Robert Crain of Baltimore. Vigilance and advisory committees were also named.

Lord Waldersee Resigns.

Berlin, June 7.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Count von Waldersee, dated Tien Tsin, June 4:

"I have now resigned the functions of commander in chief and today am leaving China by way of Tokio.

"Strict measures have been taken here to avoid collisions between different contingents.

"In company with large German detachments I attended the funeral of the French soldiers killed in the recent affray."

Quick Relief for Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parsons, Kansas, writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar and it has never failed to give immediate relief." J. J. Orr.

The lack of energy you feel, the backache and a run down condition generally, all mean kidney disorder. Foley's Kidney Cure will restore your strength and vigor by making the kidneys well. Take no substitute. J. J. Orr.

EAT THEIR BODIES.

Members of German South Sea Expedition Killed.

Berlin, June 7.—The Tageblatt prints special correspondence from New Guinea containing a full account of the massacre of the members of the first German South Sea expedition on the cannibal islands of St. Matthias. They were all killed and eaten save a Dr. Heinroth.

The Colonial Zeitung, the official organ of the German Colonial society, furnishes details of the massacre. It seems that the vessel which carried the expedition to the island of St. Matthias left, after a few days, for Herbertshoh, New Britain, to get coal and fresh supplies. During its absence the savages who had hitherto appeared friendly, although known to be rabid cannibals, planned to kill and rob the diminished party.

The plot was carried out one morning while the members of the expedition, who had a body guard of 40 drilled Papuans, were cleaning their rifles, which they had taken apart. Suddenly 80 of the islanders broke from the bushes, raising fierce war cries and brandishing spears, with which they stabbed to death the leader of the party, Dr. Mencken; his secretary, Herr Caro, and a white sailor who was asleep under a tent.

Dr. Heinroth emptied his revolver into his assailants, while the bodyguard in the meantime retired to the boats with the wounded and Heinroth, leaving 12 dead. The boats put off to an island not far distant, where the expeditionary vessel rescued them. Subsequently the survivors returned to the island of St. Matthias, where they found that the bodies had been devoured and the camp absolutely looted.

HIGH-PRICED PLUGS.

Broken-Down Horses Bought at Extravagant Prices.

London, June 7.—After a long and somewhat embittered discussion of the policy of the war office in buying horses for use in South Africa, the house of commons by a vote of 159 to 60 voted the sum of £15,779,000 for transports and remounts.

Sir Blundell Maple, conservative, asserted that British officers who had been sent to Hungary and Austria had purchased broken-down animals at extravagant prices and divided with the sellers the price charged the British government above the actual cost. He demanded the appointment of a committee of inquiry.

Lord Stanley, financial secretary of the war office, said an inquiry would be made into the matter, and he believed that the accusations of corruption brought against British officers would be disproved.

Mr. Broderick, the war secretary, said the war office paid for horses in England £42, in Canada £30 and in Australia and the United States and Hungary from £20 to £25. Later in the discussion Mr. Broderick said a telegram had just reached him from Lord Kitchener announcing that between 50,000 and 60,000 troops were now suitably mounted. The war secretary defended the good quality of the horses bought abroad.

Sentenced to Dismissal.

Washington, June 7.—News has been received here through unofficial channels that Lieut. Richard I. Townley of the navy has been convicted by courtmartial at Manila and sentenced to dismissal from the service. The charge of which Lieut. Townley was court-martialed was in connection with the recent commissary irregularities at Manila. The sentence must be approved by the president to become effective.

SEALED IN DEATH

Mrs. Arnell Dies From the Effects of Her Terrible Wounds

After All This Terrible Treatment She Still Refused to Say One Word That Might be Used Against Her Husband in Evidence.

Coleman, Mich., June 7.—The funeral of Mrs. May Arnell and her five-year-old daughter Rea took place this morning at 10 o'clock. The bodies of the mother and child were placed in one coffin, as it was the mother's wish that they should be buried together.

Several attempts were made to get Mrs. Arnell to make a dying statement showing how the shooting occurred, but she steadfastly refused to tell anything that might be used as evidence against her husband.

The story that is told about the beginning of this trouble is as follows:

Last week Arnell had been seen in the company of women. He was drinking hard at the time and his wife remonstrated with him. Then he ran away to Saginaw, and had a hilarious time in that city for several days. When he returned home he was on the verge of delirium tremens. That night he paced up and down in the office of his hotel and threatened to kill somebody. He was pacified and sent to his room by his brother.

Then he picked a quarrel with his wife, and the poor, defenseless woman was struck a blow on the jaw that would have felled an ox. She tumbled over on the bed unconscious. When she staggered to her feet the brute smashed her in the eyes so that they were both blackened. Then he nearly broke her right arm by hitting it with a shotgun.

The next morning Mrs. Arnell appeared in the hotel office with her face fearfully disfigured from the blows that had been struck by her husband.

When Arnell got up out of bed Wednesday morning he was still vicious and again paced up and down the room, threatening to kill somebody. His wife had confidence in him, however, and stood by his side trying to calm him.

Finally he broke away from her. In a minute she could hear their only baby girl pleading with her papa for him not to hurt her. Then there was an awful report and a child's scream. Arnell came rushing out of the room he had been in. He saw his wife in the hallway, shot her in the breast and then rushed down stairs for other victims. And it was after all this terrible treatment she had received that Mrs. Arnell refused to give utterance to anything that might hurt him. In fact, she first told the doctor that she bumped up against a door and blackened her eyes, but when told that she was going to die, the poor woman admitted that she had not told the truth, but she would still say nothing against Arnell.

The Commercial hotel did the best business in Beaverton, but it is now closed up, probably for ever.

Threats of Lynching.

Aurora, Mo., June 7.—A telephone message from Galena, Stone county, 25 miles off the railroad, says that Mrs. John Stallion and her two sons by a former marriage, James and Will Crabtree, have confessed to the murder of Alice Stallion, the pretty 16-year-old stepdaughter of the woman. According to the confession, the boys held Alice while the mother broke her skull with a poker. The body was then thrown into the James river. There is great excitement as a result of the confessions and a lynching may follow. The girl was to have been married soon. Mrs. Stallion was, it is said, jealous of her stepdaughter because of her beauty and popularity.

Fire and One Man Killed.

Milwaukee, June 7.—The Pabst Brewing Co. suffered a loss by fire last night to the extent of between $150,000 and $200,000, fully covered by insurance. One man was killed during the progress of the fire. The fire started near the roof of elevator "F," where four coppersmiths were at work making repairs. Elevator "F" was gutted and a cupola containing the controlling machinery of the malt house, the building adjoining, was destroyed. John Smith, a coppersmith, died from injuries sustained by falling four stories.

Conductor Held for Murder.

Atlanta, Ga., June 7.—G. B. Dunton, a yard conductor in the employ of the Southern railway, was bound over without bail to the superior court on the charge of murder. Evidence heard at the preliminary trial tended to show that Dunton was on the switch engine which on Tuesday ran into the Macon passenger train on the Southern, killing three persons.

Fatal Hailstorm.

THE BOERS THIS TIME

Got Much the Worst of a Shindy at Warm Baths.

Pretoria, June 7.—Col. Wilson, with 240 of Kitchener's scouts, surprised and routed 400 Boers belonging to Beyer's command, 34 miles west of Warm Baths. The Boers resisted stubbornly, but finally broke and fled, leaving 37 dead, 100 prisoners and all their wagons and supplies, including 8,000 cattle, in the hands of the British. The loss of the latter was three men killed and 15 wounded.

Beyer's main command arrived on the scene soon after the engagement, but failed in an attempt to recapture the supplies. This leaves Beyer practically without supplies.

THOSE AMENDMENTS

To the Platt Law Did Not Reflect Secretary Root's Ideas.

Washington, June 7.—In view of the several representations made in Havana regarding the interpretation by the secretary of war to the Cuban commissioners of the Platt amendment, it can be stated authoritatively that the secretary did not deviate from the declaration that the president and himself had no power to change an act of congress. It is said here that the amendments which the Cuban convention made to the Platt law and the incorporation of conversations with Secretary Root did not represent his views of the amendment, nor was he correctly quoted in the alleged statements.

Among the reports given out in Havana is the translation of a letter of Senator Platt, written to the secretary of war and furnished as a confidential document to the Cuban commissioners when they were here. This letter briefly gives the views of the Connecticut senator upon some features of the law which bears his name. Surprise was expressed that the letter should appear in print in Havana.

General Wood telegraphed the department inquiring as to the whereabouts of the letter of Secretary Root, explaining in detail the objection to the action of the constitutional convention. It is expected the letter will reach Havana within a very short time. It has been delayed in the mails.

NEW CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

President and Secretary Root Considering One for Philippines.

Washington, June 7.—The new civil government to be established in the Philippines is receiving the consideration of the president and secretary of war. It will differ very little from what was first intended, as there will be a governor for the archipelago and a legislative council and other officers. This government will have control of all civil affairs, but it will be under the war department, to the extent of being directed by the secretary of war.

There will be a nice distinction as to the authority of the general commanding the troops in the Philippines and the governor to be appointed under the civil government. No official declaration has been made as to which will be the supreme authority, but it is known the secretary of war will be supreme. While it is not the intention to conduct the government of the Philippines under the Spooner law, that law will be taken as sanctioning what is to be done. The new law will be similar to that which existed for a short time in the early days of New Mexico. There was a civil governor appointed by the president and a commanding general of the army. Both had their functions in preserving the peace and controlling the affairs of the territory.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION

Considers Tariff Question With Reference to Trusts.

Washington, June 7.—The industrial commission, at its session yesterday, considered the tariff question with incidental reference to trusts, the witnesses being Congressman Robert W. Tayler of Ohio and Dr. George Gunton, president of the New York Institute of Social Economics.

Mr. Tayler took the position that any discussion in congress of the tariff at this time would have a damaging effect upon the country. He said the Dingley law was the most equitable tariff law the United States ever had. He took a decided position against trusts and said they are not fostered by the protective tariff. Mr. Tayler also said that he believed in the principle of reciprocity, but that he did not endorse any of the recently negotiated reciprocity treaties.

Dr. Gunton devoted himself especially to replying to an argument recently made before the commission by Edward Atkinson for free trade. Dr. Gunton said that the freedom contended for by opponents of the tariff is analagous to freedom of the savage, a freedom which, if indulged in too freely, not only brings injury to others but ruin to himself.

Furniture Factory Burned.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 7.—Fire at North Milwaukee last night caused a loss of $75,000, of which $70,000 is on the plant and lumber yard of the Wisconsin Furniture Co.

Sorrow in the Home.

Otsego, Mich., June 7.—Harriet Wolff of Otsego and Charles Machemer of Plainwell were married at Allegan Wednesday and went to Constantine on a wedding trip, where they notified their parents. There is sorrow in the home of Miss Wolff, she being a Jewess and Mr. Machemer a gentile.

MICHIGAN MATTERS

Kent County Grand Jury Still Pegging Away

FOUR OR FIVE INDICTMENTS

Murderer Weeks Arraigned and Says He Wants Time to Implicate Others —Grand Rapids Boy Killed by a Fire Truck.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7.—The grand jury went back to the old line of questioning bankers, in view of the new light thrown by Garman and Cameron on the disposal of the funds, Cashier Kelsey being the first witness summoned. Louis K. Davis, an Indianapolis man who tried to establish a filteration plant here, and one of the men sent for by Mayor Perry to break Garman's and Cameron's evidence, arrived yesterday, but has not been summoned by the grand jury.

It is learned that the general line of defense to be followed by local men who handled the money is that only $7,000 was used here. They claim that of the first fund of $25,000 sent on by Taylor, and of which Thos. F. McGarry was custodian, McGarry retained $7,000 for preliminary expenses and his fees as attorney, and that the rest was returned to New York.

The second fund of $75,000, brought here in bills by Banker Gates and placed in the Michigan Trust vault with S. V. McLeod as custodian, was returned intact, they claim. They also claim that they took receipts from Taylor for both the $1,000 and $75,000 returned, and these were submitted when they appeared before the grand jury.

When Judge Newnham released Promoters Cameron and Garman, charged with forgery, on their own recognizance, he aided the county officials in turning a clever trick on Mayor Perry. The latter, figuring that the men would be acquitted, was all ready to have them rearrested on another warrant charging them with attempted bribery. Now they will be permitted to finish their testimony, and as a reward for their disclosures will doubtless be let go scot free in the end. Garman claims that one city official threatened to kill him if he told what he knew.

Members of the grand jury act and talk as though they have no use for the Perry crowd, and it is predicted that four or five indictments will be voted.

The grand jury endeavored to get at the true facts regarding the interference with its work by the arrest of Witnesses Garman and Cameron at the instance of Mayor Perry. Judge Doyle of the police court, who issued the warrants, and Wm. E. Grove, who conducted the prosecution, were the first witnesses of the day, and were in the jury room for some time.

Murderer Weeks Arraigned.

Flint, Mich., June 7.—Murderer Weeks was arraigned in Justice Swayze's court, but despite the fact that he has made a confession to Deputy Sheriff Greene, refused to waive examination, saying he wanted to remain in Flint for a short time longer. He insists that others are implicated, and wanted to be sure that they were exposed before he left for state's prison. He claimed he had gone to the Parish woman's house several times intending to kill her, but his courage failed him at the last moment. His examination was set for June 12.

Boy Killed by a Fire Truck.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7.—Charles Burcow, 12 years old, rode his bicycle to a fire close to the hook and ladder truck. He collided with another boy, and falling, his head struck the pavement, directly in front of the rear truck wheel, which passed over his head, causing instant death. The boy's mother is a widow and somebody telephoned her that her son had his head cut off and the shock prostrated her.

Home Destroyed by Fire.

Muskegon, Mich., June 7.—Herbert Pedler made a fire in the stove, but supposed it was all out before he retired. He was awakened by crackling flames early in the morning and got out with difficulty. Besides the loss of house and furniture he lost several hundred dollars in money and his band instruments. He had just had his residence fixed up beautifully for the return of his wife and children, who have been traveling in Europe for the past year, and who are expected home today.

Unknown to the Jury.

Detroit, Mich., June 7.—Coroner Hoffman's inquest into the death of little Frances Lawrence, the 14-year-old child who was picked up on the Campus suffering from arsenical poisoning, and who died within a few hours, failed to clear up the mystery surrounding the case. The jury brought in a verdict "that Frances Lawrence came to her death by means of arsenical poisoning administered by a party or parties unknown to this jury."

Will Probably Die.

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 7.—As the result of the street car collision here Wednesday evening Oliver Switzer, a well-to-do citizen of Warsaw, Ind., is very low with concussion of the brain, and will probably die. Immediately after the collision he did not appear to be injured, but was taken ill during the night.

Mrs. McKinley's Condition.

Washington, June 7.—Dr. Rixey left the White House at 10 o'clock last night after an hour and a half spent in attendance on Mrs. McKinley. He said, "There is no material change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She remains the same as mentioned in our bulletin of the morning."

In answer to specific inquiries, he replied that he could not say there had been any perceptible improvement whatever during the day.

Seven Years in Bed.

"Will wonders ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but, "three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from headache, backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed by C. A. Wright. RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

He won a company clerkship in three months, which was considered immense good luck, and lost it within the year, which was supposed to be luck as bad, but turned out to be the stepping stone to fortune in the soldier's eyes. He was one of an escort attacked by road agents, and, in fighting desperately for his own life, had saved that of the paymaster. The sergeant and corporal with them were killed. Brady was "lanced" on the spot and came home a hero, the subject of a panegyric from the pen of the paymaster, whose uncle was a senator of much wealth and much knowledge of mining, but little of men. He was on the paymaster's bond for a big sum, and the next thing the —th knew a stranger to their ranks appeared with a commission as second lieutenant, a glib tongue and a convivial turn, plenty of money to start with and a letter of introduction to Atherton from a famous war general, which letter was susceptible of two interpretations and was written, there was little doubt, at the instance of the senator in question, a prominent member of the committee on military affairs. "This will be handed you by Lieutenant Brady," said the letter, "who so distinguished himself in the affair on the Mimbres last year. The department thought best to assign him to the —th, and I have assured his friends that in consigning him to you I have placed him in the best hands possible." Senator Sivright was thoroughly satisfied, his nephew, the paymaster, a bit perplexed, but too wise just then to dissect any other man's motives or letters, lest his own should become objects of scrutiny. Brady proved a jolly acquisition at first, could sing a good song, tell a good story and was "smart" in many ways and lavish in all. There was a story (put in circulation by a soldier whose reward for that Mimbres affair had been a discharge and not a commission) to the effect that when they were suddenly attacked by those desperadoes the paymaster had crawled under the wagon and cried, and Brady "allowed" when in his cups that he could tell things and would if not "properly persuaded." Certain it is that for the first year of his service Brady spent and drunk more than a second lieutenant's share. Then the senator failed of re-election, owing possibly to some shortcomings in his mines; his nephew, the paymaster, succeeded in planning a robbery that worked better, and this opened the stagnant flow of promotion in the pay corps, and left Brady without a protector.

But he held a life office if he behaved himself, and being a bachelor in a regiment that spent most of its days in the inexpensive luxuries of field service he had managed to pay his debts, and so long as he let whisky alone keep out of serious trouble. But Brady and John Barleycorn never "connected" that the former did not, as Blake said, make an ass of himself, and his asininity took shape in a peculiar form of mania that afflicts the bibulous Hibernian—that of imagining, believing and telling tales of deep and bloody mystery at the expense of his fellow men in higher social esteem than himself. Friends Brady had few, enemies none worse than himself. He felt the isolation of his lot, wanted to marry and was refused by the girls he wanted, which made him gloomier, but campaign work saved him from the solace he would have sought, and Brady had been doing fairly well, for him, when Rawson returned from leave and gave him a crony and an excuse for a start. Atherton whisked the crony off, as has been said, before much mischief was done, but he could not banish the whisky, and Brady marched on guard the morning of this eventful day looking much the worse for three weeks' wear and tear and little the better for two strong cocktails.

Still he was not incapable of performing his duty by any means, though eyes and nose held out their danger signals. Blake had given him a sharp reminder at retreat, and Brady had taken a stiffer brace for fear of consequences. He was feeling shaky when the colonel strode into the ill lighted room of the officer of the guard, Blake at his heels, and thus addressed him: "Mr. Brady, I want you to keep a special watch against fire tonight. Order your sentries about the stacks and stables to allow no one to approach them with pipe or cigar. Who are sentries on Nos. 5 and 6?"

Brady looked appealingly at the sergeant, who quickly produced his lists. "Reinhardt and Monahan, first relief; Blair and Scully, second; Duffy and Hunter, third, sir. All good men, sir."

"Hunter's our new man," said the colonel, eying sharply the officer of the guard. "Have you given him personally his orders?"

"N-not his night orders as yet, sir," said Brady, well knowing he had questioned him as to none of them, day or night.

"Well, sir," said Atherton, "you cannot be too vigilant tonight. Make frequent inspections and see that your noncommissioned officers do likewise." Then, as once more he got out into the wind, he bent his head to avoid the blast. "Have you cautioned him, Blake? He looks anything but alert."

"I don't think he's been drinking much today, sir. He seems to realize that he can take no chances. I'll keep an eye on him."

There was a joyous little gathering at Rays' that night. The Mainwarings, Truscotts and Blakes, with devoted Dr. Jayne on Miss Leroy's account, had dined there; a number of post people had dropped in later, and Miss Leroy, "looking uncommonly well, if not absolutely pretty," said a lady friend, was being made much of by everybody, despite a slight propensity on the part of some to be facetious about the daily Bible class, for that artful maiden and daughter of the church, after getting her auditors interested in tales of flood and field, had gradually led on to the introduction of holier themes. By the end of the first week the New Testament was slipped in among her books, and selected chapters were explained in very different style from anything her soldier patients had ever heard before, and these had become part of the lesson of the day. Blake declared that Father Keepe of Butte was getting jealous, but Miss Leroy was serenely superior to any and all allusions or reflections. She would stoop to neither controversy nor defense. It was her faith, and that was enough. The quartermaster had laughingly suggested that he thought of getting sent to hospital so as to become one of the elect, and Miss Leroy had studied his face one moment with those clear, beautiful eyes of hers and gravely replied that it might be necessary for him to go to even greater lengths before he could be considered worthy. Then Mainwaring had jocosely asked why she didn't start a missionary boom among the officers, whereat Miss Leroy flushed just a little and then smilingly replied that it was not because they did not need it more than the men she had met, but she had no surplus energy to waste.

"Has no surplus seed to sow on barren ground, major," interposed Blake. "You remember the parable of the hare and the tortoise." Which helped Mainwaring no whit, and only evoked a reproachful glance from Miss Leroy, seeing which Blake whispered so that several heard, "I'd wear sackcloth and ashes a week if Mainwaring could prove he knew the difference between Jacob's Ladder and Jack and the Beanstalk."

"Blake," remonstrated Truscott a moment later, when he got him to one side, "you must be more prudent, not to say considerate. Mainwaring is too good a soldier to be treated with derision, and you'll make an enemy I should hate to see you have if you continue." Blake had had other warnings. His clear headed young wife had already seen in Mrs. Mainwaring's somewhat studied courtesy of greeting that something was amiss and had little doubt that the major had carried home his version of the Three Guardsmen episode in the courtroom, which was indeed the case, though fortunately for Blake Mainwaring couldn't remember the strange names so glibly given him. Mrs. Blake had sought by every gentle, tactful way in her power to make amends for her beloved Gerald's uncanny propensity to ridicule, but the wound was deeper with Mrs. Mainwaring than with the doughty major. She refused to be mollified, while he, ever tempting somebody by his irrepressible habit of launching impetuous comment or criticism at anybody whose methods differed from his own, was as constantly inviting reprisals. Relations were strained, therefore, and Blake should have been more guarded. They had even come to such a pass that Mrs. Mainwaring was finding serious fault with her niece because of a growing intimacy between her and Nannie Blake, and matters were destined to come to a climax in more than one garrison affair, and come to it this very night.

Mrs. Ray had been in ignorance of any serious difference between the Mainwarings and Blake. Indeed, she often said she did not see how anybody could take Blake seriously. But during the dinner it had become apparent more than once. Not in Mainwaring. He, as Blake put it, was as mannerless as ever. Mainwaring talked as much and as loudly to Blake as he did to his hostess, on whose right he sat. There were few topics that could be discussed, outside of horseshoeing, grooming and company kitchens, in which Mainwaring could be considered authority, but in one and all was he disputatious, challenging the speaker to prove the words, even, as sometimes happened, when the challenged party was a woman and entitled to assert no stronger reason than "because."

Mainwaring carried a conversational chip on his shoulder even at dinner parties, and tonight it had been more than ordinarily in evidence. It was after dinner and before visitors came dropping in, and the five ladies were chatting in the parlor, that Mrs. Mainwaring's constraint toward Mrs. Blake became marked, as well as her frequent efforts at breaking in upon the cordial, friendly talk between that lady and her niece.

Finally, just after midnight, when it was time for all to be going to their homes, Blake, whose duty as officer of the day had twice called him away, again was missing. Ray promptly threw his cape over his shoulders to escort Mrs. Blake, although she lived close at hand, and with merry chat and laughter the various ladies and their escorts were trooping forth into the keen night air, when Mrs. Truscott, who was foremost, held up her hand and said, "Hush! I hear something," and her face took on an instant expression of alarm.

The wind was no longer violent, but it blew with steady force across the parade, and sounds from the direction of the guardhouse near the south gate or the stables along the east front were carried out to the waste of prairie stretching away toward the far, pine crested heights of the Elk range. Yet it was toward the guardhouse, whose twinkling lights could be plainly seen, that Mrs. Truscott was gazing. Mainwaring was, as usual, talking loudest of the party and was the last to cease. "Nonsense, Mrs. Truscott, you can't hear the baby crying," he almost derisively exclaimed, whereat the lady stamped a shapely foot and spoke as her father, their old colonel, would have spoken when his wife was not present, and this time with effect.

Some one, panting, came running across the parade. It was the corporal of the guard.

"Captain Ray," he cried, "Captain Blake says please come to him quick at the south gate."

Ray went like a shot. The corporal started to follow, but Mrs. Blake, alarmed and trembling, begged him to stop.

"What's happened?" demanded Mainwaring. "Who's hurt?"

"I don't know, sir. Nobody's hurt that I know of, but there's a patrol out."

"After some drunken man of Ray's troop—that's all," said Mainwaring, "and Blake don't want to put him under guard. See if it ain't. Come," he said, tendering an arm to his wife.

But Mrs. Blake knew her own mind, and without a word of reply started straight across the road in the direction taken by Ray.

"Oh, don't go, Mrs. Blake." "Don't go, Nannie." "I'm sure it's nothing serious," were the various cries that followed her, but she never faltered. "Good night," she cried. "I'm going to Gerald." Reluctantly the doctor called after her:

ELECTRIC RAILWAY

Franchise Good for Three Years Granted to

WM. B. HATCH FOR THE DETROIT COMPANY

Given by the Tecumseh Council at an Adjourned Meeting Held Tuesday Evening.

The following is the entire ordinance granted by the Tecumseh council to the Detroit company, to build an electric road, through the village of Tecumseh. The committee returned the matter to the council with the recommendation that the ordinance be granted for 18 months and that if the company did not have the road built at the end of this time, they should give a bond that it would be completed at the end of 18 months more or surrender the franchise.

The council stood three votes to adopt the committee's suggestion and three votes to grant the franchise for three years. The president casting his vote with the three year people, the company gets three years in which to build the road. It is to be hoped that the road will be built as soon as can be and it is thought that the committee have secured from the company a good franchise.

Council Chamber, Village of Tecumseh.

Adjourned regular meeting held June 4th, 1901. Present, the entire council.

The ordinance committee reported that they had prepared a franchise ordinance for the electric railway which was read and, after discussion, was on motion passed and declared adopted as follows:

An Ordinance Granting to John C. Donnelly and William B. Hatch, of the City of Detroit, Michigan, their Associates, Successors and Assigns, to be Hereafter Organized into a Street Railway Corporation, under the Laws of the State of Michigan, and to such Corporation, its Successors and Assigns, the Right to Locate, Establish, Construct and Operate Street Railways upon Streets in the Village of Tecumseh:

The village of Tecumseh ordains:

SEC. 1. That consent, permission and authority is hereby given, granted and duly vested in John C. Donnelly and William B. Hatch of the city of Detroit, Michigan, their associates, successors and assigns, to be hereafter organized into a street railway corporation under the laws of the state of Michigan, and to such corporation, its successors and assigns grantees forever, to locate, establish, construct and operate in a single track railway upon the following streets in the said village of Tecumseh, to-wit: Commencing on Maumee street at the north corporate limits of said village, running thence south on said Maumee street to Mill street, thence along Mill street to Ottawa street, thence south on Ottawa street to the corporation limits of said village. With convenient tracks, turnouts, sidetracks, switches, and Ys, and to run and maintain thereon railway cars for the carriage of passengers, baggage, packages, express, mail and freight, for the period of fifty years from and after the acceptance of this ordinance.

SEC. 2. The tracks of said railway shall be four feet, eight and one-half inches guage; and shall be laid on the middle line of said streets; provided, however, that said tracks shall not be placed upon the bridges of said village, and that upon the slopes of the hills leading southward from the river Raisin and Evans creek, said tracks shall be laid along the gutter line and not in the middle of the street; and further, provided, that the rights hereby given shall be subject to the rights of private owners in the waters, water rights and dams in and about the river Raisin; and further, provided, that in crossing the railroad tracks now upon Cummins street in this village the tracks of said grantees shall be kept within the west half of Ottawa street, and that in making such crossing said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns shall forever, preserve and maintain an unobstructed and safe passage for teams, vehicles and pedestrians along and upon Cummins street at its present grade, where the same crosses Ottawa street. The rails of said railway shall be so laid that the tops thereof shall be flush with the surface of the streets; said tracks shall, at all times, be kept in good repair and in safe condition for the running and operating of cars thereon. At the time of laying said rails in said streets of said village, or in making repairs thereto, the grantees, their associates, successors and assigns shall restore said streets to same condition as before laying of said rails therein; and shall not obstruct or fill up any ditch, tile, culvert, drain or watercourse, and shall remove from said streets all debris caused by the laying or repair of said tracks. Said tracks shall keep to and observe the established grade of all streets wherein laid, except that they may be laid in a subway or over a bridge under or over the present railroad tracks on Cummins street. Said grantees, their successors, assigns or the company or corporation owning and operating the same, shall, whenever ordered by the common council, plank the space between the rails of said tracks and for the space of eighteen inches on each side thereof, with three inch planks, at such place or places as shall be designated by said council, and shall keep and maintain such planking in good repair. In the event of the village paving the streets occupied by said tracks, or changing the grade thereof, then said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, shall, at the same time and at their own expense, pave that part of the street between the said rails and for one foot on each side thereof, with the same materials as used by the village in said streets, and shall make like foundation therefor; and said grantees, their associates or assigns, shall change the grade of said tracks to correspond with the surface of the street. If said grantees, their associates, successor and assigns, or the company owning or operating said railway, shall neglect or refuse to comply with any order of the common council of the said village, made in relation thereto, for seven days after service upon said grantees, their associates, successors or assigns, or the company or corporation owning and operating the same railway, of a duly certified copy of such order, the grantees, their associates, successors or assigns or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, shall be liable to a penalty of twenty-five dollars for each day's neglect to comply with such order of said council, to be recovered by said village in an action of assumpsit, before any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 3. The location of Ys and turnouts shall, from time to time, upon the application of said grantees or their assigns, be designated by the common council of said village. Turnouts for the meeting of cars, shall be laid equally distant from the middle line of said streets. Turnouts or passing tracks shall not be laid across streets at the point of intersection. No side track shall be built or laid in any public street of said village, except at the station of said company and then not crossing any intersecting street. No car shall be permitted to remain on said sidetrack longer than one hour at a time. No steam power shall ever be used on said railway within the limits of said village except for the delivery of supplies at the power-house or car barn of said grantees, should said power house or car barn be located within one and one-half miles from Chicago street in Tecumseh village. The cars and other equipments of said railway shall be comfortable and sufficient for the accommodation of the public. The cars shall, at all times, be entitled to the tracks and any vehicle on said tracks shall turn out without delay, so as to leave said tracks unobstructed. The driver of any vehicle, except that of the fire department as hereinafter provided, neglecting so to do shall be liable to a penalty of ten dollars and costs of prosecution, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ten days, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the descretion of the court.

SEC. 5. No train used for construction purposes shall be allowed to obstruct any intersecting street, nor to interfere with the regular passenger traffic of said road, nor shall interfere unnecessarily with the use of said streets as public thoroughfares.

SEC. 6. Said grantees, their associates, successors or assigns, or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, shall have and maintain in said village, a suitable and convenient waiting room for passengers, and a fixed station for the receipt and storage of baggage, express, mail, freight and packages, and no such baggage, express, mail, freight or packages, shall be left in or deposited on any street of said village, nor so as to obstruct or interfere with the free passage along the sidewalk in front of said station.

SEC. 7. The said grantees, their associates, successors or assigns, or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, shall run and operate or cause to be run and operated, cars or trains which shall pass through said village each way, enroute between the city of Ann Arbor and the city of Adrian, making four round trips between said cities each and every day during the time said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns shall operate said railway under the terms of this grant; unavoidable accident to tracks, cars or machinery, or the action of the elements excepted. If said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, shall fail to comply with the terms of this section, they shall forfeit to said village the sum of twenty-five dollars as a penalty, for each and every days' neglect or failure to run and operate said cars or trains through said village, said penalty to be recovered by said village in an action of assumpsit before any court of competent jurisdiction. And if said neglect or failure to so run cars or trains shall continue for thirty consecutive days, then, and in that event, the common council shall have the power and authority to declare forfeited the rights of said grantees or their assigns and may declare the franchise, leasement or grant hereby given or created, to be void, and may require the removal of all tracks within said village, which shall have been laid under the provisions of this grant.

SEC. 8. The rate of speed of the car or cars on said railway shall not exceed fifteen miles per hour and between Shawnee and Killbuck streets shall not exceed ten miles per hour. All agents and employees engaged in operating said railway shall be sober, careful persons and attentive to the wants of all patrons of said railway; and no conductor shall knowingly permit any aged or infirm person, woman or child to go from or to get upon any car while the same is in motion; and it shall be the duty of all agents, conductors and motormen to keep vigilent watch for all vehicles, trains and pedestrians and for all obstructions on the tracks, and to exercise due care to avoid collisions. Conductors may prohibit disorderly persons, under the influence of liquor, from entering any car and shall have the right to eject such persons therefrom, using as little force as possible, and may call on local peace officers to render such aid as may be necessary, and it shall be the duty of such officers to render such aid.

SEC. 9. All cars shall, at all times, be entitled to the tracks, and work trains or construction trains may be run upon said railway before the opening of the line for traffic and at such times thereafter as shall not interfere with the regular business of the line. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to any fire apparatus, engines, truck or carts attending or going to or from any fire, nor be so construed as to prohibit the laying of hose across the tracks of said railway; and provided further that a street car shall come to a full stop and remain in such position upon the approach from any direction of any fire apparatus while proceeding to a fire or in the direction from which an alarm of fire has been given, until such apparatus shall have passed said car. If hose or lines of hose shall be laid across the tracks of said railway, for use at any fire, all cars or trains, on approaching such hose or lines of hose, shall come to a full stop and remain standing until said hose or lines of hose shall be removed or until permission shall be granted by the chief of the fire department or the person in charge thereof, for such car or train to proceed.

SEC. 10. All cars or trains shall come to a full stop at the intersection of Ottawa street with Chicago street, and shall also stop at the intersection of any street for the reception and discharge of passengers when signaled so to do. Before any car or train shall cross the track of any steam railroad, at grade, such car or train shall be brought to a full stop at least three rods from the tracks of said steam railroad track and shall not cross the same until the conductor thereof shall go upon said steam railroad track and ascertain if train or trains are approaching. No car or train shall stop or stand upon any steam railroad track. Provided also that no car shall be allowed to stop on any crosswalks or on any intersecting street, except to avoid collisions or to prevent damage to persons or property in the street. And when the conductor or motorman of any car is required to stop at the intersection of streets to receive or leave passengers, the car shall be stopped so as to leave the rear platform very slightly on the crossing.

SEC. 11. The cars, after sunset, shall be furnished with signal lights on forward end of forward car and on back end of last car and a gong sounded at least five rods before reaching a street crossing at all times and at all times and places when necessary to warn persons, vehicles or teams driving or approaching the tracks of said company.

SEC. 12. All poles used within the limits of said village shall be located at such places and at such distance from each other as shall be designated by the common council. All poles shall be of the same hight and size as near as may be and shall be kept neatly painted and in a safe condition. All wires carrying electric current, except trolley wires, shall be safely and properly insulated.

SEC. 13. Said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns shall also remove or level all ridges or banks of snow or ice that shall fall or shall be formed upon or between the rails, and for two and one-half feet outside the tracks; such snow and ice as is removed as aforesaid, shall be evenly distributed over the street as shall least obstruct travel thereon, and in case the village council shall deem it necessary to and does remove at any time, a portion of the snow from any street through which said tracks are laid, which snow has been removed from said tracks, then and in that case, the said grantees or their assigns shall bear so much of the expense thereof, determined on the basis of the proportion of the width of the street occupied by said track as compared with the whole width of the street; and if said grantees or their assigns shall neglect to obey any order which the council shall make in relation to such affairs, or any order relative to the repair of the streets, which by the provisions of this ordinance they are obliged to make, the said village council may cause the same to be made and may collect the expense thereof from said grantees or their assigns. Provided the said grantees or their assigns shall keep the space between the track and two and one-half feet each side of the tracks within the village limits, in good repair and free from dirt, rubbish, weeds and other obstructions.

SEC. 14. Nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to deprive said village of the right to authorize other railway companies to cross said tracks of said grantees or their assigns, upon payment to said grantees or their assigns, by such other railway companies, of the actual expense to said grantees of such crossing.

SEC. 15. Nothing in this ordinance shall be so construed as to prevent the village council from authorizing the laying of water or gas pipes, sewers or other conduits or the repairing of the same, and the grantees shall have no claims of damages therefor against the village provided the work of laying of such water, gas pipes, sewers or conduits, or the repair thereof shall be done in such a manner as not to unnecessarily damage such railway or its use.

SEC. 16. Service of any order, ordinance, rule, resolution or regulation, that shall be made from time to time, by said common council in relation to the repair, control or operating of said railway may be made upon said grantees, their associates or assigns or the company or corporation owning or operating said railway, by delivering a duly certified copy thereof to any officer thereof, or to any conductor or motorman in charge of any car or train of said grantees or their assigns, run or operated through said village.

SEC. 17. For each and every violation of the provisions of sections five, six, eight, nine, ten and eleven of this ordinance, the person or persons, conductor or motorman, or any or either of them, shall be liable to a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars and costs of prosecution, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. Provided that if any person found guilty of violating any of the provisions mentioned, shall be punished by a fine or in default of payment thereof, to imprisonment in the county jail, such imprisonment shall continue until the expiration of such sentence or until such fine and costs are fully paid.

SEC. 18. For each and every violation by said grantees, their associates, successors or assigns of the provisions of sections three, four, twelve and thirteen of this ordinance, said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns or the company or corporation owning or operating the same railway, shall be punished by a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars, together with cost of prosecution, before any court of competent jurisdiction. And each and every violation shall be treated as a separate offence.

SEC. 19. By acceptance of the permission and authority hereby granted the said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns hereby agree to indemnify and save harmless the said village of Tecumseh from all loss or expense to which it may be subjected for any damage or destruction or injury that may be done to or suffered by any one in his, her or its person or property by reason of the construction or operation of said railway, where said village is legally liable therefor, or by reason of any negligence, carelessness or omission of said grantees, their associates, successors or assigns, or any of their officers, agents or servants; and the said grantees, their successors and assigns shall be liable to said village of Tecumseh for all costs recovered against it in consequence of any act, neglect or default of said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, or from a breach by its officers, agents or servants, of any of the provisions of this ordinance.

SEC. 20. The fare to be charged for the carriage of any single passenger for one continuous passage over said railway, within the limits of said village, shall not exceed five cents; provided, that children under five years of age, when accompanied by parents or guardians, shall be carried free.

SEC. 21. The village council hereby reserves all rights to make further rules, orders, ordinances and regulations as may from time to time, be deemed necessary to protect the interests, safety, welfare and accommodation of the public in relation to said railway not inconsistent with the provisions of this ordinance; but they shall not reduce the fare herein provided for nor alter nor repeal section one of this act except by and with the consent of said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, or under the power of readjustment provided for in section twenty-two of this ordinance.

SEC. 22. At the termination of the said period of fifty years and thereafter at the end of each period of twenty-five years there shall be a readjustment of the terms and conditions upon which said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, shall have the right to construct and operate the railway herein provided for, upon an equitable and reasonable basis consistent with the growth of population and the advances of science and mechanics.

SEC. 23. The terms, conditions and agreements contained in this ordinance shall constitute a valid and binding contract between said village of Tecumseh and said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, and this ordinance shall take effect upon its acceptance in writing by said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, if said acceptance be filed within two months after the date of its passage; otherwise said ordinance shall be null and void.

SEC. 24. The construction of said railway shall be begun within eighteen months from the acceptance of this ordinance by said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, and said railway shall be constructed and placed in operation between the cities of Adrian and Ann Arbor on or before three years after the passage of this ordinance.

On motion the clerk was allowed a telephone in his office and a bill of $12 for six months' service of same was audited and ordered paid. A bill from Harris & Hiteshu for sundries amounting to $9.15 was also audited and ordered paid.

On motion the council then adjourned.

Roundup of Horsethieves.

Upper Sandusky, O., June 7.—Thirty farmers in the eastern part of Wyandotte county had a running fight with three horsethieves yesterday. Late in the afternoon they were captured a few miles south of here after a chase of nearly 25 miles. Several shots were fired. The thieves are now confined in jail, where they gave their names as George, Cliffe and Mell Geiser.

Snowfall in Dakota.

COMMENCEMENT

Exercises of the Class of 1901 of the Tecumseh High School Held Last Evening at Sutton's Opera House.

SEVENTEEN GRADUATES,

Twelve Young Ladies and Five Young Men Receive Diplomas.

The commencement exercises this year were of unusual interest on account of the large number of graduates. Seventeen received diplomas from the hands of the school board.

The opera house was decorated in red and white, the class colors, and the stage trimmed in greenery of the season. The little tables arranged for the gifts of the graduates showed some flowers among the offerings, but the usual mass of floral decoration was wanting. The house was well filled, every seat in gallery and below being taken while many were compelled to stand during the entire program.

The exercises were opened by a piano solo by Florence Eccles. Rev. Jones gave the invocation and Ethel Hampton the salutatory.

Miss Hampton said they were proud to be the first class of the century. "Let us not stop with a high school education but keep on with study and improvement. Study the good books found in our library. Much benefit can be had from good literature. Welcome to you all. We hope your expectations in us will be realized." Miss Hampton spoke in good voice which reached everyone in the house and made a good impression for the class she represented.

Earle Kniffen in "How Nations Grow," traced the development of peoples from tribal clans to great nations and from petty states to kingdoms and proved the assertion that "No people ever become a great nation without an intellectual head." Many examples were cited to illustrate this point which showed study and thought on the subject. It was a creditable essay well delivered and closed with the injunction to keep ours the "model nation of the 20th century."

Leon J. Boyd took for his subject "From Farm to High School," and proved quite forcibly that educated men are needed on the farms. A college education is not, as some suppose, thrown away unless used in a literary occupation. Farmers need to know something beside the "three Rs." Graduates are needed everywhere today, no more in the professions than on the farms—a knowledge of botany for plant study, a knowledge of literature to get greater enjoyment from his surroundings. The farmer is most successful who has largest knowledge. The address was bright and entertaining and delivered well. The farm communities need many such young men.

Miss Anna Young gave the class history. Although there is very little that a class historian can say to cover themselves with laurels, yet Miss Young acquited herself very creditably. She dealt necessarily with statistics, giving the birth-places of the members, three of whom she credited to Franklin, one to Britton, one to Ohio, one to Manchester and the remainder to Tecumseh. Their average height was 5 feet 6 inches the tallest being 5 ft. 11 in. and shortest 5 ft. 2 in. The average weight is 121 pounds. She quoted the class motto, "The End Crowns the Work," and hoped the end might be as great as the present is full of promise.

Miss Florence Murphy, on "The Value of Trifles," told the story of Robert Bruce and the spider to prove that trifles are important factors in our lives. The Chicago fire was caused by the kick of a cow. The rebellion and massacre in India by some grease on the cartridges. Galvanism was discovered by the twitch of a frog's leg. Close observation of little things is the secret of success. Economize time; minutes are the gold dust of time. Miss Murphy's was a well written article, well delivered.

Miss Edith Rector executed a piano solo which elicited great applause.

Ethelyn Garlinghouse gave "The Results of Expositions." The interchange of friendly rivalry between nations promoted good feeling. They also note and register our progress in art and science. The electrical display at Chicago was compared with that at Philadelphia in 1876 and the great advancement noticed. The Paris Exposition meant much to us in art. It was almost our first recognition in art abroad. We have thus made for ourselves a place in the art world. Miss Garlinghouse spoke well and audibly.

Miss Luella Williamson gave the class prophecy which abounded in hits although unintelligible to the general audience, but whose lively sallies were not wasted upon her victims. But the fair Sybil acquitted herself charmingly.

Forrest D. Macham took the subject of "Independence of Men, Employer and Employed." He said it is impossible for labor and capital to remain on the same level. The more labor advances the more they depend upon each other. Arbitration can seldom be accomplished because when it is time to arbitrate the two sides are already bitterly arrayed against each other. Negotiation must take the place of arbitration and, as labor becomes more intelligent and better informed a new feeling of equality will spring up between employer and employed. Mr. Macham talked well and intelligently upon his subject and made a good impression on his audience.

Miss Ethel Slayton gave a piano solo which was heartily applauded.

Miss Erma Kyle in "What is Civilization?" gave a fine paper full of thought well expressed. "The main factor in civilization is Christian toleration." "This is a time when we pay more for good teachers than for good mixers of drink." "Good lectures are no longer given to empty seats." "Education gives higher interests in life." The trained faculties of the educated help us in every direction. Carnegie's princely gifts are diffusing education everywhere. Booker T. Washington's great work among Freedmen is helping much to extend civilization. Miss Kyle read easily and in good voice.

Miss Lora Slatterly was on the program for a paper on "Matches," but was prevented by illness from reading.

Miss Lena Smith's paper was on "Monuments." She questioned why people should raise to themselves monuments of granite only, when monuments of noble deeds were more to be desired. Napoleon left stains on his name which no monument erected to his memory could obscure. Better to leave deeds of philanthropy by which to be remembered. America's twenty-nine immortals were not persons of wealth, but of deeds. Those who have greatest difficulties to surmount always accomplish most. We must not be discouraged at obstacles.

> "The heights by great man reached and kept
> Are not attained by sudden flight,
> But they, while their companions slept,
> Are toiling upward in the night."

The paper was gracefully written and read and was a credit to the writer.

Miss Isabelle Case entertained the audience with a vocal solo which was much enjoyed and encored.

Willard Hunt talked of Oklahoma like one who had been there. He gave an interesting account of the opening of the country and an opinion as to its future prosperity. He said that education had not been forgotten, for little white schoolhouses dot the country all over. The paper showed the young man well posted on current events concerning the western territory.

Miss Mabel Mills wrote on "Oratorical Culture" and did herself credit. She said that no other accomplishment was in such demand in church, in school, in legislative work. It should be cultivated. It is not natural but the result of labor. Fox's powers were developed by practice. Lincoln wrote and rewrote his Gettysburg address. A cultivation of this talent improves the student. It gives him self possession much to be desired.

Miss Elona Anderson, in her essay on the "Advancement of Women," gave a thoroughly up-to-date address. She sketched briefly the progress made by women during the last century, contrasting their present status with the past. In '69 Michigan's university objected to admittance of women on equal footing with men. Now many schools are open to them. The department of medicine was the first to receive them and the law department the last. But when the history of this century shall have been written, the most conservative will have found a place for women. Miss Anderson's paper was up to the time, well written, well read and well received.

Floyd Slater gave the Valedictory in a very happy, pleasing manner. Acknowledging that whatever we have done has been done by the encouragement of our friends, the only recompense we can make is to do what we can for others. We cannot all be cabin passengers on the Ship of Life; some must be before the mast. Mr. Slater's address was delivered in fine voice with great self possession of manner and the class had reason to be proud of their president.

After the class song was the presentation of diplomas by J. H. Smith in a few appropriate and well chosen remarks, and the audience were dismissed with the benediction by Rev. Jones.

They Were All Tired.

The parlor entertainer has some amusing experiences, although he is not always good natured enough to tell them against himself. One who appreciates a joke, however, relates that on a certain occasion he had been performing at an "at home" and responding to so many encores that the programme became unusually long.

After it was over his hostess with her young daughter came up to him and, after congratulating him on the success of the afternoon, said most cordially:

"Oh, Mr. Blank, come and have some refreshments and sit down for awhile. I know you must be awfully tired."

"Yes," chimed in the sweet young daughter, with the best intentions in the world; "I'm sure we are."—New York Mail and Express.

MICHIGAN'S BUILDING

At the Pan-Am. Will be Dedicated Monday.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 7.—Michigan's state building at the Pan-American exposition will be dedicated Monday, and from that time on will be the headquarters for all visitors from the Wolverine state.

Gov. Bliss, Washington Gardner and other members of congress will be here to take part in the program which will mark the opening, as will also all the state commissioners. The address of the day will be made by Gardner. Gov. Bliss will give a short talk, and several of the commissioners may add a few remarks. The addresses will be followed by a light luncheon served to invited guests.

Michigan will be among the first of the states in having its building in readiness. It has been in course of construction several months, and the last artisan quit it Tuesday night. The furniture is all in and the commissioners are busy getting it in place.

BIG FIRE AT FENNVILLE.

Little Village Given a Severe Blow Yesterday Morning.

Fennville, Mich., June 7.—This little village of 500 inhabitants was given a severe blow yesterday morning by fire. Shortly after midnight flames were discovered in the grocery store of Clifford Fosdick. A strong southwest wind was blowing and it looked as if the whole village would be wiped out. The hand engine was soon at work, but it had not been playing on the fire long before it gave out, and the only salvation left was the bucket brigade. With this ancient method of fire fighting the citizens did valiant service and succeeded in stopping the progress of the flames at Hanson's brick livery. The total losses will foot up $35,000 with about $15,000 insurance.

The business houses on the opposite side of the street from the fire lost heavily in plate glass. The burned structures will be rebuilt at once.

Strawberries Ruined.

St. Joseph, Mich., June 7.—Jacob Seel of this city, one of the best-known fruit growers in the state, returned from a visit in the southern section of the county. He reports that acres of strawberries have been ruined by "rush," which formed on the plants the last few days, caused by continued cold rains. The loss to growers represents many thousands of dollars. With the additional acreage of strawberries planted the past year it is agreed that the St. Joseph district will produce the largest crop in the history of the state.

Caught a Big Fish.

Orion, Mich., June 7.—Edward Perry, of Oxford was fishing in Lake Orion when he caught a magnificent bass weighing 6½ pounds and measuring 22 inches in length. This is the largest bass ever caught in the lake. An eastern magazine has a standing offer of $1,000 for a bass weighing seven pounds caught in any Michigan lake.

Prominent Attorney Dead.

Saranac, Mich., June 7.—Fred H. Stowe, one of the prominent attorneys of Ionia county, died here yesterday morning after a lingering sickness of two years.

Finished Its Work.

Washington, June 7.—The Chilean claims commission will adjourn sine die on the 18th inst, leaving behind it not a single unadjudicated claim. It was the failure of the first commission to dispose of more than a moiety of the claims presented that led to the creation of a new commission.

Silk Thief Sentenced.

Quincy, Ill., June 7.—Wm. F. Davis, alias "Bloomington Red," alleged to have been the leader of a gang of silk thieves who operated extensively in the central west, was convicted here and sentenced to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary on the charge of robbing a local concern of $4,000 worth of silk. Davis was arrested on Christmas eve in Chicago after a sensational fight with the police.

IN OLDEN TIMES

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a heartache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III, of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, every time you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over, you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

WOMAN

IS LIKE A DELICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

In good condition she is sweet and lovable, and sings life's song on a joyful harmonious string. Out of order or unstrung, there is discordance and unhappiness. Just as there is one key note to all music so there is one key note to health. A woman might as well try to fly without wings as to feel well and look well while the organs that make her a woman are weak or diseased. She must be healthy inside or she can't be healthy outside. There are thousands of women suffering silently all over the country. Mistaken modesty urges their silence. While there is nothing more admirable than a modest woman, health is of the first importance. Every other consideration should give way before it. Bradfield's Female Regulator is a medicine for women's ills. It is the safest and quickest way to cure leucorrhea, falling of the womb, nervousness, headache, backache and general weakness. You will be astonished at the result, especially if you have been experimenting with other so-called remedies. We are not asking you to try an uncertainty. Bradfield's Regulator has made happy thousands of women. What it has done for others it can do for you. Sold in drug stores for $1 a bottle.

Peculiarities of Caracas.

"The morning after our arrival at the hotel in Caracas," says W. E. Curtis, "I called for a glass of milk while dressing. On every subsequent morning during our stay a glass of milk was brought to me at precisely the same hour without instructions, and although the servant was told several times that it was not wanted she did not appear to understand and continued to bring it just the same.

"In the hotel were electric bells. The first day I rang for something, and a certain boy answered the summons. The next morning I rang again and again, and no one responded. Finally I went into the dining room and found there half a dozen servants.

"'Didn't you hear my bell ring?' I asked.

"'Si, senor' (yes, sir), was the reply.

"'Then why didn't you answer it?'

"'The boy that answers your excellency's bell has gone to market with the manager.'

"'But you knew he was not here, and you should have come in his place.'

"'No, senor. It is his occupation to answer your bell. I answer the bell of the gentleman in the next room.'

"And as long as I remained in that hotel my bell was answered only by the one particular boy. If he was not in, I could ring for an hour without receiving a response, although the house was full of idle servants."

Edison and Platinum.

A story will serve to throw light upon Edison's character. At one time there was a great fear in the scientific world that the deposits of platinum were about to become extinct. Edison thereupon organized a correspondence bureau and sent letters to every American consul upon the globe, to British consuls in ports where the United States had no representative and to scientific men in every land. The letter gave a clear statement respecting the metal, how and where it was found and might be found, how it could be identified and treated and much other information.

In each letter were inclosed samples of platinum as found in the various rock beds. This may seem to be a small undertaking, but when it is remembered that the letters were sent off by the thousands, that the postage was 10 cents to each letter and that the pieces of platinum inclosed were almost as valuable as metallic gold, the cost of the achievement is readily seen. While he did not succeed in greatly increasing the output of platinum, he set at rest all fear of its extinction and thus earned the gratitude of every scientific investigator.—Frank Leslie's Magazine.

The Place Was Filled.

At a seance the other day, when the lights had been turned low, the medium was describing a tall, dark eyed, handsome spirit, with long moustaches and his hair parted carefully down the center, that was hovering round a middle aged but elderly looking man, when he burst suddenly into tears. Heart-rending sobs shook his thin frame.

"George, George!" he cried. "Why, oh, why did you leave me to the misery of these past years?"

"Then you knew him?" asked the medium.

"Knew him?" murmured the down-hearted man. "I saw him daily for months and months. Oh, George," he continued, "why did you die?"

"My good man," pleaded the medium, "you must pull yourself together. Though his loss to you must have been a great one, you may yet meet another friend who will fill his place."

"No, no!" he cried. "His place is filled."

"Filled! Why, what do you mean?" asked the medium, astonished.

"He was my wife's first husband!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Fully Explained to John.

"John," she said as she toyed with one of his coat buttons, "this is leap year, is it not?"

"Yes, Mamie," he answered as he looked fondly down on her golden head that was pillowed on his manly bosom.

"This is the year when the proposing is done by the young ladies?"

"Yes."

"I hope you don't expect me to propose to you?"

"Why, Mamie, dear, I never gave the matter a thought. I—er—to tell the truth, I've only known you for—that is to say"—

"I'm glad you didn't expect me to propose. I'm not that kind, I hope. No, John, dearest, I couldn't be so immodest. I'm going to let you do the proposing yourself in the old fashioned way. The old fashioned way is good enough for me." And the gentle maiden gave her lover a beaming smile, and the young man rejoiced that he had found such a treasure of modesty.—London Tit-Bits.

Fattening English Quails.

A curious account of how quails are fattened for the market is given in a London paper. It appears that quails, being regular in their habits, always feed directly they wake up in the morning. They are therefore put in a large cellar lit only by electric light. In the dark they go to sleep, but directly the light is turned on they wake up and breakfast. This process is repeated time after time, and the birds, always laboring under the delusion that morning has arrived, once more breakfast, over and over again. They have been known to do so six times in an afternoon.—Philadelphia Record.

A Careful Mother.

This is a story one woman is never tired of telling of a mother whose child had been ill with scarlet fever. She always emphasizes the fact, too, that the mother was possessed, upon ordinary occasions, with good sense and would be called a more than ordinarily intelligent woman. She was, too, a more than ordinarily careful mother, and it was as an illustration of this that she told the story of the care of her boy to the friend who now repeats it. Not as much was known about sanitary conditions then as now, but it was not in a time of primitive ignorance.

"I always believe in taking the greatest care to prevent contagion in any disease," said the mother, "and with the fever I was extraordinarily careful. Why, when the skin began to peel I rubbed the child down with my hands every day to remove every loose fragment, let it fall into a cloth, and then I gathered it up carefully and shook it out the window."

The listener to that story laughed then and there, to the great surprise and indignation of the mother, and laughs now at the ridiculous ignorance of a woman who claimed to have even a vestige of common sense.—New York Times.

How He Cured the Bell.

The late Father Boyle, who for years was one of the most prominent and popular Catholic priests in Washington, had a great reputation as a wit. Some of his most intimate friends were Protestants and members of the Protestant clergy. A few months before his death he erected a missionary chapel down by the navy yard and bought at a junkshop an old bell which had been discarded by one of the Protestant churches. He sent the bell to a foundry in Georgetown and had several inches of metal pared off the rim. Having thus got rid of a crack, the harsh and discordant tones of the bell became soft and sweet. Meeting a Presbyterian minister not long after, Father Boyle called his attention to the change, and the latter could scarcely believe it was the same bell.

"What in the world did you do to that bell," inquired the Presbyterian pastor, "to cause such a change in the tone?"

"We blessed it and blessed it and blessed it until we got the Presbyterian devil out of it," retorted Father Boyle, "and then it sounded all right."—Washington Star.

I want to recommend it to every family and advise them to keep Banner Salve on hand, as it is a sure remedy for scalds or any sores." J. J. Orr.

FOR A LONG STRIKE

Machinists Making Preparations for a Bitter Struggle

NON-UNION MEN WILL BE PAID

Strikers, Armed With Cameras, Surrounded Hamilton, O., Shops and Took Snap Shots of All Who Returned to Work.

Toronto, June 11.—The International Machinists' association in convention yesterday decided to extend financial aid to non-union men who went out with members of the association. President O'Connell stated that officials were not restricted as to the amount non-union men should receive, but he added that in any event it would be sufficient to induce them to remain in the fight to the end. Since May 20 over $400,000 has been distributed among strikers, and as yet no regular system of benefits has gone into force.

A resolution was passed asking the American Federation of Labor to levy an assessment as provided for in their constitution to provide funds for the strikers. In the event of a long drawn out fight an appeal for aid will also be made to the trade organizations of Great Britain, who were assisted by the machinists in their struggle for an eight-hour day.

Regarding the question of finances, President O'Connell stated that a special strike fund amounting to $450,000 was still intact.

The convention almost unanimously voted down a resolution pledging the association to socialism. It was also decided that a certificates of death from a christian scientist doctor would not be recognized in the future in a claim for death benefits.

The committee on laws has finished its labors. The constitutions of local lodges were adopted when the question arose as to the desirability of removing headquarters of the orders from Washington to some more central point, Chicago or Cleveland being mentioned.

New York, June 11.—At a meeting of the Central Federated union, the privilege of the floor was given to a committee from the International Association of Machinists, who asked permission to lay the case of the striking machinists before the body. A. Kunzelman of this committee said that the principal point now was to keep 20,000 non-union men who had gone on a strike with the union men from rushing back to work.

He said that the fight would be a long and bitter one, and asked the central body to lend its aid, financially and otherwise. It would require $150,000 a week, he said, to pay strike benefits for the non-union men. The meeting voted to give $100 directly to the machinists, and adopted a resolution directing the secretary to write to all the affiliated unions asking for financial assistance for the strikers.

President Truesdele of the Lackawanna railroad, being asked as to the truth of the report from Scranton, Pa., that he had resigned, states that there is absolutely nothing in it; that it is only one of the many falsehoods that are being circulated among the company's shop men now on a strike, by the leaders of the strikers, for the purpose of misleading them and to keep them in ignorance of the real situation.

Mr. Truesdele, being asked as to the report from Scranton that the company is about to make application to the striking employes for a settlement of the question at issue, said: "This report is equally false. The company has no proposition whatever to make to its men. The cause of the strikers is lost and the leaders know it, but for the purpose of bolstering up the men they are circulating all sorts of false information and reports among them to discourage those of them who want to return to work from doing so. The company's business during the past month has been much larger than during any similar month in its history, and its engines and cars are in condition to handle its large traffic promptly and to the entire satisfaction of its patrons."

Hamilton, O., June 11.—Only about 50 machinists went to work under the ultimatum of the manufacturers to either work or remove their tools. The strikers, armed with cameras, surrounded the various shops and took pictures of all who entered. There was no disorder

Quick Relief for Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parsons, Kansas, writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar and it has never failed to give immediate relief." J. J. Orr.

The lack of energy you feel, the backache and a run down condition generally, all mean kidney disorder. Foley's Kidney Cure will restore your strength and vigor by making the kidneys well. Take no substitute. J. J. Orr.

PORTO RICAN AFFAIRS.

Gov. Allen Gives the Free Trade Problem Earnest Consideration.

San Juan de Porto Rico, June 11.—Since Gov. Allen has returned here he has given the free trade problem earnest consideration. Treasurer Hollander has presented him with a report showing in detail the workings of his new revenue act. He shows that when the law shall have gone into full force July 1 the island revenues will be sufficient for the island's maintenance without the customs duties on trade between Porto Rico and the United States.

The governor shows some hesitancy in acting, as he is undecided when it will be proper to call the legislature in extraordinary session for the purpose of declaring that the island has in operation adequate system for collecting revenues, as it has the power to do under the Foraker organic act. Then, to make free trade a reality, for the act to remain, will be for the president to so proclaim. Were it known now that free trade would be declared on a given date, the island sugar still unshipped would be cornered by speculators to the detriment of the planters. This Gov. Allen wishes to avoid. It is safe to say that the legislature will be called to meet in extra session as soon after July 1 as is practicable. July 25 has been suggested. By recent act of the landing ago's day, the feast of the patron saint ago's day, the feast of thepatron saint of Spain has been made a legal holiday.

The announcement that the government was preparing to bring about free trade coincided with the decision of supreme court that the tariff is valid. The two came together but had no connection, as the governor and his cabinet had been considering the matter of free trade long before the supreme court's decision was known. Porto Ricans have been clamoring for free trade since the beginning, and nothing, unless it be American citizenship, would please them more.

AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVES.

More Expensive to Maintain Them Than Other Engines.

Paris, June 11.—The assistant chief engineer of the Orleans railway when questioned regarding the report that the company was dissatisfied with the American locomotives purchased last year said:

"All thirty have been running since November, and there is no idea of withdrawing them. But it is true that they burn more coal and that it is slightly more expensive to maintain them than other locomotives doing the same work.

"They were purchased because they were needed in a hurry. For this reason the company does not regret the purchase; but the experiment is not encouraging and the company does not contemplate further purchases except in similar circumstances, as the French locomotives are equally satisfactory and more economical.

"The company experimented with American coal last year, when quite a quantity was purchased under favorable conditions. It proved satisfactory. The company is closely watching this question and is prepared to make further purchases of American coal whenever prices will allow."

WILL FIGHT THE TRUST.

Largest Linseed Mill in the World at Toledo.

Toledo, June 11.—The land was purchased on Saturday for the largest linseed oil mill in the world, which will fight the trust.

Stakes for the buildings were set out yesterday.

E. Lewis Metzger of Philadelphia is the person appearing in the transaction, but it is understood that with him is associated Guy H. Major, formerly mayor of this city, now president of the American Linseed Co. Both are practical linseed oil men, and the new mill is to be erected as speedily as possible.

An Old Landmark Destroyed.

Bayfield, Wis., June 11.—The old Roman Catholic church at La Pointe was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The church was an ancient landmark and had been visited by hundreds of tourists annually. The original church was built in 1835 by Fr. Baraga and rebuilt at a later date.

It contained an ancient painting, "the descent from the cross," which Indian tradition says was a gift to the La Pointe mission in 1669 by Father Marquette. It is the opinion of some that the picture was stolen and the church set on fire to cover up the loss.

Too Rich for Their Blood.

Traverse City, Mich., June 11.—The street fair scheduled for week after next has been canceled by the city fathers because it was learned from Findlay that the "couchee-couchee" and similar accompaniments made it an undesirable attraction.

A Danger.

"Do you ever look back on your life and reflect on the opportunities you have missed?" inquired the melancholy man.

"No, sir," answered the bustler. "It would be just my luck to miss some more while I was brooding over what can't be helped."—Washington Star.

LOOKING FOR PEACE

Queen Wilhelmina Lends Her Aid in That Direction

MRS. BOTHA WILL BE THERE

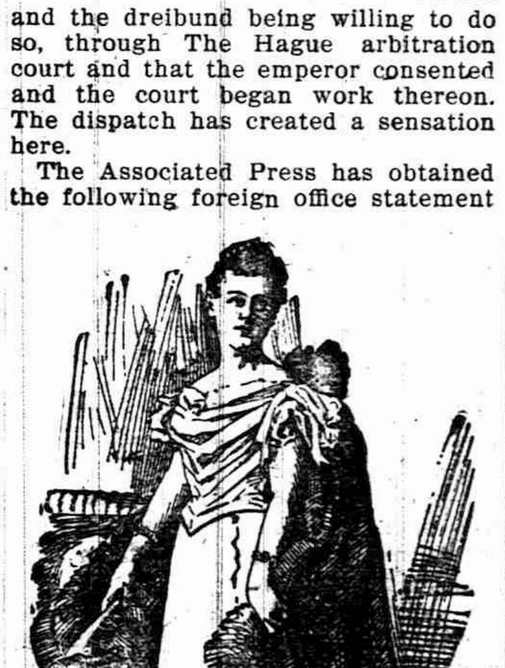
It Is Now Said That the Boer Side Has Asked The Hague Arbitration Court to Lend Its Aid to End the War.

London, June 11.—Kitchener, in a dispatch from Pretoria under yesterday's date, says the numbers of Boers killed, imprisoned or surrendered during the last month totaled 2,640. From June 1 to June 9, 26 Boers were killed, 4 were wounded, 409 were made prisoners, and 33 surrendered, and 651 rifles, 115,550 rounds of ammunition, 120 wagons and 4,000 horses were captured.

The Sun hears that Mrs. Botha starts Wednesday for The Hague, where Krüger has been summoned to attend a conference of Boer agents in Europe and the United States to consider the reports that Mrs. Botha has brought from her husband.

Berlin, June 11.—The Kleines Journal prints a dispatch from The Hague saying that Queen Wilhelmina's recent visit here was meant to obtain Emperor William's consent to end the South African war, both the zweibund and the dreibund being willing to do so, through The Hague arbitration court and that the emperor consented and the court began work thereon. The dispatch has created a sensation here.

The Associated Press has obtained the following foreign office statement which is authorized by Count Von Buelow, the imperial chancellor:

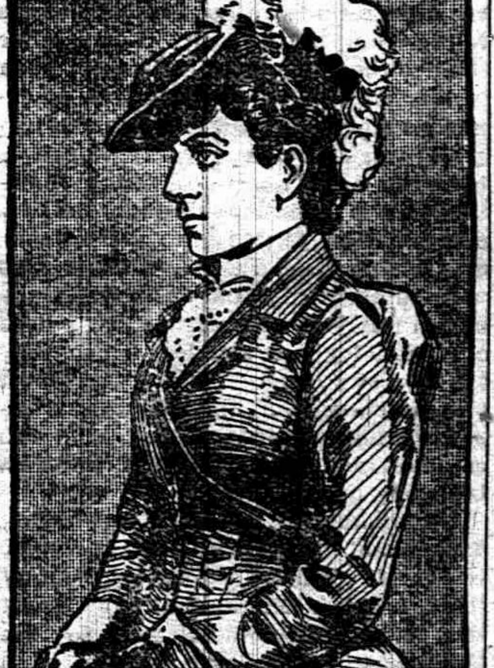


WILHELMINA, QUEEN OF HOLLAND.

Neither Britain, France nor Russia ever approached Germany to participate in any action aiming at ending the South African war. Germany has all along distinguished between offering her good offices and intervention. To render her good offices would be possible if both parties to the war requested it; but it will be remembered that Britain only joined The Hague conference on condition that the Boer states were excluded.

There is no doubt that Kruger, who is a serious statesman, came to Europe to obtain the good offices of several of the powers to end the war; but there is also no doubt that Britain does not want their good offices. At least it is true that since the South African war began Britain has never either verbally or in writing, confidentially or officially, broached such an idea.

It is quite possible that the Boer side has now formally asked The Hague arbitration court to lend its aid to end the war somehow and that the court has held a session regarding the matter; but that, of course, is entirely different from any serious steps to end the war.



MRS. LOUIS BOTHA.

The Hague, June 11.—Kruger and Dr. Leyds arrived here yesterday. They drove from the railroad station at Hilversum Junction in a closed carriage, and are staying at the residence of Wolmarans, one of the Boer peace envoys.

Cape Town, June 11.—The military authorities are enforcing stringent restrictions in the distribution of food stuffs northward from De Aar and southward from Bulawayo. Only essentials are permitted to be distributed, and these only in limited quantities.

Lost Ship Turns Up.

NEEDS BRACING UP.

Great Britain Needs It in New Industrial Problems.

London, June 11.—Robert P. Porter, speaking before the Chesterfield chamber of commerce on "The epidemic of industrial pessimism in the United Kingdom," said:

"It is extremely doubtful whether the United States are prepared now to compete in the markets of the world in manufacture except in iron and steel machinery and the coarser grades of cotton goods. The tariff indicates that American economists and statesmen do not believe the United States are yet able to take an industrial position by the side of Great Britain."

Mr. Porter expressed the opinion that Great Britain's backwardness in electrical science was "due more to absurd restrictions and laws than to lack of enterprise," and he said that Great Britain "needs bracing up in new, not old, industrial problems."

"Those who argue that Great Britain's commercial supremacy is at an end because the value of American exports or the total of the foreign commerce of the United States exceeds Great Britain's for one year," continued Mr. Porter, "might find the argument upset by the first bad harvest. Many complicated economic problems must be faced in the United States. The magnitude of American undertakings may be impressive, but these have corresponding dangers.

"In spite of European mutterings there is little likelihood of a combined European tariff war against the United States because the nations concerned are so hopelessly involved in tariff conflicts between themselves. Great Britain's free trade policy may have injured her home industries, but it has strengthened her foreign trade. On the other hand the United States are finding considerable difficulty, both at home and abroad in negotiating commercial treaties."

Y. M. C. A. AT BOSTON.

Delegates Present From All Over the Civilized World.

Boston, June 11.—Streaming into Boston from nearly every quarter of the globe came delegates to the semi-centennial and international jubilee convention of the Y. M. C. A. of North America. Practically every civilized country in the world will be represented today when the convention is called to order in the exhibition hall of the Mechanics' building, and confidence is expressed that there will be nearly 5,000 delegates from different associations in attendance during the six days the convention is in session.

Those who reached here yesterday afternoon scarcely paused to shake the dust of travel from their clothes before appearing at the headquarters, where a large force of officials was ready to assign suitable boarding places and attend to the needs of the visitors. Not a delegate left the building without a thorough inspection of the jubilee exhibit in one of the large halls of Mechanics building. This consists of photographs of Y. M. C. A. camps, athletic teams, gymnasiums and diagrams of work done in bible study, sent by associations in all sections of the country. Awards of merit, consisting of blue ribbons and red ribbons for first and second prizes, had been distributed among the different classes of exhibits.

COL. BRECKINRIDGE'S OPINION.

On the Future Course of the National Democratic Party.

Lexington, Ky., June 11.—In reply to a letter asking for his views on the reorganization of the democratic party and future issues, Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, former democratic congressman, says:

"The American people will never consent to such legislation concerning the currency as will put into a statute the views of Mr. Bryan. It is equally true that the American people will not approve of the territorial policy advocated by Mr. Bryan. For the next few years the currency issue and the expansion issue, tendered by the democratic party and accepted by the republican party, have been settled."

In the same letter he says: "We are therefore confronted with this actual state of facts. It is impossible to win without such a nominee and platform as will secure the support of those democrats who refused to vote for Mr. Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and it is also impossible to win without the cordial support of the regular democratic party. It has occurred to me that the issue in 1904 might be our relations with our new possessions. That the principle promulgated by the supreme court in the late opinions will be accepted by the people is certain."

After outlining the questions involved Col Breckinridge says: "To adopt this policy does not require that any democrat should retract any utterance heretofore made, or apologize for any course heretofore pursued."

MRS. YATES HELD

In Connection With the Death of Jasper N. Wright

TOLD CONFLICTING STORIES

Mrs. Yates Kicked When Put Under Arrest and Shouted That There Were Five Children to be Taken Care Of.

St. Louis, Mich., June 11.—The finding of the body of Jasper N. Wright in the woods was followed by the arrest of Mrs. Charles Yates. The theory of the prosecution is that Wright was smothered by a carpet found nearby. The defense will try to prove that death was caused by heart disease.

The coroner's inquest began at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Yates was called to the stand and stated that she stepped on the body while gathering wild flowers, and was so frightened that she ran back home and told her husband, who, with a neighbor, found the body. The dead man's watch was still running, the time being 9:55. Mrs. Yates admitted in response to questions that she knew the dead man, and that they had had conversations about which her husband knew nothing. She admitted going to Wright's house and then broke down and sobbed violently. She was excused until after dinner and her husband called.

Mr. Yates said he did not know Wright except by sight, and stated that he was aware of gossip which connected the name of his wife with that of Wright. In response to questions he said his wife had promised not to go to Wright's house again. He admitted there had been a little family difficulty with Wright, and said that when the body was discovered he did not know the man, although they had lived as neighbors.

After dinner Mrs. Yates was again called to the stand, and at first contradicted herself and her husband. Then she broke down and confessed that she was present when Wright died. She disclaims any hand in his death. She said that she met him by appointment in the woods. Wright's brother testified that Yates had a grudge against him.

When Mrs. Yates was ordered under arrest she shouted: "Who's that you're arresting; remember there are five young children to care for."

The coroner's inquest has been adjourned until June 13.

Hannan, an influential farmer in Benton township, this county, gave Harry Martin, a St. Joseph youth, a thrashing, and chased Edward Robb of Benton Harbor for two miles. He was assisted by his son and Bun Wescott, a former fiance of the young lady.

Robb and Martin were returning home in company with Miss Hannan in a livery rig and had just turned in at the gate when the father, whip in hand, commenced slashing right and left. The youths, in their flight to avoid the lash, left the rig and horses to the excited father, who returned them to the livery.

Owosso, Mich., June 11.—Mrs. Matthew Shay and Mrs. Robert Bowles fought a vicious battle on Washington street in the presence of a big crowd. They went at it hammer and tongs on the sidewalk and both soon had bloody noses and scratched faces, while Mrs. Shay was shy some of her hair. No one attempted to part them, but they ran when the marshal put in his appearance. No arrests. The women are near neighbors. They have quarreled before.

At the Pan-American Turned Over to Governor Bliss Yesterday.

Buffalo, June 11.—The Michigan building at the Pan-American exposition was formally dedicated yesterday. Contractor G. J. Vinton of Detroit, at 11 o'clock, turning over the keys to George H. Barbour of Detroit, president of the Michigan commission, who in turn gave them to Gov. A. T. Bliss. Mr. Bliss responded in behalf of the state.

The governor called attention to the fact that Michigan has made a good showing in so short a time in the erection of a building. He threw a bouquet at New York state for its enterprise and predicted that outside of the home state, Michigan would send more visitors than any other commonwealth.

Congressman Washington Gardner delivered the principal address of the day, commenting upon the worth of the exposition, its meaning to Michigan and to all Americans, and spoke of the relations of Michigan to Buffalo and the east.

The same insects stripped the trees of foliage through the same section last spring. Many orchards are entirely leafless and look as though fire had swept through them.

COURTED DEATH.

Young Couple Found Dead in a Chicago Hotel.

Chicago, June 11.—Side by side, each with a bullet wound in the temple, the dead bodies of L. Hartman and his wife were found in their bed at the Great Northern hotel last evening. The room showed no evidences of a struggle, both lifeless forms were composed, the covering of the bed well tucked about them, but the revolver clutched in the right hand of the husband told the story of the double tragedy.

Of the pair that courted death so successfully nothing is known by the managers of the hotel beyond a report that they had wealthy connections in New York and that the woman apparently was once an actress under the stage name of Rose Violet.

Hartman and his wife registered at the hotel June 6, giving as their address New York.

Early Sunday night they retired to their apartments and nothing was seen of them until last evening, when they were found dead in bed.

At midnight it was learned that the dead woman was Rose Le Sebre, a variety actress. Thefather of the dead man is said to be a wealthy tobacco dealer in business in New York city.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY
CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.
AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.
COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"Oh, wait, Mrs. Blake. If you must go, I'll—I'll escort you."

"Yes," said Miss Leroy firmly, "and take me too." Saying which, she started her escort almost on a run.

"Pet—Kate—indeed I protest. Indeed you must not go!" called Mrs. Mainwaring loudly.

"Aw, Kate, don't be so idiotic," shouted the major, but all to no purpose. "Pet" and her obedient Æsculapius were already in swift pursuit and, if not out of hearing, out of sight.

And then, all of a sudden, the eastward gable ends of the barracks, the east side of the guardhouse tower, the topmast of the tall white flagstaff, were all for one brief instant flashed on the night in a lurid glare and as suddenly died out of sight. Away over beyond the edge of the bluff a dull, smothered, booming sound smote the wintry air, and something shook the windows and caused the earth to tremble. Then a carbine cracked and a sentry yelled, half stifled; then came a distant sound of crackling, like pistol shots; a trumpet pealed and sounds of rush and scurry followed. There was only one explanation—the magazine.

CHAPTER X.

It was 11:30 that night when Corporal Judkins, posting his relief, came stumbling along the rough ground below the "bench" and turned into the flat between the quartermaster's haystacks and the stables. No. 5 he had posted at the east gate and picked up the shivering sentry who for two mortal hours had been swearing and trotting up and down in vain effort to keep warm. No. 6, down among the shadows of the stacks and stables, was not so easy to find. When at last his challenge was heard, he leaped from the shelter of the very stack that had called forth the colonel's condemnation that evening at stables, and, between cold and excitement—or something, was incoherent in his formula for receiving relief, and had to be sharply prompted by the corporal in turning over his orders. "What's the matter with you, Scully?" snarled the corporal. "You talk as if you'd been asleep. Turn over your orders, man, and don't keep us shivering here."

The tall soldier who was to relieve him stood patiently, with his carbine at port. Silently he listened to the mumbled words: "Allow no one to approach the stables or stacks with lighted pipe or cigar. Allow no vehicles to be driven to or from the stables or horses taken out except in presence of a commissioned officer, stable sergeant or noncommissioned officer of the guard. Be on the alert for fires and keep special lookout for the sparks from laundresses' quarters when they start their fires in the morning"— And then Judkins cut him short.

"You've got 'em twisted, but you know them all, don't you, Hunter?"

The tall recruit nodded.

"Take your post," said the corporal. "Fall in, Scully. Darned lot of use you'd be tonight. You smell as if you'd been drinking."

"I wish I had, bedad," shivered No. 2. "Go on, corporal, or we'll never get thawed." And in a moment more the tramp of the footsteps died away and Hunter was alone.

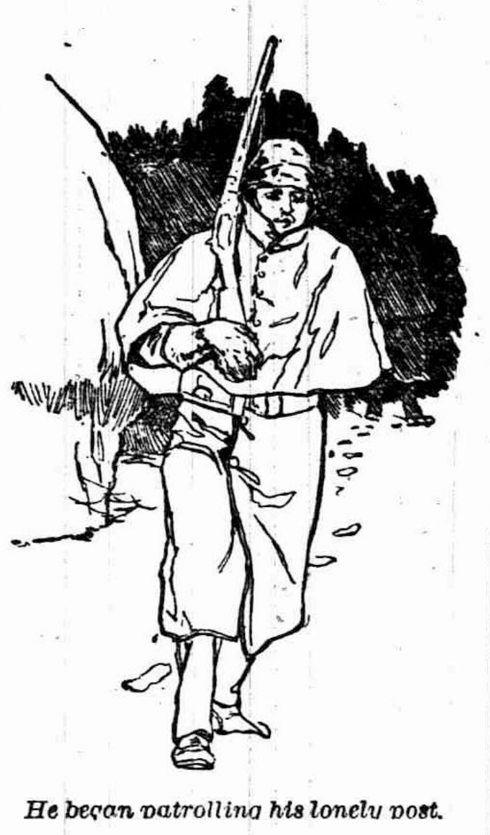
He was warmly clad, for in addition to the fur cap and gauntlets heavy overshoes had been added to the soldier's equipment for winter duty dismounted, and as there was every indication of snow the guard had been ordered to wear them this night. Then in Ray's troop they had a knack of keeping hot coffee in the kitchen on the bitter winter nights for the benefit of their guards, and though it reminded him but feebly of the fragrant Mocha of other days and climes it had cheered him not a little, and he felt alert and vigorous and independent as he began patrolling his lonely post. Along the bluff to the westward the black bulk of the barracks loomed up against the starry sky. Between him and them were close at hand the huge haystacks, and then the scattered huts and cottages of the married men. In one or two of these faint night lights were glowing. Several children had been ailing, and there were anxious hearts among the lowly. But there were no little ones at Merriweather's, yet a dim light shone from the southward window.

What manner of man was Merriweather anyway? pondered the sentry, as, pacing briskly up the open space before the stables, he went over in mind the adventure now nearly two weeks gone by. Never once, by word or act, had the sergeant shown the faintest intention to seek satisfaction for the blow that had floored him. True, he never spoke to Hunter, never seemed to see him, and the accident to Stella and himself might, despite all the sergeant's protests to his captain, have been the result of his design. Once, twice, Hunter had seen Mrs. Merriweather, but at such a distance that speech with her was out of the question, even had he sought it. But she had seen him and looked long and meaningly at him, and he could not but know it. For some reason Merriweather saw fit to hide the facts connected with his absence from tattoo that night, and, so long as no one in authority questioned, it was not Hunter's province to explain.

Keeping vigilant lookout on every side as he paced up and down, the soldier gave his thoughts free rein. He was glad to be alone to think and plan. There was no glamour about soldiering as he had found it, and it was useless denying even to himself that he would gladly have recalled his rash enlistment, but that being impossible grit and pride asserted themselves and bade him stand to his guns and give no sign. Barring the inquisitive proddings of the men, he had had no active annoyances after the first few days. Would be tormentors respected a man who was so free with his fists—and his money. His officers, except Mainwaring, had treated him with grave and distant courtesy, for of Brady he had seen nothing at all until this day. News from home and abroad he had had none and wanted none. It was his purpose to shut himself out from the old world for good and all. Parents he had lost in early boyhood. Brothers and sisters he had none. Sweethearts—two. One—the first—his senior by at least four years, and now a staid wife and mother. The second might or might not be wearing a coronet by this time. His grace of Lancaster was on his last legs, and his eldest hope, Lord Lunemouth, on his last lung, when Gray left Switzerland in April. That "Amy, shallow hearted," had wedded Rokeby by this time was possible, if not probable. There were New York papers in the post library, but Hunter had seen none, would see none.

In his stern renunciation of the world, the flesh and the devil of his old life Trooper Hunter would admit no interest in the doings of Gotham. The one thing that bound him to the old life was the knowledge that up to October at least his fond old uncle was still in the land of the living. A stroke of some kind had prostrated him before Gray's return from abroad. Physicians had prescribed a long sea voyage. Mr. and Mrs. Darcy Hunter had sailed for North Cape—had gone thence to some German spa. His health was shattered, his mind almost a blank. She was still in the prime of life. He, said the last news Darcy had of him before starting for the wide west, hardly recognized his attendants. She bore her sorrows with the patient resignation of the Christian who knows there's life for her beyond the grave—of a departed husband.

Of the remnant of his fortune Gray had still a few thousand dollars banked where it would be safe until sorely needed. Under an humble roof within the limits of Butte were stored certain trunks containing civilian clothing and things he valued. Here at barracks he had only his soldier outfit of uniform, with the addition of better underwear and shoes than were issued by Uncle Sam. One poor fellow and his suffering wife at least were the better for the strange coming of this eccentric. The starving tramp who boarded the train that night at Willow Springs had now a roof over his head and hers, and food, fire and clothing. She was sufficiently recovered to take in washing, for Chinamen were unpopular if not unprofitable servants just then in Wyoming, and he, the starveling of that night on the train, was once more a carpenter, his tools out of pawn and he no longer out of work. That man's actual misery and suffering, all for the lack of a few dollars, no more than he, Hunter Gray, had been accustomed to throw away on cigars or sundries in the course of a month, had opened the eyes of the world weary traveler and given him food for thought and spur to action.



He began patrolling his lonely post.

One anxiety had oppressed him since his voluntary entrance upon the task of training Stella, a duty which need have occupied but a few days had it not been for that untoward mishap. She fought shy of the bar for several lessons thereafter, connecting it and the flapping blanket unerringly with her violent fall. Hunter's anxiety was that any afternoon when so occupied he might find Mrs. Mainwaring and her niece among the lookers on, and he shrank from recognition. He had even sought to get his captain to change the hour to morning, but there had been fine, open weather, and Atherton lost no opportunities for battalion drills. Hunter took to these, despite the crowding and squeezing when in line, like a duck to the water, but all the same he would have preferred giving Stella her lesson when he knew Miss Leroy to be engaged at the hospital, for the fame of that benevolent young lady's work had spread throughout the barracks as well as the quarters.

And it was of her and that odd introduction he was thinking now, as he briskly tramped up and down, peering among the haystacks and stables. Just before the midnight call his post had been visited by the sergeant of the guard, who inquired as to his orders and bade him look out any moment for Captain Blake or Lieutenant Brady. The midnight call of the sentries went round in rather slipshod fashion, thanks to the wind, but no sooner had Hunter shouted the prolonged "All's well" than he wished he could recall it. Not a suspicious sight or sound had he noted after the sergeant went his way, but now, before he could realize or dodge, something came spinning through midair, over his head, settled down on his shoulders with a jerk; then a blanket was whirled about his face, and, with his breath fairly choked out of him, with only time for one startled, stifled cry, the loop of a lariat was suddenly drawn taut, hurling him violently to the frozen ground, and in another second two or three men had thrown themselves furiously upon him.

Despite mad struggles he was bound, gagged and kicked behind the haystack. His carbine was whisked away. He lay there, helpless and half strangled, but they had removed the blanket, so that he at least could breathe and see. And then from beyond the stable of his troop came two more men with a cart. Into this was swiftly loaded box after box of some weighty substance, the boxes being dragged from underneath the very stack that had caused the colonel's censure—the stack that interposed between Ray's stable and the little domicile of Sergeant Merriweather under the low bluff. Loaded with all it could safely carry, the cart was swiftly trundled off into the darkness, three burly forms propelling, two remaining close at hand. Not a word was spoken that Hunter could hear. The cart came back for another load in less than five minutes, and this time, in addition to heavy little boxes which he could almost swear contained ammunition and possibly revolvers, they dragged sacks of oats from underneath the stack and loaded them, too, upon the cart. Three trips were made in all; then every man vanished, and he was utterly alone.

Raging at his plight, powerless to help himself in any way, and suffering not a little from the sharpness of his cords and the brutal manner in which he had been gagged, Hunter managed to keep cool and think. At the utmost he probably would not be left there more than 20 minutes. When the call was passed at 12:30, his voice would be missed. The corporal would have to come down and, not finding him on his post, would institute search; then he would be released and could tell his story.

Even as he lay there he could swear he heard the sound as of hoofs and heavy laden wheels crashing through the ice on the little shallow stream beyond the stables. Presently the bitter cold of the frozen ground seemed to penetrate through his heavy clothing, and he began to suffer keenly. The wind blew but lightly where he lay in the lee of the stack, and, though he knew it was not time for the sentries to call off, he strained his ears to catch the sound of footfalls—Blake or Brady, and the sergeant, too, might be along again. He prayed indeed they might be, for robbery had been committed before his very eyes. He had heard rumors of the disappearance of forage. He had heard the men talk of the exposed situation of the brick magazine out there on the prairie, southeast of the post. Only on bright moonlit nights could the sentry see it from the east gate, while from the south gate it was hidden entirely. He knew that most of the ammunition—pistol, carbine and cannon—was kept there and at one time quite a lot of small arms. The ordnance sergeant slept in the garrison, his keys in a strong box under his bed, yet thieves had plundered both the magazine and the stables, and hidden their booty underneath the big haystack, awaiting opportunity to run it away to some reliable customer in town. That they were members of the garrison was evident from that very fact. Townsfolk would have come with wagons in the first place.

Fifteen minutes at least had he still to wait and suffer, possibly more, if no officer of the guard chanced to inspect right after 12, or if the corporal should be slow running to ascertain why the 12:30 call was not repeated. Fifteen minutes, and already he was enduring torment. Then came sudden hope—the sound of a swift, light footfall—then a woman's voice.

"Dan, Danny, where are you? Come home quick, for God's sake. They're hunting for you now."

No answer.

Again the plaintive cry was repeated. A woman's slender form sped swiftly by, turned the corner of the huge stack, and then, as though recoiling at sight of danger, darted back, shuddering, stumbled over his prostrate body, and only with difficulty saved itself from falling. Quick as thought the woman whirled upon him, one half stifled, nervous cry escaping from her lips.

"Scully, you beast! Why are you lying there? You are not drunk. The liquor he gave you wouldn't do this. Where's he gone? Answer, I say. Ah-h!" And the cold hands that had seized and shaken him fell away in fright at touch of the gag. Quickly she recovered herself, fumbled in her pocket, found a pair of scissors and slashed the bands that were strangling him. "What fool work is this?" she whimpered. "Sure Dan shouldn't have gagged you, Scully. Who was with him? Who did it? Answer," she implored, shaking him vehemently. "Get up, Scully, quick! For the love of God find him. They've been to the house already—the guard. Somebody's peached. Somebody— Who tied this lariat? It's knotted like— Wait till I get a knife. Lie still, Scully." And away she sped, leaving him to wonder, bound as he was, how he could lie otherwise. She was back in a moment, panting, breathless. She sawed at the thick cordage until it snapped, then stared wildly one instant as the tall figure straightened up, then with a cry of horror started back. "Scully— No! What—you? Hunter? Oh, blessed saints, have mercy."

But the instant he was released and had gained his feet, unarmed though he was and half numbed, the tall, athletic soldier sprang away into the darkness and ran like a deer across the open space and on past the stables toward the stream, shouting as he ran at the full strength of his powerful lungs: "Corporal of the guard, No. 6! Corporal of the guard, No. 6!"

Out on the low bank across the narrow stream he could see, outlined against the sky, two dark, shadowy figures go scurrying swiftly by, running from the direction of the old magazine. It stood only a few yards beyond the crest. Again he set up his powerful shout, "Corporal of the guard, No. 6!" and away off to the northeast, although farther than himself from the guardhouse, Duffy on No. 5 at the east gate, sure that something was dreadfully amiss, was repeating the cry. Hardly knowing what he should do if he overtook them, Hunter dashed into the shallow stream, in hopes of reaching the opposite bank and overhauling the marauders, but the broken, slippery ice trapped and threw him again. Down he went splash into the chilling waters; up he scrambled, only to slip and go down a second time; then staggered to his feet, breathless, almost exhausted now; tumbled up the opposite bank; clambered on all fours to the crest; gazed hurriedly about in search of friend or foe; peered into the darkness to the south and southwest, but the runners had disappeared; then gazed to the east and sprang to his feet, startled. Not 20 yards away loomed the black bulk of the old brick magazine, and, hissing and sputtering, a fiery serpent seemed dancing in front. It bounded to the doorway, now in the ruddy light dimly seen to be open, disappeared within a little cloud of sulphur smoke, and then the heavens lit up with an awful glare. He felt himself hurled violently backward. For one instant he seemed to see a million stars crisscrossing through the skies. His ears were stunned and deafened by a thunderous roar. The air was filled with flying bricks and beams and sheets of flame that scorched and seared and blinded him. Then something crashed upon his skull, and he toppled over the bank and went plunging down to the icy flood beneath.

Prospects for Immigrants.

Berlin, June 11.—Among the reports recently published here of German consuls in American cities is one from the consul in Cincinnati who, treating of the prospects of the German immigrant to the United States, says: "The time is past when immigrants to the United States had a chance to acquire riches in this country, owing to the density of the population and the overcrowded condition of all trades and occupations."

Russian News of Interest.

London, June 11.—United States Senator Beveridge, according to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, will not find much difficulty in securing from the Russian government a concession for a steamship line from the United States to Vladivostock or Port Arthur.

"Plentiful rains have fallen in South Russia, says the Odessa correspondent of the Standard, "and a splendid harvest is assured."

The Erring One.

It is impossible for one who never goes wrong nor makes a mistake nor commits a blunder to know just how to be sorry for an erring one. We must stumble ourselves before we can really judge of the hardships of a rough road and the frailty of weary feet. True character is first tender, then hopeful and afterward reformatory.—Ex.

A TEST OF COURAGE.

TORTURES WHICH INDIAN SCOUTS BORE WITH SMILING FACES.

It Was Up to Lieutenant Farrow Once to Emulate Their Example, but the West Pointer Used His Wits and Escaped the Ordeal.

The Indian scouts that joined forces with the United States army in 1878 to make prisoners of the Sheep Eaters in western Idaho were skeptical at first of Lieutenant Farrow's abilities to lead them into battle. They had never seen his courage tested and plainly intimated by word and action that they had no intention of obeying his orders unless he should prove himself braver than any chief, subchief or buck in the command.

First they gave themselves up to all kinds of physical torture as a lesson to him. They slashed their bodies with knives without showing pain. They slit the skin on their chests, ran skewers thereunder and jerked off cutaneous and fleshly strips while smiling happily in his face. They split their ears, pierced their noses, lacerated their cheeks, butchered their arms and legs. Their stunts were so far beyond anything Farrow could inflict upon himself that the poor young lieutenant thought he "saw his finish."

Suddenly, while rivulets of cold perspiration trickled down his spine, the West Pointer recollected that in his schoolboy days he was an adept at driving a pin into the thick of his "vastus externus" without feeling pain and the joyful inspiration to thus illuminate his courage seized him.

The necessary pin was in the lapel of his fatigue jacket. Ruthlessly he slit the front of his breeches leg from pocket to knee, then his drawers till the front of the thigh was exposed to the wondering gaze of the Indians gathered close around. Then dramatically exhibiting the pin, an affair of an inch and a sixteenth, he reached for a flat stone and drove the harmless bit of wire down to the head in the unresisting muscle. His handsome face was as unclouded as when he helped to haze his first plebe.

The red men nodded approvingly, grunted, looked wise and sat down on their haunches. They had seen something new, but wanted something more convincing. Farrow realized this and was in the seventh heaven of despair as he smilingly pulled out the pin and held it aloft for inspection.

To show the white feather meant in that hostile country insubordination and treachery, involving Farrow's mysterious death. It was a moment to try a soul—and to fry it. The lieutenant whispered to his trusted sergeant: "I am going to take a desperate chance. I am going to shoot myself through the head with my revolver, but you stand beside your horse, and just an instant before I shoot you fire your rifle, yell 'Si-wash!' mount and make off through the woods as fast as you can ride. Don't forget to fire before I do, else I shall be a dead man."

Sitting upon a jagged rock, he explained to the Indians what he was about to do, and with great deliberation and some fine theatricals he cocked the pistol and placed the muzzle against his temple. The Indians were wrought up to a high pitch. They had never seen a man shoot himself through the head and live. Surely here was the bravest of all brave leaders. They would follow him through hell.

The sergeant, unnoticed, fired his rifle, his "Si-wash!" woke the echoes of Shoshone and Bitter Root, and the clatter of his horse's hoofs rang down the Clear Water as far as Fort Lapwai. "Si-wash?" The Indians knew what that cry meant. In less time than it takes to tell it Farrow was alone. His forces had scattered to the four winds. In the course of a few hours all were united again, but the courage test was not renewed.

Twenty-two years after this exciting incident, on a certain evening in 1900, Farrow occupied a box in the Madison Square Garden when Buffalo Bill's Wild West was in full blast. Chief Joseph, the celebrated commander of the Nez Perces, whom Farrow had captured 22 years previously and whom he had not seen in the interim, led a wild, whooping, yelling, screeching mob of painted Indians out into the arena for a dash around the circle.

But the charge was interrupted—cut short. When Joseph reached the curve near the Madison avenue end of the amphitheater, he pulled his horse sharply to the right, cutting across the first file of warriors in most dangerous fashion. In a mad gallop he poked his charger's head into an arena box, straightened up in his stirrups, held out his hand and cried: "How! How! How!" The old fellow had caught sight of Farrow, and nothing could prevent him from riding up to salute his captor of 1878. It was a dramatic incident.—New York Press.

Budget.

The origin of the word "budget," meaning an estimate of government revenues and expenses, is thus explained:

Almost from time immemorial it was the custom in England to put the estimates of receipts and expenditures presented to parliament in a leather bag, the word budget being thus borrowed from the old Norman word bougette, which signifies a leather purse. Curiously enough, the word has passed back again into France from England.—New York Tribune.

Talk Killed a Bear.

"I suppose," said the barber to the man who was wearing a bear's claw on his watch chain—"I suppose you killed that bear yourself?"

"Yes, I did," was the reply.

"Was it a grizzly bear?"

"It was."

"A big one?"

"About the size of a 2-year-old steer."

"Gee whiz! How many bullets did it take to kill him?"

"Not any at all."

"Brain him with an ax?"

"No; I talked him to death!"

It took the customer 15 minutes to get the rest of his shave, and during that time the barber didn't speak another word.—Exchange.

Parrots.

Some parrots are very quick in acquiring words and are generally fond of displaying these new acquisitions, but occasionally a bird will be profoundly silent until the teacher despairs of her mastering a certain phrase or word; then all at once and unexpectedly the "scholar" will repeat her lesson.

A Terrible Explosion

"Of a gasoline stove burned a lady here frightfully," writes N. E. Palmer, of Kirkman, Ia. "The best doctors couldn't heal the running sore that followed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve entirely cured her." Infallible for cuts, corns, sores, boils, bruises, skin diseases and piles. 25c at C. A. Wright's.

Allen Haverson, of West Prairie, Wis. says: "People come ten miles to buy Foley's Kidney Cure," while J. A. Spero of Helmer, Ind., says: "It is the medical wonder of the age." J. J. Orr.

Wm. Woodward, of Decatur, Ia., writes: "I was troubled with kidney disease for several years and four one dollar size bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure cured me. I would recommend it to anyone who has kidney trouble." J. J. Orr.

NO BREAKING OFF.

Just a Little Disagreement Between the Peppery Lovers.

"See here, Daniel," began the old farmer when he had cornered his son out by the corncrib, "what's this here circalatin round 'mong the neighbors 'bout you and Patience breakin off yer engagement?"

"Nuthin to it 'tall," with a sullen tone and look.

"Blamed funny. I never see so much smoke where there wasn't some fire. Did you and her have some words?"

"I said there wasn't no breakin off, didn't I? What's the use of cross questionin a feller like he was on the witness stan'?"

"Lots of use, my young man. Hain't I tole you more times 'n you've got fingers and toes that my mind and ma's mind is sot on this here marriage? Don't our farms jine, and isn't she a only chile, and hain't you a only chile? Hain't you got no gumtion nur common sense?"

"She said not. She said I didn't know enough to peel b'iled pertaters afore eatin 'em or to keep awake when I was a-courtin of her."

"She hain't so fur wrong, either. And what did you say?"

"I tole her she didn't have interleck enough to talk so's to keep nobody awake and that ef I was a-pickin and a-choosin fur beauty she'd be at the foot of the class. That's what I tole her."

"Well?"

"She ordered me to git out and said ef she ever see me on that farm from hencefor'ard she'd set the dogs on me, and I tole her the dogs would have a confounded easy time of it so fur as I was consarned. But there was no breakin off."

Then the old man informed the boy that if the engagement wasn't renewed within 24 hours he'd leave every "durned dollar to a sannytorium fur fools."—Detroit Free Press.

Saves Two from Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but, when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by C. A. Wright. Trial bottles free.

Short crops—Convict's hair.

Three specters that threaten baby's life. Cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhœa. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry never fails to conquer them.

Those on whom we confer benefits we are fonder of than those from whom we receive them.

Everybody's liable to itching piles. Rich and poor, old and young—terrible the torture they suffer. Only one sure cure: Doan's Ointment. Absolutely safe; can't fail.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Owing to the contemplated amalgamation of the Detroit Southern and the Michigan division of the Cincinnati Northern railroad, the people of Tecumseh are exceedingly jubilant, this being the junction point of the two systems, and the insufficiency of the Marshall shops and probable abandonment of the same will result in the concentration with an enlargement of the present works here to serve as general shops of the entire system. It is also authoritatively stated that the entire repairing of the company's mammoth dock at Grand Haven will be done exclusively at this point, probably resulting in a total employment of about 500 men.—Detroit Free Press.

The first official notice of the change in ownership of the D. & L. N. and Ohio Southern railroads, which were consolidated into the Detroit Southern, occurred yesterday when the Ohio Southern trains began using the handsome new D. & L. N. passenger depot on Wayne street. Yardmaster Ferguson, of the D. & L. N., has been made night yardmaster of the new line and Ticket aud Freight Agent Robinson, also of the D. & L. N. has been made the official in like capacity for the new road. The old O. S. depot will be used as a freight house.—Toledo Blade.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Andrew Wilson Thrown from his Buggy, Sustaining a Broken Leg.

Last Friday evening as Andrew Wilson was returning from his celery farm, the whiffletree of one of his horses came loose, which started them up, dropping the tongue of the buggy to the ground. The horses, which were quite spirited, started to run at a lively pace and the tongue of the buggy catching, threw Mr. Wilson violently to the ground.

Dr. Rice, of Tipton, was telephoned for from Chester Luce's and brought Mr. Wilson to his home here. Both bones of the leg were broken just above the ankle. Dr. Wilson, assisted by Dr. Rice, reduced the fracture and set the bones and the patient is now quite comfortable.

Mrs. Anderson's class sang "We Come again with Songs of Praise" and were accompanied by Fred Frost, who whistled the air. A recitation was given by Master Joe McCaughn and the little gentleman did himself credit. Remarks were made by Rev. Jones, directed to the young people and several songs by the school.

HISTORY, PROPHECY

Of the Class of 1901, Delivered by

THE MISSES ANNA YOUNG AND LUELLA WILLIAMSON

At the Commencement Exercises Last Thursday Evening.

We, seventeen members of the High School of Tecumseh, are somewhat loath to cancel our membership in the school tonight and to separate from one another as fellow workers.

Seven of us began our school life in this village at the same time, thus for the last twelve years we have been associated with one another in the same toils and pleasures. The remaining ten have spent at least four years with us, having begun their school life elsewhere. During our high school life I think all members of the class will agree that the time has been profitably and for the most part pleasantly spent.

As Freshmen our class was organized Nov. 11, 1897, with a membership of 50. Our class motto was soon decided upon which is "Finis coronat opus," The End Crowns the Work. All members of the class provided themselves with a button on which was printed the motto in our class colors, blue and white. These buttons seemed to cause some curiosity and were the envy of the other High School classes. Jennie Pope composed a class song which was made a part of the program at the various class meetings.

As soon as our class was well organized our teacher advised us to have a paper to which all members of the class should contribute and by vote it was decided that it should be called "The High School Review." The first number was read the day before Thanksgiving at exercises of the ninth grade and was thought to be a credit to all who had contributed to it. The second paper was read at a class meeting at Ethel Hampton's and the third, which was the last, at our editor's home where it was decided that henceforth the class should be called "The Naughty Ones" which is very appropriate in more senses than one.

Some of the "Naughty Ones" were very glad when the second year of our High School course rolled around to have new names, "Sophomores," as they were tired and disgusted at being called "Freshmen." In due time our class was reorganized with a membership of 39, having lost 11 members since the organization of the class the year previous. I am sorry to say the "Naughty Ones" were not as ambitious in the journalistic line as they had been the first year, for no class paper was written although many attempts had been made to have one and there were only five class meetings held during the entire Sophomore year.

During our third year in the High School we were very busy and the majority thought it advisable not to organize as a class at the beginning of the year. The first class meeting was held in March with a membership of 27. A few weeks before commencement the class of 1901 gave an invitation to the "Naughty Naughts" to spend a quiet evening at the home of Donald Wright. In return the seniors invited the juniors to the home of Herbert Temple, a prominent member of the class.

Last January our class was organized with a membership of 17. One of the notable facts of the history of the class this year was a trick which the Seniors played on the Juniors a few weeks ago. As they were exceedingly proud of their colors, orange and black, they made a flag which they placed on top of the school building, but lo! some of the "Naughty Ones" decided that it should not remain there long so they ascended to the third story, climbed a ladder to the cupola, broke the staple of the door and tore the flag into pieces about two inches square.

Now, a brief description of the members of the class. There are five young men and twelve young ladies. Six were born in Tecumseh and eight have never attended school in any other place, while three were born in Franklin and, of the remaining eight, one each in Britton, Hillsdale, Cambridge, Angola, Ind., Macon, Raisin, Manchester and Homer.

The average height is 5 feet 6 inches and the average weight 121 pounds, therefore the class can neither be called giants nor relics of the Golden Age. The total weight of the entire class is 2,052 pounds. The color of our eyes varies greatly, the predominating color being gray and the other three colors ranging in the following order—brown, blue and black.

The class of 1901 have now finished our four years of hard study and are now somewhat prepared to go out into a broader and new field of labor. With memories of our school life, which will always remain dear to us and in bidding farewell to our old school and associations connected with it, we wish our successors all the happiness and prosperity which we have enjoyed.

ANNA YOUNG.

To peer into the future has been characteristic of people of all times and ages. Palmistry has flourished, fortunes have been read over the teacups, the planchette has been consulted and clairvoyants have plied their trade never ...victims eager to know what the and after about for them. To me it have been lapped up of unfold- milk with water and cont.Naughty so till evening. When remonstrated with by her husband recently she said: "Well, the cat doesn't know the difference. It looks like milk, anyhow, and if I didn't thin it out for her we'd have to have 2 cents' worth for breakfast each day."—Philadelphia Record.

president, Floyd Slater, whom I saw prominent among the men in a faculty meeting at some university. Yes, at another glance I readily saw he was president of the institution. What a mark he has made for himself.

My curiosity increased. Another scene appeared—a small but prettily furnished room, as much like a sitting-room as one for study. In it were Florence Murphy and Ethel Garlinghouse, surrounded by a group of kindergarten children whom they were teaching.

Then the view of a tailor shop in a large city appeared, and as I looked I saw a sign on which was the name, "Smith & Jones." The names seemed quite familiar and, as I thought it over, I finally decided it must be our old classmate. I looked again. Yes, there was Lena Smith, or she who once was Lena Smith, sitting at a sewing machine busily engaged in her work.

Directly across the street was a drug store. I saw someone enter whom I easily recognized as Isabelle Case and who at once took up her routine of work which seemed to be pulverizing alum.

On looking again, my attention was fixed on a familiar scene, that of a Salvation Army marching through the streets of the city. As it drew nearer, I saw at a glance that the captain was no other than Anna Young. One would judge from her many followers that she was doing a grand and noble work.

Then a tropical scene dawned upon my view. In the foreground was a missionary surrounded by half-clothed savages. One could not mistake him, cotton umbrella, 16 to 1 variety, stovepipe hat, always worn by missionaries, high-water trousers, another infallible sign, and a perpetual, stone-softening smile, which he dispensed to all free of charge. As he turned I saw 'twas Leon Boyd and such a shock!

Again, a view of a school room. The work was carried on under the supervision of Mabel Mills. This seemed to be her last year for she had accumulated quite a little wealth and, having found Cotton as good an investment as government bonds, she had finally decided to speculate a little.

The next view I had was a wedding in high life in the midst of a brilliant society gathering and there, beneath the floral bell that swung heavy with perfume, was she who once was Elona Anderson. Who the gentleman to the contract was I could not say. He was one of those problems hard and difficult to compass, as broad as he was long. But he was rich and a catch, you may be sure—a brilliant match and a desirable one.

This also vanished, but another scene took its place. It was Willard Hunt in possession of a peanut stand. Evidently Willard has never forgotten how good peanuts were since a child.

What I next saw will surprise some of you, but it was the interior of a theatre. The curtain rose and amidst the applause of the audience, Earle Kniffen came to the footlights. He, to be sure, was the long heralded advocate of Woman's Rights.

Once more I searched and, in a crowded thoroughfare, I saw Edith Rector, viewing a circus parade, for she never found an affinity and so settled down to dictate to the hired man as she managed her own farm and business, and only came to the city on state occasions.

At the same time and place I looked to the second story of a brick block and saw Lora Slattery and Erma Kyle, intently gazing at the crowd below, while above their window swung the sign, "Slattery & Kyle, dentists." Alas! neither ever sought any other kind of partnership and so settled down as martyrs to make other people happy by pulling their teeth.

Then in the foreground the crowd separated for an instant. A lady had fallen. Slowly again they were gathering 'round when a person with an air of authority pushed his way through. It was Dr. Macham who, dropping his cane and medicine case beside him, bent over the prostrate woman who was no other than one of our Juniors.

Once more, a scene in a large city where one was pushed and hurried along by the throng. "Standing room only!" read a sign as it passed. Madame Hampton, Grand Opera. Positively last appearance before her marriage to the devoted Count Such-a-Much.

That vision faded but no other appeared. I thought could it be that the destinies of all my classmates had been foretold? Nevertheless it was so. Would you know more of your future? I, too, had burned in desire to question these visions farther, but they had made themselves air into which they had vanished. Are you disappointed that the future held in store for you no more of happiness, no more of prosperity? Wise indeed was he who said, "Nothing can bring thee happiness save thyself."

A LONG FELT WANT.

It is Supplied in This Vicinity at Last.

It is hard to always be pleasant.

Good natured people are often irritable.

If you knew the reason you would not be surprised.

Ever have itching piles?

Not sick enough to go to bed or not well enough to be content.

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Keeps you awake nights.

Spoils your temper—nearly drives you crazy.

Isn't relief and a cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for every one in Doan's Ointment.

Doan's Ointment never fails to cure Itching Piles, Eczema or any itching of the skin.

Here is proof of it at the testimony of an Ann Arbor citizen:

Mr. C. C. Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemorrhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of and used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a different effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into account the number of years I was afflicted, the irritation ceased and the inflammation was allayed. When Doan's Ointment cured me it will cure others."

Drawing the Line.

A good story is told in Missouri at the expense of its once famous governor, Claiborne F. Jackson. Before he solved the enigma of lovelock he had married five sisters in reasonable lapses of consecutiveness. After one wife had been lost and appropriately mourned he espoused another, and he kept his courting within a narrow circle of his own relatives, for he rather liked the family.

The antiquated father of these girls was almost deaf, and when the governor went to this octogenarian to ask for his surviving daughter the following conversation ensued:

"I want Lizzie."

"Eh?"

"I want you to let me have Eliz-a-beth."

"Oh, you want Lizzie, do you? What for?"

"For my wife."

"For life."

"I want—to—marry—her."

"Oh, yes. Just so. I hear you, boy."

"I'm precious glad you do," muttered the governor.

"Well," slowly responded the veteran, "you needn't halloo so that the whole neighborhood knows it. Yes, you can have her. You've got 'em all now, my lad, but for goodness' sake, if anything happens to that 'ere poor misguided gal, don't come and ask me for the old woman!"

Jackson solemnly promised that he never would.

Rare and Curious Gems.

The rarest and costliest of gems, though not always esteemed the most beautiful, are pigeon's blood rubies, fine opals and diamonds that are pure but shed a distinct glow of blue or pink. A very perfect pearl of generous size and lustrous skin, tinted a rarely beautiful golden green, was valued unset at over £300. A faultless green pearl is very rare.

A curious stone is the alexandrite. It is a dark green stone that is polished, cut and set, very like a fine topaz or amethyst, in large showy rings surrounded by diamonds. By the light of day the alexandrite has no special beauty save its fine luster, but directly a shaft of artificial light strikes the dull stone deep gleams of red flash out of the green, and under the gas or in the firelight one ignorant of this vagary would instantly pronounce it a ruby.

A Mechanical Answer.

The well to do patron of the place had been attentive to the cashier for some time, and now, business being slack for a few moments, he deemed the time propitious to speak.

"If you will be mine," he urged as he leaned over the desk, "every comfort that you may desire will be yours. True, I am no longer young, but I have money, and I can provide for you as few young men could, and surely the material side of the marriage question is worthy of some consideration."

She said nothing, but gently touched the cash register, and the words "No Sale" sprang into view.

With a sigh he left.—Chicago Post.

STORIES OF LINCOLN.

THE TINY SOLDIER WHO ASSISTED AT THE PUBLIC LEVEE.

Old Abe's Narrative About How the Flat Bottomed Boat Went Aground and How She Got Safely Back Into the Ohio River.

On one occasion a little drummer boy, securing leave of absence, accompanied a sergeant to a public levee that "Old Abe" was holding at the White House. They went early, and when President Lincoln appeared and the handshaking began they were not long in reaching him.

The tall man, almost a giant in physical proportions, looked down with an amused smile at the tiny drummer boy, who appeared hardly 10 years of age. Grasping the little fellow's right hand, the president suddenly reached out his left, swung the boy off his feet and set him gently down on a small table beside him.

"Aha, my little soldier," he said, laughing, "you shall help 'Uncle Abe' review this line today, and if your superior officer objects, why, I'll prolong your leave of absence!"

Lincoln asked the boy his age, place of residence, regiment and where he was on duty. Then, as some of the more important officers of the army or navy, members of congress or of the executive departments chanced to pass in the line, the president would gravely introduce his young assistant, with whom they were required to shake hands as well as with himself.

When the reception was over, President Lincoln took the boy into his private apartments and introduced him to Mrs. Lincoln. After entertaining him at luncheon he dismissed him with a brief note to the commanding officer of the hospital where he was then stationed telling why the boy's leave of absence had been extended.

Lincoln's geniality and willingness at all times to hear or to tell a good story were conspicuous traits, not always agreeable to some of his able but worried and irritable advisers.

On one occasion a sergeant had a squad of men at work unloading supplies from an Ohio river steamboat that in some mysterious manner had made its way from the interior to the coast waters of Virginia. It was a flat bottomed boat, drawing not more than three feet of water when loaded and hardly dampening its plank bottom when light. It was propelled by a horizontal stern wheel, driven by a small upright engine. Boats of that type were common on the Ohio, which runs almost dry at some seasons. They were known as "Pittsburgers" and were fabled to navigate freely in a heavy dew.

The sergeant's men were hard at work carrying rations ashore from this craft when suddenly they stopped and sent up a lusty cheer. A little tuglike steamer had pulled up alongside, and from it stepped a tall, awkward man dressed in rusty black and wearing a napless silk hat. The sergeant recognized the president and saluted.

"Your boat is well named, sergeant," said the latter gravely.

The soldier was puzzled. He did not know that the steamer had a name and said so.

The president took him by the arm and led him back on the tug. There the stern of the "Pittsburger" loomed above them, and on its dirty white surface in tarnished gilt letters a yard long appeared the single word, Mist.

"Yes," said Lincoln, "it's very well named indeed, sergeant. All those boats need is a mist, and they'll run anywhere.

"Years ago," he continued, "I was attending court in Cairo, Ills., when the Ohio was so low that all the water there was between its banks was what had spilled over from the Mississippi. Those 'Pittsburgers' were passing and repassing all the time. One night there came up a little shower that raised the level maybe a half inch. One of 'em got out of the channel, slid ashore and grounded in the mud right beside the courthouse.

"It was there the next morning, and I remarked to a brother attorney that that boat was aground to stay. He was from 'Egypt' and knew more about 'Pittsburgers' than I did. He merely smiled and said, 'You wait and see.'

"There came on another shower that afternoon. I heard an engine puffing and looked out of the courthouse window. Maybe you'll think I'm exaggerating, but there was that boat steaming down the road toward the river, and in two minutes she was back in the Ohio, just as the shower was over.

"I expressed my surprise to the judge, but he said that was nothing. If the shower hadn't come up in time, the captain would simply have hired a boy with a sprinkling pot to go ahead. They're great boats, sergeant. Likely as not this one got here by coming across country."

President Lincoln repeated this extravagant story without the ghost of a smile. During its recital Secretary Stanton and Generals Halleck and Sherman—the last named having run up the day before from his march through the Carolinas—who were with the party, had approached the president. General Sherman smiled broadly, but Stanton looked annoyed. The president caught his glance and, with a wink at the others, said, "But maybe you've heard this before, Stanton."

"Very likely I have," the secretary grimly responded, "but I would suggest, Mr. President, that General Grant is awaiting us."

The gleam of amusement left the kindly man's eyes. He gravely turned and shook hands with the sergeant and then strode after his companions as they made their way ashore.—Roe L. Hendrick in Youth's Companion.

How Piccadilly Was Named.

It's curious how the names of towns and streets come from something that has been the fashion of the day. Who knows where the word "Piccadilly" originated from, the name of that wonderful street of which it is written that "some make love and some make poetry in Piccadill?" The street was built by a tailor named Higgins, whose fortune was made in a kind of collar called Piccadel or Pickadill or Piccadilley, which was worn by all the beaus of the day. Of course it is not meant that the street as it stands today was built by him, but he erected a few houses to which he gave the name the street now bears.

HOW BIG SEA TURTLES FEED

Take Big Balls of Grass Out to Sea and Eat While Swimming.

With my gastronomic taste I naturally was very curious to know just what kind of terrapin are caught in these waters, for the dish is one much sought after by epicures and forms part of the menu for every first class hotel on the coast. I was told that none is caught about here, but was invited to a sea turtle hunt. Let the reader imagine a turtle weighing all the way from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds, and not long ago one was turned over on the beach near Miami that weighed more than 1,600 pounds. Of course I am giving the largest weight, for the average weight of those caught along the coast is about 500 pounds. After they are caught the turtles are kept for a long time, their captors feeding them on cabbage, lettuce, turnips, carrots and sea grasses.

The study of this monster shellfish is a most interesting one. In order to get rid of the parasites that cling to their shells they often enter fresh streams to enjoy a bath, but they are extremely timid and take fright at the least noise. The hunter knows, however, that the turtle feeds in brackish streams where the tide falls rather low and where the turtle grass grows in greatest profusion. The turtles cut great quantities of this grass and then roll it into a ball, cementing it as they roll it with the clay in which the grass grows, and in this way, when they have managed to amass a goodly supply of provisions, they wait for high tide and float away seaward, feeding as they float.

The professional hunters are quick to detect these balls, and just the moment they do so they set their seines and send their peggers, as the men are called, in search of the feeding shoals. Men are not the only enemies the turtles have, however, for bears, raccoons and other animals native to Florida destroy great numbers of them.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Cor. Baltimore American.

UNDER AN UMBRELLA.

An Expensive Adventure of a Famous Parisian Wit.

Romieu, the famous Parisian wit, was one day caught in a shower and forced to seek refuge in a doorway of the Opera House. It was 6 o'clock already, and he had an engagement in the Cafe de Paris for that very hour. The rain fell in torrents. There was no carriage to be had. He had no umbrella. What was to be done? While he was lamenting his bad luck a gentleman with a large umbrella passed by. Romieu was seized with a sudden inspiration. He rushed out and grasped the stranger by the arm and gravely installed himself under the protecting umbrella.

"I am overjoyed to see you," he immediately began. "I have been looking for you for two weeks. I wanted to tell you about Clementine."

Without giving the stranger time to express his surprise Romieu rattled away with gossip and anecdote until he had led the unknown companion to the door of the Cafe de Paris. Then he glanced at him with a face of well feigned astonishment.

"Pardon, monsieur!" he cried. "It seems I am mistaken."

"I believe so," said the stranger.

"Good gracious!" added Romieu. "Be discreet. Don't repeat what I have told you."

"I promise you."

"A thousand pardons!"

Romieu hastened within the cafe and amid great laughter told the adventure to his friends. Suddenly one of them said:

"Your cravat is rumpled."

Romieu put his hand to his neck and turned pale. His pin, a valuable sapphire, was gone. On further examination his purse and watch were found to be gone. The man with the umbrella was a pickpocket.—London Tit-Bits.

The Opal Superstition.

There is one superstition of wide range and influence that is directed against one of the most beautiful objects in nature, the opal. A man in my town failed in business, and what do you think he did? Took his opal ring into the yard and smashed it to pieces with a hammer! He ascribed his bankruptcy to that opal, and he intended neither to suffer such misfortune again nor to allow any other one to do so by inheriting or buying that ill starred property.

One of the most amusing instances of a trust in wrong things is reported from New York, where a man took an opal to a jeweler and asked him to sell it, as he had had nothing but bad luck since he owned it, his business ventures having failed, his children having suffered illness and the old scratch having been to pay generally. The jeweler found the gem to have been an imitation. Its falsity must have been obvious to everybody except the victim, because the opal is the stone that has never been even passably imitated. —New Lippincott.

His Emancipation.

Away back in 1771 Josiah Woodbury of Beverly, Mass., thus published his happy emancipation from matrimonial woes:

BEVERLY, Sept. 16, 1771.

Ran away from Josiah Woodbury, cooper, his house plague for seven long years, Masury Old Moll, alias Trial of Vengeance. He that lost will never seek her; he that shall keep her I will give two Bushel of Beans. I forewarn all Persons in Town or County from trusting said Trial of Vengeance. I have hove all the old (shoes) I can find for joy, and all my neighbors rejoice with me. A good Riddance of bad Ware. Amen!

JOSIAH WOODBURY.

It Yielded.

First Physician—Did old Coupon's case yield to your treatment?

Second Physician—It did. I treated it for six months, and it yielded something like a hundred guineas.—London Fun.

MY MORTALITY.

'Tis writ, "Mortal, thy life is but a span,"
  And yet I feel that air and earth and sky
Are ever mine, even forevermore
  That I and mine can never, never die.

And yet I know, how well, how well I know,
  That in the future somewhere hidden lies
A day, the day of days, which has for me
  A moment supreme, when I shall close my eyes

To open them on this my world no more,
  When friends will fold my hands upon my breast
And sadly say: "Dear soul, her work is done.
  Let us now lay her gently to her rest."

Springtime with bud and bloom will come and go;
  The busy world will still rush madly on;
The earth and air and sky will be for those
  Who will not know that I have come and gone.

STANDARD TIME.

To Ascertain and Promulgate It Is a Costly Task.

"What time is it?" Few questions are more common than this, and yet each day the United States government goes to a great expense in giving it an official answer. To ascertain the instant when it is noon on the seventy-fifth meridian and to send that information all over the country is a great and a costly task. The astronomical observatory in Washington computes the true time, which is thence transmitted by electricity to every important city and town.

About five minutes before the Washington noon the telegraph companies cut off all their regular business except on lines where they have more than one wire. They then connect all important points, from which there may be numberless ramifications, with an electric wire going into the great clock in the observatory so that all over the country its tickings may be heard. For the ten seconds just before 12 o'clock there is silence, which is broken by the "noon beat." Regular business is then resumed.

In some cities the wires connect with a time ball which drops with the noon beat. The time ball in Washington over the state, war and navy department building is three feet in diameter and can be seen from all parts of the city. Crowds frequently gather about to see it fall, a distance of 21 feet, high in the air. The man whom some of the spectators suppose to be dropping the ball is merely there to hoist it again to its place.

In the building beneath are 23 clocks which are each day automatically corrected by it. An electrical device "sets" them, placing hour, minute and second hands exactly vertical at the instant the ball drops. The hands that are too fast are pushed back, and those that are slow are thrust forward.

Although Washington is on the seventy-seventh meridian, the noon hour is for convenience computed for the seventy-fifth, the time standard for the eastern part of the United States. In the central belt, which is governed by the ninetieth meridian, the signal from Washington means 11 o'clock, in the Rocky mountain belt it is 10 o'clock, and on the Pacific coast line it is 9.—Youth's Companion.

FEASTED ON SPARROWS.

A Diet That Did Not Agree With the Crane.

"Some time ago I had occasion to observe an interesting change in the habits and temperament of a crane which had been picked up in the swamps of Arkansas," said a gentleman from one of the towns on the Mississippi river, "and the change was startling too. The crane was placed in a small park which was literally filled with English sparrows. These pests did not like the visitor from the lowlands, and they made daily assaults on the poor bird. The crane was a pretty fowl, long, slender, pure white and with the stately stride of a tragedian. The sparrows would systematically swoop down on the crane in droves, and the attacks were fierce and vicious.

The crane stood the assaults with indifference for awhile, but finally the fowl from the swamps figured out a method of retaliation, and it was effectual. In some way the crane learned that sparrow was a pretty sweet morsel. From the time she learned it she feasted on sparrows. She would slip up cautiously on these pesky twitterers and throw her yellow beak out like a gig. She never missed the mark. She always landed a sparrow, and a singular part of the thing is that she would swallow them whole, feathers and all. But the crane would always dampen the bird by dipping it in one of the water basins of the park.

"The diet evidently did not agree with the crane, and she became a trifle droopy and showed signs of indisposition. She finally died, and the keeper of the park believes that the crane's death was caused by a severe case of indigestion brought on by eating sparrows."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Saved the Dog.

Some time ago there was a shipwreck at St. Margaret's bay, England, and the life line brought sailor after sailor to shore amid the cheers of the rescuers. At last only the captain remained on board. The line was ready, the signal was given, but the answering jerk did not come. Again and again for a quarter of an hour the question passed along the rope without reply. At last, when hope was nearly dead, the signal came and the captain was hauled dripping ashore. He picked himself up, drew a small, wet, quivering dog from his breast pocket and set it tenderly down. Then he looked round and said in simple apology, "I couldn't find the little brute anywhere!"

Parson Brownlow.

Parson Brownlow, the famous preacher, editor and patriot, is described by Dr. William E. Barton, author of "A Hero In Homespun," as the very incarnation of east Tennessee's rudeness, strength and exalted love of country and of right. "Ef hit warn't that he's a preacher," says one of the characters, "you wouldn't know sometimes w'ether he's a-prayin or a-quotin Scripter chapter an varse or jus' plain everyday sorter cussin." Brownlow wrote to Secretary Benjamin at Richmond: "Just give me my passports and I will do for your Confederacy more than the devil has ever done. I will quit the country."

A Thoroughbred.

Don't be a thoroughbred. A thoroughbred is well enough in cattle and hogs, but very disgusting among men, for the reason that among men a thoroughbred means a man who devotes too much time to having fun, to being a good fellow. Make a specialty of reliability, industry, fairness. Make your specialty a worthy one. Instead of seeing how late you can stay out at night go to bed at regular hours. Sleep will do you more good than a good time. There is no better man than the good citizen, the good husband, the good father, the good son. A thoroughbred is never noted in these directions. —Atchison Globe.

Wesley a Book Lover.

Wesley was to the end of his life a lover of a good book. Though the Bible was his chief study, he would have agreed with Matthew Arnold that a man who did not know other books could not know that book as it should be known. He constantly urged his preachers to read. "You can never be a deep preacher without reading," he used to say, "any more than a thorough Christian." To a young man who said that his work as an evangelist left him no time for reading he wrote: "Hence your talent in preaching does not increase. It is just the same as it was seven years ago. It is lively, but not deep. There is little variety. There is no compass of thought." What would not some of us give for that volume of Shakespeare, annotated throughout by his hand, which John Pawson destroyed after his death for fear of scandalizing the weaker brethren?—Temple Bar.

Careful Statement.

"Was this man Dennis an entire stranger to you?" asked the cross examining counsel of a witness in an important case.

"Sorr?" said the witness, whose stupid face was crossed with wrinkles of anxiety, for he had been warned to be cautious and exact in his answers.

The lawyer repeated his question.

"Well, no, sorr," said the witness, with a sudden gleam of enlightenment. "He couldn't be that, for he had but the wan arrm, sorr, but he was a parrtial stranger, sorr. Oi'd niver seen him befoor."—Youth's Companion.

THE MOB AROUSED

Are After a Negro Murderer With Bloodhounds

THEY SAY THEY'LL LYNCH HIM

Prince Told the Other Men to Stand Back, Then He Went in Front of Them and Fired and Foster Fell Dead.

Shreveport, La., June 14.—This city and its vicinity has been in a state of feverish excitement and unrest since Wednesday, when John Gray Foster, a prominent planter, was shot and killed by Prince Edwards, a negro employed on the Foster plantation, five miles east of this city. Armed posses of white men have been scouring the country for miles around in an attempt to capture Edwards. A dozen or more negroes are under arrest in Kenebrew's store, and what fate may have in store for them is uncertain. Foster was widely known and very popular.

There were many wild rumors afloat throughout the day, the most sensational being that the negroes in the store were in peril of being lynched. This rumor proves to be untrue, although many threats are heard against the prisoners. The store where the negroes are confined is guarded by a posse of 25 men armed with Winchesters, and unless sentiment shall change the disposition would indicate that the majority, if not all the prisoners, will be let off with a severe whipping. Edwards, if caught, will be burned or lynched. There is much feeling against "Prophet" Smith and Edward Washington, both of whom are under arrest. Smith is believed to be at the bottom of all the trouble, while Washington is said to have been active in aiding Edwards to escape.

Bloodhounds were placed on the trail of Prince Edwards in the morning, and the mob held back from the work of slaughter, waiting for the murderer's capture.

The mob includes nearly every man and boy for miles around. Most are armed. Rifles, pistols, shotguns, guns that saw service in the civil war, and even pitchforks make up the array of weapons.

The imprisoned negroes are frantic with fright. They are "officially" in the hands of the authorities, but they realize that their real captors are members of a white mob which has guarded every avenue of escape since Wednesday.

Foster was a young man, well known, a brother-in-law of Gov. McMillen of Tennessee and a member of one of the leading families in Louisiana.

Mrs. Edwards is among those arrested. She had in her possession a shotgun with which her husband is said to have killed Foster. She is quoted as having said:

"Prince told the other men to stand back and he would settle the business. Then he went in front of them and fired and Foster fell."

Foster's plantation is five miles east of this city on the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific railway. Trouble has been brewing for some time between the negroes and the overseers. Foster, thinking he could succeed where the overseers had failed, started for the negro headquarters. The negroes were gathered in a cabin, and he was some distance away when the shot which killed him was fired. The negroes immediately scattered. All but Edwards were quickly captured.

New Orleans, La., June 14.—A special from Shreveport says: The prisoners supposed to have been implicated in the murder of John Gray Foster were removed from Kennebrew's store, where they were in the hands of the posse, and taken to Benton under a strong guard commanded by Deputy Sheriff Edwards. The taking of the prisoners to Benton removes the immediate danger of lynching.

Tom L. Won't Take It.

Hamilton, O., June 14.—The Daily Democrat last evening published the following dispatch in reply to statements that former Congressman Tom L. Johnson would accept the democratic nomination for governor:

"Cleveland, O., June 13.—There is absolutely no truth in the statements referred to. I would decline the nomination. I would refuse to serve if elected. Is that strong enough? Nothing on earth could cause me to break my contract as mayor with the people of Cleveland for the next two years.

Work of Desperadoes.

Guthrie, O. T., June 14.—At Coyle, 20 miles from here, Ben Cravens and a companion blew open the Santa Fe safe with dynamite, securing $1,500, and escaped. The safe and part of the building were wrecked. Cravens killed two members of a posse chasing him near Pawnee two months ago. He escaped from the Kansas state penitentiary mine last winter, holding the guard off with a toy pistol.

Three Boys Drowned.

Bellaire, O., June 14.—Three sons of Lawrence O. Mellott were carried away by the water in Captina creek in a cloudburst and drowned. The bodies have not been recovered.

She was a happy wife, and her husband came home early every night.

PAYING THE PIPER.

South African Miners Will Have to Pony Up for War.

London, June 14.—Sir David Barbour, whom the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, sent to South Africa to investigate the sources of revenue of the Transvaal and Orange river colony with the view of estimating how much they should contribute towards the cost of the war, reports in favor of a 10 per cent tax on the profits of the mines yielding, on the basis of the profits of 1898, £450,000 yearly. After paying this, Sir David Barbour considers the mines will be better off than before, as they will save £600,000 per year on dynamite owing to the abolition of the monopoly in that commodity. The Orange River colony will be unable for some years to meet the ordinary cost of administration and pay its share of the cost of the constabulary. "It cannot, therefore," says Sir David Barbour, "so far as can be foreseen at present, pay anything toward the cost of the war."

The Transvaal, he thinks, can, two years after the conclusion of peace, begin out of its ordinary revenue to pay part of the cost of the war. He is unable now to estimate how much.

Sir David proposes also to apply all revenues derived from the sale of lands or mining rights to the war liquidation.

TOLD THE TALE.

Of Massacre and Cannibalism in New Guinea.

Victoria, B. C., June 14.—The Miowera, from Australia, brings these advices: As the result of publication of the stories of the presence of bubonic plague in San Francisco, Dr. Ashburton Thompson, quarantine officer at Sydney, refused to allow the steamer Ventura to go to the wharf.

From New Guinea news was received via Sydney of the massacre of Revs. James Chalmers and B. F. Tomkins, and 14 native teachers by cannibals. The whites were eaten. The place of the cannibal orgy was seen by the troops sent out to investigate the massacre and a portion of a jaw and thigh bones of the missionaries were found, together with their hats and portions of trousers which belonged to Chalmers. The expedition punished the natives, destroying their villages and canoes.

Some prisoners taken during an attack made by the natives on the troops told the tale of the massacre and cannibalism.

Ordered to Manila.

Washington, June 14.—"The China relief expedition as an organization will be discontinued at 12 o'clock midnight Sunday, May 12, 1901," reads an extract from the last paragraph of an order issued by Gen. Chaffee, dissolving one of the most unique and brilliant military organizations which the United States ever has sent into battle. Moreover, it enjoyed the distinction unknown to the American arms since the days of the revolution of fighting shoulder to shoulder with seasoned foreign allies. The order, which is dated at Pekin May 3, relieves all the troops save the legation guard from service in China on May 12, and orders them to Manila via Tongku. These troops were the Ninth infantry, Third squadron, Sixth cavalry and Tenth United States field battery, with detachments from the signal, hospital and engineer corps.

Cheating the Cat.

The meanest man is around town in many guises and in considerable numbers, but the meanest woman is a recent discovery. She lives in Philadelphia, and for the sake of saving a cent a day she cheats the cat by giving her each morning a saucerful of milk, and after about two teaspoonfuls of it have been lapped up she dilutes the milk with water and continues to do so till evening. When remonstrated with by her husband recently she said: "Well, the cat doesn't know the difference. It looks like milk, anyhow, and if I didn't thin it out for her we'd have to have 2 cents' worth for breakfast each day."—Philadelphia Record.

STORMS AND DEATH

Go Hand in Hand Throughout the State This Week

FOUR PEOPLE WERE KILLED

Rain, Thunder and Lightning Get in Their Dreadful Work in Many Places in the State—Great Damage Done.

Coral, Mich., June 14.—During the electric storm Wednesday night the German Methodist church, two miles west of here; Peter Sorensen's barn, two miles south, and John Kruger's house, four miles east, were struck and burned. Kruger's 18-year-old daughter, Mary, was killed.

Traverse City, Mich., June 14.—During the hight of the storm Wednesday the barn of Adam Melbert, five miles southeast, was struck by lightning and Will Eckey, a neighbor's boy, instantly killed. Three other children in the barn escaped. Two of them were severely burned. The barn was not burned, and no trace can be found of where the lightning struck.

Hudson, Mich., June 14.—Mrs. Geo. Marvin, wife of an Adrian business man, died suddenly of heart disease in her cottage at Manitou Beach, Devil's lake. The fatal attack was brought on by excitement due to a severe thunderstorm.

Marquette, Mich., June 14.—Word has been received from Ironwood, Mich., which states that the reports of a tornado in that town are incorrect.

Bessemer, Mich., June 14.—There is nothing in the report of a cyclone at Ironwood. Only a moderate wave of reform, which struck Hurley, and Bessemer also.

Ionia, Mich., June 14.—During a fierce electrical storm, Mrs. Eber Vickery of Danby fled to the cellar for safety. A bolt of lightning came down from the chimney and struck her. Her recovery is doubtful.

Tekonsha, Mich., June 14.—The severest fire ever known in the village occurred here Wednesday night in the midst of a terrific thunderstorm. A large storage barn owned by H. G. Sebring was struck by lightning and was ablaze in an instant. E. P. Keep's lumber yard, adjacent, soon caught fire, and H. N. Randall's produce building followed. The village is without fire protection, except buckets and ladders. The total loss will foot up $10,000. Keep and Sebring had no insurance; Randall partially insured. The entire town would likely have been destroyed had it not rained heavily during the fire.

Gov. Pingree Ill.

New York, June 14.—Ex-Governor of Michigan Hazen S. Pingree is ill in the city of London, according to a cable received here by Edwin Hollister Low of Low's Tourist agency. He said his London agency had sent him the cable, which simply read:

"Gov. Pingree ill."

Mr. Low does not know what is the matter with the governor, as he heard nothing more. He said he does not believe the illness is serious or the cable would have related something more.

Gilbert's Big Heart.

Detroit, June 14.—Judge Donovan, by whom an injunction was issued several weeks ago restraining Charles W. Gilbert from entering his wife's house at Delray, yesterday held that Gilbert had been in contempt of court in attempting to get in Wednesday, and fined him $10, to be paid within 24 hours, with the alternative of spending 10 days in the county jail. Gilbert secured his liberty yesterday afternoon and declares he has no hard feelings against Mrs. Gilbert for firing a bullet into his side.

Even the Bootblacks.

Muskegon, Mich., June 14.—Muskegon bootblacks have formed a union and the members will hereafter do no more shining for less than 10 cents. The union has a sick benefit fund, and when a member becomes ill he will be allowed $3 a week. There is also a committee appointed whose duty it is to furnish flowers on occasion of illness. The initiation fee is $1, which is deposited in a bank and constitutes the sick benefit fund.

Relations Indignant.

East Tawas, Mich., June 14.—Parties who are here awaiting the recovery of the bodies of relatives lost off the steamer Baltimore, are indignant on account of the long leads to the fish nets, believing that some of the bodies may be fast in the nets, as only three have been recovered. They were either fast to life preservers or caught in wreckage. Formal complaint was made to the United States authorities.

May Report Today.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 14.—The grand jury called in Harvey J. Hollister and McGeorge Bundy for a brief re-examination yesterday on disputed points of evidence, but most of the day was spent in deliberating on the indictments. It is believed several true bills were reported, but the list will not be given out until this afternoon, when the water boodling investigation will close.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, June 14.—Michigan pensions were granted Thursday as follows: Restoration and reissue—George H. Brooks, Hastings, $14. Increase—Hugh Patterson, soldiers' home, Kent, $10; Jacob B. Hathaway, Owosso, $12; Wm. Vandevort, Caro, $10. Widows—Fanny A. Call, Elsie, $8.

Wright's Vitals Were Sound.

St. Louis, Mich., June 14.—The doctors at the Wright inquest testified that they found the vital organs all right. Wright died while in the woods to keep an appointment with Mrs. Yats, according to the woman's confession.

The Perplexed Juror.

A man was being tried in New South Wales for stealing a watch. The evidence was conflicting, and the jury made up their minds to retire, but before they left the hall the judge remarked that if there were any points on which they required information he would be pleased to assist them. Eleven of the jurymen had left the box, but the twelfth remained standing, with his eyes fixed downward, as if absorbed in thought.

"Well, sir," said the judge, "is there any question you would like to ask me before you retire?"

"I would like to know, my lord," came the reply, "if you could tell us whether the prisoner stole the watch."

ELECTED OFFICERS.

The Michigan G. A. R. Chose Pontiac for Next Meeting.

Flint, Mich., June 14.—At the session of the G. A. R. encampment a resolution for the erection of a monument in honor of Michigan dead in the stockade at Andersonville was referred to the next encampment, and recommending that a committee be employed to investigate the cost.

James VanKleeck of Bay City and Edward Anthony of Negaunee were nominated for department commander. Anthony withdrew and VanKleeck was unanimously elected. Other officers elected: M. C. Barney of Flint, senior vice; Herbert A. Backus, Fairbanks post, Detroit, junior vice; W. W. Root, Mason, medical director; Rev. H. S. White, Romeo, chaplain. The new council of administration is composed of Wm. C. Claxton, Detroit; Ogden Tomlinson, Plainwell; W. J. Just, Ionia; A. M. Van Wormer, Grand Haven; Albert Donham, Jackson.

Weeks's Weak Statement.

Flint, Mich., June 14.—Lucius A. Weeks was interviewed at the county jail, and for the first time consented to give his story of the murder of Mrs. Jennie Parish. He claims the first shot was accidental. He said he had a row with Wm. Farquharson on the night of Decoration day; that Farquharson made threats which prompted him to carry a revolver when he went to the Parish woman's house Wednesday. Mrs. Parish discovered the pistol in his pocket and tried to take it away, grabbing the weapon by the muzzle. In the struggle it was discharged.

Important to Resorters.

Algonac, Mich., June 14.—A case of much importance to resorters along the St. Clair river has just been decided by Justice D. A. Jones. Deputy Game Warden Fisher made complaint against P. J. Harrigan, a New York commercial traveler, charging him with having pickerel of illegal size in his possession. Justice Jones acquitted Harrigan.

Were Not Cheap Guys.

Petoskey, Mich., June 14.—Burglars entered C. C. Hamill's store and took $150 worth of fine tobacco, cigars and table delicacies. No clue.

JUBILEE DAY.

Great Meetings and Splendid Addresses at Y. M. C. A. Convention.

Boston, June 14.—Jubilee day, as yesterday had been designated by the international jubilee convention of the Y. M. C. A., was brimful of interest, and the morning session in Mechanics hall was in a large degree picturesque and novel. After the formal addresses had been delivered by Cephas Brainerd of New York, President Faunce of Brown university and Rev. Francis E. Clark, the father of the Christian Endeavor movement, the presentation of foreign delegates went on again, as it will from time to time each day, the audience rising to its feet and welcoming with friendly voices and fluttering handkerchiefs each representative from foreign lands as he was presented, many of the latter wearing their native costumes.

A special jubilee service was held in the old South meeting house in the chapel in which the first Y. M. C. A. in the United States was organized 50 years ago, at which a commemorative tablet was unveiled.

In the evening a number of prominent railroad officials addressed a large meeting in Mechanics hall, their remarks having an especial bearing upon association work among the railroad men of North America.

WON THE MATCH.

Americans Beat the British at Trap Shooting.

London, June 14.—In spite of the high winds and dull skies the American gunners at the international clay bird trap shooting match, which began at Hendon Tuesday, continued to show their superiority over the British. At 4 p. m. the score of the day was: Americans, 394; British, 348.

The Americans won the third consecutive day of the clay bird match by a score of 843 to 739. The result was accepted with the greatest good will on the part of their British opponents, the ladies on the stand waving American and British flags.

A Billigerent Doctor.

Hot Springs, Wyo., June 14.—Dr. Jacob Giacomo of this place is under arrest charged with assault with intent to kill Miss Lizzie Brown and for the unlawful detention of the girl in his apartments. Miss Brown was a patient of the doctor for several weeks, during which time he is alleged to have forced his attentions upon her. When she refused to marry him he locked her up. The girl's mother and sister, accompanied by a policeman, went to the doctor's office and demanded the release of the girl. The doctor refused and pulled a revolver, which he snapped at the officer. They grappled and after a severe struggle, in which the doctor was badly beaten up, he was placed under arrest.

Appointed by the Governor.

Lansing, Mich., June 14.—Gov. Bliss has appointed Aaron V. McAlvay of Manistee judge of the nineteenth circuit to succeed the late Cassius M. Beardsley of Hersey.

R. M. Fillmore, Lansing; Emry J. Busby, Hastings, and Joseph H. Hooper, Ishpeming, were appointed members of the state barber's commission.

Saved from Potter's Field.

Chicago, June 14.—Instead of being sent to Potter's Field, the body of Rose La Fevre, the young actress who was shot at the Great Northern hotel Monday by Louis Hartman, will be buried in the Jewish cemetery. Clarence Hartman, who came from New York to attend the inquest over his nephew's body, has advanced money to defray the funeral expenses.

American Generosity.

London, June 14.—Foxhall Keene has sent £2,650 to Prince of Wales's hospital fund, the amount being one-half of the Oaks purse which he won with his filly Cap and Bells last Saturday.

Preparation For Confession.

A priest was engaged in instructing and catechising a Russian boy. Presently he said, "Now, my boy, tell me what you must do by way of preparing for confession and penace?" "Sin your reverence," was the unexpected answer.—London Telegraph.

Land in England is 800 times as valuable now as it was 200 years ago.

MACHINISTS OBJECT

To Students Taking Their Places in Cincinnati

THEY COME FROM COVINGTON

Laborers at Sandusky Strike for More Pay and the Butchers of San Francisco Want Better Terms from Wholesalers.

Cincinnati, O., June 14.—The machinists' union of Covington, Ky., has sent a letter to Gov. Beckham in which they appeal for an investigation of the action of Prof. J. P. Anderson of the Kentucky State college who, they claim, is sending students from the mechanical department of that college to Cincinnati to take the places of striking machinists. The officers of the union assert that 10 students are now at work in various shops in Cincinnati and that they are working without any pay whatever. The strikers think Gov. Beckham will investigate the matter and have the students recalled.

Chicago, June 14.—A break occurred yesterday in the ranks of Chicago manufacturers whose employes are on strike. Six firms, employing 135 men, reached a settlement with their striking machinists, and the men returned to work this morning under an agreement, securing to them the nine-hour day and an increase in wages acceptable to the union.

Sandusky, O., June 14.—Over 200 men are idle here as a result of a strike of lumber pilers, sorters and teamsters. The lumbermen struck for an increase of 25 cents a day and the local longshoremen went out in sympathy. The Sandusky Lumber Co. has shut down as a result.

San Francisco, June 14.—The only development in the butchers' strike is a proposed combination of union retailers and journeymen to establish slaughter houses of their own, making them independent of the wholesale butchers. Thus far the strike has caused no diminution of the supply of meat in the city. Both the union and non-union retailers have been able to supply customers with a fair degree of promptness. Of the 600 retail shops in the city, 150 display union cards.

Bar of Cincinnati Shocked.

Cincinnati, June 14.—The bar of Cincinnati was shocked to hear that one of its best known members was found in his bedroom alone with a bullet in his brain. It was Frederick G. Roelker, unmarried. The first impression was that the shooting was an attempted suicide, but the family physician, after an examination, stated that the shooting was accidental. Roelker had been suffering all winter from grip and was detained at home by another attack. He is the son of Dr. Roelker, a prominent German physician, and had been very successful in his law practice. He was a graduate of the Cincinnati law school and of the Harvard law school. Roelker lingered all day and died last night.

A Fighting Fire Chief.

Omaha, Neb., June 14.—The board of fire and police commissioners, in executive session, has passed a resolution reducing the salary of the fire chief, John Redell, from $3,000 to $2,000 a year and instructed the chief of police to send patrolmen to all fires to protect the firemen against assaults by the chief. This action of the board grows out of the granting of an injunction by the district court restraining the fire and police board from hearing charges preferred against Redell for insubordination, cruel treatment of the men and malfeasance and discharging him from the force. The supreme court is expected to pass on the case next week.

Fatal Head-End Collision.

Los Angeles, June 14.—Two are dead and four injured as the result of a head-end collision on the Santa Fe railroad, six miles east of Williams, Ariz. The passenger train was going east at a lively rate when it crashed into a double-header freight, westbound. The leading engine of the freight train was badly wrecked. The fireman's body has not yet been recovered from the debris.

Remarkable Report.

Washington, June 14.—Col. Cochrane, U. S. M. C., in his capacity as inspector of the naval station at Cavite, reports to the navy department under date of May 1st that during the preceding month the condition of the naval prison there was further improved and that the health of the prisoners continues remarkable. There was not a case of illness in April.

A Supposed American.

Berlin, June 14.—A man named Ende, supposed to be an American, who is accused of robbing jewelers to the amount of 50,000 marks, was arrested on entering the place occupied by an alleged receiver of stolen goods. Ende stabbed the policeman who took him into custody.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 14.—Munrow Aukerman was sentenced by Judge Adams to life imprisonment in Jackson penitentiary for the murder of Fred Harris, colored, last winter. He took the sentence indifferently.

DARING DEED.

Three Sailors Go 700 Miles in an Open Boat for Relief.

Halifax, N. S., June 14.—After sailing nearly 700 miles in an open boat to take relief to their ship, the Border Knight, Mathie, chief officer, and two of the crew arrived in Sheet Harbor, the end of their 15-days' journey, to find that their steamer had just been towed in, a distance of 450 miles, by the Spanish steamer Duranco Capt. W. F. Splatt of the Border Knight and his crew were landed here, while the brave little rescue party found a haven 40 miles to the eastward.

When the Border Knight's tail shaft broke in latitude 34.10 north and longitude 59.44 west, 300 miles northeast of Bermuda, sails were rigged and she began to make her way slowly northward. Provisions were scarce, for she had made an unusually slow voyage from Africa, and the situation seemed to be desperate, as she was far out of the track of commerce.

Mathie and the two men volunteered to set out in the lifeboat with a flimsy bit of sail to bring assistance to the British steamer. This was on May 29, and on June 7 the Duranco, outward bound, responded to the signals of distress on the Border Knight on Saturday. The Border Knight was bound from Cape Verde islands to New York.

YE JOLLY EDITAIRES

Hear a Lot of Papers Read and Had Some Fun Last Night.

Buffalo, June 14.—President Baillie called the National Editorial association to order yesterday.

Judge V. W. Grubbs of Desmonville, Tex., first president, was next, his subject being "Industrial education." A paper by Samuel T. Clover of Chicago on "The new century newspaper" was read by B. B. Herbert. The other speakers were Richmond C. Hill of Buffalo on "The graphic arts;" F. R. SOCIETY WOMAN SUICIDES

And Puts a Bullet Into the Brain of Her Son.

Montreal, June 14.—Mrs. J. J. Redpath, one of Montreal's society leaders is dead in her handsome residence on Sherbrooke street, and her son, Clifford Redpath, is lying unconscious in Royal Victoria hospital with a bullet in his brain.

About 6 o'clock the household was startled by the noise of two revolver shots from Mrs. Redpath's room. On rushing in the servants found Mrs. Redpath and her son lying on the floor, both unconscious. Physicians were summoned but Mrs. Redpath died in a few minutes. Her son was removed to the hospital in a dying condition.

Mrs. Redpath had been ill for some time suffering greatly from insomnia. The surmise is that while temporarily mentally deranged Mrs. Redpath attempted to end her life, and in attempting to prevent her the son was shot.

Young Redpath died in the hospital at 11:50 p. m. without regaining consciousness.

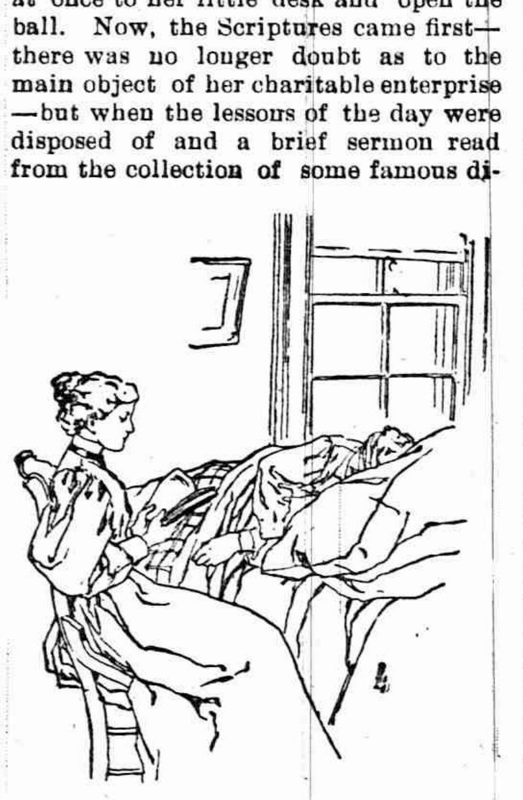
CHAPTER XI.

November had given way to a still more wintry month, and December, cold, clear, snow white and sparkling, chained the streams in icy fetters and spread abroad its [illegible] blanket. The holidays were drawing nigh, and garrison children were reveling in hope and whispered rumors of the great times to come. There was to be a Christmas tree in the post hall, with presents for all the little ones. Miss Leroy was managing everything, and what Miss Leroy undertook went with a dash. The afternoons now were given up to all manner of sewing and stitching and striving, dressing dolls and filling cornucopias and parceling out gifts so that no child should be overlooked or forgotten, but never once did Miss Leroy neglect her morning Bible class, for such it had become, and into the fold were gladly drawn not only convalescent patients in hospital, but volunteers from barracks and quarters who had no bodily ills, but who rejoiced in souls in need of saving. Ransom had no chaplain in those days, or sectarian piety might have taken alarm at the rapid increase in Miss Leroy's weekday Sunday school. Two of the most devout and regular attendants of late were Sergeant and Mrs. Merriweather. Drills were suspended, it being now too cold and snowy, and Miss Leroy's hospital services began regularly at 10. She would enter, bright, smiling, happy faced, go at once to her little desk and open the ball. Now, the Scriptures came first—there was no longer doubt as to the main object of her charitable enterprise—but when the lessons of the day were disposed of and a brief sermon read from the collection of some famous divine the barrack squad and Sudstown people would retire, and she could then devote another hour to lighter reading for the benefit of her patients exclusively, some of whom were still in the ward with the graver cases.



"Among these lay Trooper Hunter."

And among these latter, with bandaged eyes and burned and blistered face and hands, an unrecognizable bundle of bandages, lay Trooper Hunter, over whose head, unseen, unknown, there was hanging a sword.

For some days and nights concussion of the brain was feared. The magazine had been blown into a thousand fragments, and how many of these, beams or bricks, had felled him, no one ever knew. He was hauled out of the stream, at first, like poor Pat Shea, bleeding, burned and senseless. He began to mend in a few days, however, and by the 8th of December was occasionally sitting up in an invalid chair, his eyes and cheeks still under cover. But from the time his convalescence began Trooper Hunter had spent two hours each morning listening to the voice of the charmer who charmed so wisely, and there came a day when she bent over his couch and laid her cool soft white hand on his forehead and asked him if there were nothing she could do, no friends or relatives to whom he would like her to write, and he murmured that he couldn't think of any just then, but might if she'd come again to ask him on the morrow. She came, and on the next and the next day, too, marveling not a little at the voice, the intelligence, the language of this particular patient. She strove to study his features, but without success, for when the doctor thought to remove the bandages the patient declared the morning light was altogether too much for his weakened eyes. He would be bandaged in the morning, though the afternoon sunshine was really more brilliant, and he didn't seem to mind it then. Miss Leroy took to sitting by Hunter's bedside as much as 10 minutes at first; then the 10 began to lengthen to 15 and even 20, and other patients waxed impatient and said things about Hunter and thought things about her that proved how jealous is the human heart, even when it beats beneath a flannel shirt. The surgeon said Hunter could soon return to his troop, as far as his health was concerned, but there were reasons to fear his health might suffer after he got there, for Major Mainwaring, now in temporary command of the post, was making frequent and impetuous inquiries. Colonel and Mrs. Atherton had gone east on two months' leave; Major and Mrs. Stannard had gone to Russell for a fortnight to visit old friends in another regiment, and here, to his huge delight, was Mainwaring in command of an eight company post. Then the surgeon asked why Mainwaring was so anxious to have the patient out, and learned something that proved a painful shock.

"Well, major," said he after a solemn silence, "of course you're commanding officer, but I find it mighty hard to believe that story, and I protest against its being made known to him until he is strong enough to bear it, which he isn't now."

There had been much talk at the hospital among the stewards and attendants and patients who could talk at all as to the result of the board of survey promptly convened at Colonel Atherton's request to ascertain the cause of the mysterious explosion which had wrecked the magazine and ruined its contents, and it did not take long for such keen scouts and trailers as Ray, Blake and old Wilkins to make up their minds. Coupled with what had occurred at the south gate that night, just a little while before the explosion, there was no doubt that an extensive robbery had taken place and that the object of the destruction of the magazine was the obliteration with it of evidences of the crime.

It seemed that shortly before 11:30 that night two veteran sergeants of Truscott's troop returning from Butte on pass became aware of a wagon driving ahead of them as they left town and soon disappearing out on the prairie east of the road. Now, there was not a ranch or house to which it could have gone. Everything of that kind lay farther down the stream, where it swept in bold curve, first to the south, then eastward again. Rumors of forage stealing they had heard, and therefore decided to find where the wagon went, but after searching awhile in the gale and the darkness they gave it up, yet warned the sergeant of the guard as they alighted at the south gate, and their hack driver returned with his rig to town.

Captain Blake was notified, and a patrol was ordered out to scour the right bank of the little stream that flowed back of the stables. They hadn't gone 50 yards before they stirred up a squad of troopers that scattered at their approach, but one was captured—Ray's rapscallion of a trumpeter, the Kid—and the Kid refused flatly and characteristically to say who the others were. A privileged character was the Kid. He had been ten years or more in the regiment and ten dozen times in scrapes. A better little soldier on campaign or a worse one in garrison couldn't be found in all the —th, and as the regiment had spent more of those ten years in the field than in the fort the Kid had still a small balance to his credit. He had a medal of honor from congress for heroism in fierce, savage battle and a record for deviltry of every conceivable kind. Ray was the only man, except Atherton, he either feared or loved. Grinning from ear to ear, he told Blake that there wasn't any officer in the regiment smart enough to scare him into giving away a fellow soldier, and Blake sent for Ray. Something told him there was mischief afoot, and Ray and the explosion came almost together.

Only two men in all Fort Ransom, however, were found to have anything to explain as to their whereabouts that night. First, Sergeant Merriweather, whom the sergeant of the guard had inquired for just after visiting sentries, and solely because a light was burning so late in his window. The second was the new trooper, Hunter, found nearly 300 yards away from his proper post, blinded, senseless, bleeding and half drowned. The Kid had told the plausible tale that "him and three other fellers was sneaking off to town for a lark" when detected. Merriweather declared that he had heard horses stamping and snorting in the stables and had considered it his duty, though no longer stable sergeant, to go and investigate, and that he saw no sentry on No. 6, but hunted up and down for him, wondering where he could be, and was so occupied when the explosion occurred. But Hunter had not yet been approached. There were reasons why it was deemed best to let him suppose no suspicion attached to him.

For, no sooner was it light enough to see, the morning after the explosion, than Atherton had some of his best officers scouring the prairie for traces. They found bricks, bullets and unexploded boxes of cartridges all over the neighborhood, but not one of the 40 revolvers and only 20 of the 80 boxes of carbine, rifle and revolver cartridges that should have been there. Of the barrel of rifle powder and half barrel of cannon cartridges not a vestige, of course, remained. All this was brought out by the board, and, the board's findings having been sent to department headquarters, Atherton, as has been said, had gone off on leave; so had Stannard, and this left Mainwaring in command.

"Not a word, not a hint to that fellow until I tell you," said Mainwaring to the post surgeon, who, an older man and a major senior in rank by several years, was nevertheless his inferior in the eyes of military law and regulation, he being debarred from assuming command. And so, as Hunter grew stronger every day and watched with eagerness for the coming each morning of the young devotee, there dawned upon him no ray of suspicion of the toils that were surrounding him, for Miss Leroy, who used to talk at home of her pupil patients, had become silent as to one at least and uncommunicative as to all, for Mrs. Mainwaring of late had expressed her disapprobation in no measured terms, and there was no longer that sweet accord which should obtain between aunt and niece.

One bright morning the doctor bade Hunter lay aside the shrouding bandages entirely and wear only a green shade over the eyes. Orders were orders, but when Miss Leroy entered and, as usual, spoke to him a dainty handkerchief was pressed to his face. The light, he said, was still too dazzling.

"But you are much better," said she in her clear tones. "The doctor says you can soon return to light duty, probably before Christmas."

Then as she took her seat to read, her side face toward him, he slipped the kerchief a little to one side that he might gaze undisturbed.

The men had asked that she should give 15 minutes at least to the leading events of the day, and a Chicago paper was selected for their edification. From this she chose such items as she thought might prove of interest, and to these Hunter listened in spite of himself. First she read of the political news; then the doings of great dignitaries, foreign and domestic, and then came accidents by flood and field and another railway hold up on a small scale. To all these he lent but languid ear. He was watching with eager eyes the movements of those soft, sensitive, curved red lips. He hardly paid even faint attention to what she was saying until something in the names struck him as familiar. All the foremost part of the paragraph had passed unheard, unheeded, but now—now only by strong effort could he restrain himself from sitting bolt upright in bed and reaching out and seizing the paper and reading for himself, for what she read, when once again he became conscious of her words, was this:

"The overturned yacht now lies in 40 feet of water, her taper masts and upper rigging all that remain visible. Mr. Hunter is doing well, carefully attended by Dr. Lambert at the Hotel des Ambassadeurs. The bodies of Mrs. Hunter and her unfortunate friends will doubtless be recovered this morning. The ladies were caught in the cabin when the Amorita was struck, and escape was impossible. She went to the bottom like a shot. English and American residents are in deep grief. The ballroom at the Casino last night was almost deserted. Many New York and Philadelphia families are at Nice for the winter, and the tragic fate of Mrs. Hunter has cast a gloom over the community. Mr. Hunter had greatly improved in health, but it is feared this bereavement may again prostrate him. They have no children."

The Amorita? That yacht was owned by a wealthy English admirer of his uncle's wife. For more reasons than one Hunter Gray had never fancied him, and even his easy going uncle seemed to hold aloof. But Mrs. Hunter, so much her husband's junior in years, loved society, adored yachting, and what was more necessary for her beloved invalid's recovery than the soft sea breezes of the Riviera and the idyllic dolce far niente days and nights under those incomparable Mediterranean skies and on the Amorita's dainty deck? There was a late supper going on one joyous night aboard, just as she was coming in from a day's dancing over the blue waters. There was misunderstanding between her skipper and that of a steamer over the right of way—signals or God knows what—for when the Amorita rounded to the cruel black prow struck her amidships and ground her underneath the iron keel. Through the devotion of the crew Mr. Hunter and one or two friends with him were rescued. They were on deck. But nothing could save the hapless banqueters still below. Darcy Hunter had survived the wreck of his business, the wreck of the Amorita—had survived even his young, light hearted wife, with whose remains, said the paper, he would return to America at once.

CHAPTER XII.

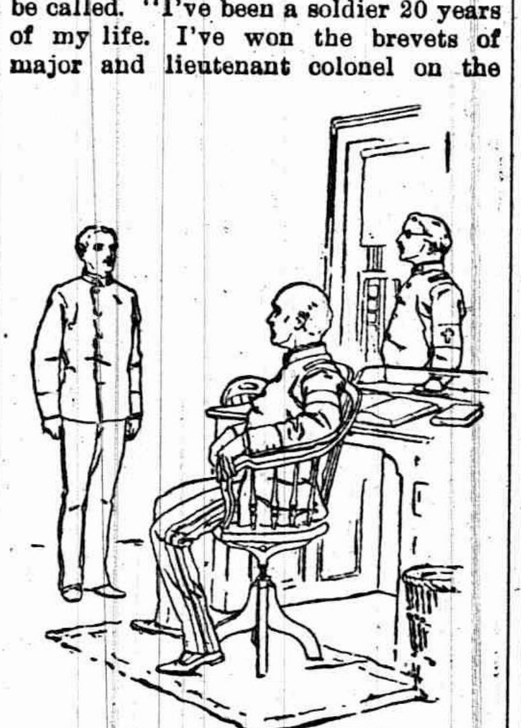
That evening when the surgeon was making his visit to the hospital the steward told him Trooper Hunter desired to speak with him, and, halting somewhat in his gait and looking very pallid still, but otherwise little the worse for wear, the tall soldier was ushered into the dispensary.

The junior medical officer, for reasons the senior could not quite fathom, had on several occasions recently asked the senior if he did not think Hunter fit to return to light duty and gave his opinion that he was getting soft and lazy there. The post surgeon, for reasons the junior could not fathom at all, replied that he thought it might be several days before he should permit Hunter to return to his troop. This in nowise added to Jayne's good will toward his gentlemanly and attractive patient. Hunter was fortunate in having won the sympathy of the senior. Tonight he won something more.

Standing bolt upright at the door, he said:

"May I speak one moment with the colonel in private?"

The surgeon almost blushed as he whirled toward the speaker. All through the war of the rebellion he had served, a gallant, skillful, devoted officer, ever seeking duty at the front, ever ready night or day to brave peril, hardship or fatigue to go with his regiment into action. Time and again he had dashed with them into battle. More than once he had cheered them in headlong charge until recalled to himself and duties that bade him sheathe the sword for the scalpel. Scorning to leave his wounded, he had fallen with them into the hands of the enemy and had starved with them at Andersonville. Once he had been seriously wounded as he knelt beside a stricken comrade on the battle line. Twice he had been offered hospital duty at Annapolis and Washington and declined. From one end of the war to the other he had been known among the men as the fighting doctor, and the fame had followed him to the far frontier, where in one long and fierce campaign against the Sioux he had spared himself no hardship that the humblest soldier had to endure, and the cavalry swore by him—aye, and the lithe, sinewy, hard marching, hard fighting doughboys, too—and loved him for the love he bore them. With all he was a student of his trade and gloried in it, but most he gloried that he was a soldier. He looked it, lived it, deserved it and everything the name implied, but he had one weakness, if weakness honest glory in one's profession could be called. "I've been a soldier 20 years of my life. I've won the brevets of major and lieutenant colonel on the battlefield and colonel for the war, but never have I been called or can I look to be called anything but doctor. Here are your paymasters, commissaries, quartermasters — fellows that never heard a hostile bullet whistle or saw the smoke of battle—lots of 'em. You call them captain or major, as though they were soldiers, but you snub, by God, the one staff corps that never leaves the fighting line when the fighting begins."



"May I speak one moment with the colonel in private?"

Now, the surgeon had come but lately to Ransom. He had served but a few weeks with the —th, yet Truscott and Ray had discovered his sensitiveness and gladly hailed him as colonel. Blake promptly followed suit, but when Mainwaring heard it Mainwaring bristled. "What right's a d——d doctor to expect to be called anything but doctor?" he asked, explosively, and he no more meant to be offensive or thought he could be considered offensive in his language than did the doctor in claiming recognition as a soldier. And then, as Mainwaring prided himself on "never saying behind a fellow's back what he wouldn't say to his face," and the Lord only knew what he hadn't said to people's faces—what did the major do, only that very day, but, in attempted jocularity, pitch into the post surgeon at the morning gathering of the officers and try to chaff him about wanting to be called colonel! It stung the honest old soldier surgeon to the quick. It hurt him sore, and he left the room disgusted.

And so, when from the lips of this tall trooper came the title he valued, the post surgeon fairly blushed, for he had been thinking intently over the events of the morning, and, if the truth must be told, was wondering how he could get square with Major Mainwaring and here was a possible opportunity.

Obedient to his superior's nod, the hospital steward went out, closing the door behind him.

"What is it, Hunter?" asked the surgeon kindly.

"I have come to ask, sir, if it would be possible for me to return to my troop tonight, and if the colonel could aid me in any way to get a furlough of 20 or 30 days."

Colonel Connell looked up, perplexed, even troubled. Both requests were unusual from old soldiers and never heard of from recruits.

"I fear not, Hunter. You see, there are reasons why you ought not to attempt to return to duty yet, and what can you allege as reason for a furlough so soon after enlistment?"

"Urgent personal affairs, sir," was the answer, a half smile twitching at the corners of the handsome mouth. "Even a trooper may have them, you know."

"Hunter," said the surgeon after a moment's pause, "be advised by me. Don't think of going back to duty for two or three days yet and don't let any one know you wish to leave Ransom on any account just now."

No Pegs.

Beerbohm Tree had a comical experience on his first appearance as the corpulent Falstaff. In the last act he had arranged that Falstaff, disconcerted by gibes and buffets of the fairies in Windsor forest, should make one herculean effort to climb the oak tree. The pegs that were to serve as supports for that tree were always conspicuous by their absence. On the morning before the performance Mr. Tree was told they should positively be fixed on the tree. The morning came, but with it no pegs. Eloquence was stifled; even invective faltered. He pointed to the tree and with the calm of despair blurted out to the defaulter, "No pegs!"

Such an ejaculation, spoken more in sorrow than in anger, would, he hoped, appeal to that last remnant of conscience which even the papier mache bosom of a property man might be supposed to retain. In the evening there was a dress rehearsal, but still no pegs could be seen. Mr. Tree's form quivered—beneath the padding—with pent up emotions, and in a torrent of passion and a voice shaken by righteous wrath he exclaimed:

"Where are those pegs?"

"Pegs—pegs!" exclaimed the property master, with exasperating affability. "Why, guv'nor, what was your words to me this morning? 'No pegs.' And there ain't none!"—London Tit-Bits.

Howells' Advice to Writers.

One day at Lakewood while sitting at a little table in the big rotunda hall drinking afternoon tea I met Mr. W. D. Howells and had a delightful conversation with him. After knowing the personality of this famous author one enjoys his writing ten times more—he is so magnetic and his conversation so interesting and breezy. "Yes," he said, "I always advise any one who has an inclination for it to try to write. One shouldn't expect to have the first things one does published, but one must keep on trying. It is an excellent plan to set down something one has seen in everyday life and try to get a story out of it. Indeed, it's the best way to practice.

"Writing is mostly drudgery," he continued "I have to force myself to go into my library to work, and I find myself putting off the hour as long as possible."

"But when you once sit down?" I ventured.

"Even then it's hard work for awhile until I get into the swing. Let no one imagine the muse comes without a summons and without a good deal of urging! At least she never does to me!"—Anna Wentworth in Woman's Home Companion.

Set For the Wrong Time.

He works in a down town office for a gruff old chap who has no love for laggards. He is due at 8 sharp, but as he likes to be out o' nights he never wakes up a moment too soon. He has an alarm clock, which he sets at 7, and this gives him barely time to dress, breakfast and reach the office.

One day last week, the man having forgotten to wind his clock the night before, it didn't go off. So there were explanations to be made about 8:30 a. m. This was the excuse:

"Well, you see, Mr. Gruff, I know how punctual you like all of your men to be, so I have an alarm clock, which I set for 7 in the morning. But, by mistake, I set it for 7 in the evening last night, and of course it didn't go off at 7 in the morning today, as usual. And I overslept myself."

"Ah, you did? Well, I'll excuse you this time. But set it properly after this."

And now the chap is wondering whether or not "the old man" was really fooled or merely wanted to let him down easy. Perhaps he thinks the boss believes he has a 24 hour clock.—Kansas City Journal.

Bull Baiting.

Although bull baiting was a cruel pastime, it was also a fulfilling of the law, for formerly no butcher was allowed to offer for sale the flesh of any bull that had not been baited. The goading of the animal in a fury was supposed to have some influence on the flesh. In a similar belief the flesh of a hunted hare was thought to be superior in flavor to that of one that had been shot, and a present of "a hunted hare" was considered to be a special compliment. In the records of the corporation of Leicester, England, the following order appears: "At a common hall, held on Thursday before St. Simon and St. Jude, 1467, 'no butcher to kill a bull till baited.' " At Winchester it was ordered (thirtieth Henry VIII) "that from hensforth ther shal be no bulstake set before any mayor's dore to bayte any bull, but onlie at the bull-ringe within the saide cytie."

Remarkable Power.

A dear old lady was taken one day to a musical service in a Boston church. She had heard much about the fine voice of the soprano and was prepared for a treat.

She sat in rapt enjoyment until the service was over and then turned a radiant face toward her escort, who was a young grandson.

"Dear boy," she said, "you've given me a great treat. Her voice is perfectly beautiful. It made cold chills run all up and down my spine."

"It's too bad, grandmamma," said the boy, "but she didn't sing today, though she was there. The gentleman next me says she's been suffering from a bad cold, and one of the chorus had to sing the solos for her."

"What, dear?" said the old lady, looking momentarily distressed. Then her face cleared, and she patted his arm reassuringly.

"Never you mind," she said. "We can come again some time. But, after all, if she can make me feel that way without singing I don't know that it would be wise for me to hear her. Now, would it?"—Youth's Companion.

The Jaw of an Otter.

You can find an example of nature's adaptation of the jaw to use in the case of certain carnivora, like the otter—a big weasel that has acquired aquatic habits. The jaws of such beasts are so fixed in the sockets that dislocation is impossible. In some instances you cannot, even after the animal is dead, separate the jaw from the head. This arrangement is evidently designed to enable the beast to bite to the greatest advantage without danger that the chewing apparatus will come loose.

Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Every woman loves to think of the time when a soft little body, all her own, will nestle in her bosom, fully satisfying the yearning which lies in the heart of every good woman. But yet there is a black cloud hovering about the pretty picture in her mind which fills her with terror. The dread of childbirth takes away much of the joy of motherhood. And yet it need not be so. For sometime there has been upon the market, well-known and recommended by physicians, a liniment called which makes childbirth as simple and easy as nature intended it. It is a strengthening, penetrating liniment, which the skin readily absorbs. It gives the muscles elasticity and vigor, prevents sore breasts, morning sickness and the loss of the girlish figure.

Letter from the Auditor General.

Department of Auditor General,
Lansing, Mich., June 10, 1901.

EDITOR HERALD:

Through information received from various sections of the state, I learn that letters and postal cards are being sent out from Ann Arbor and elsewhere making promises of assistance for a stipulated amount, in securing money due to individuals and estates, in cases of double payments of taxes occasioned in most cases through redemptions by the owners after the purchase of state tax certificates. It is the present policy of this department to ascertain as to all amounts that are held by the state and due to individuals and estates and to remit such amounts with interest, where interest is due, as rapidly as possible.

In the meantime will you please ask your readers not to make any payments or promises of payment to individuals to secure amounts due them. Ask them to send such letters or postal cards or any information which they may possess relative to amounts due them to me and their claim will be promptly adjusted in full. Inasmuch as some of these unsettled matters have been on the books of this department for forty years or more it will require time and labor to properly adjust them, but work in this direction is now in progress and will be hurried forward until completed. A kindly compliance with this request will be a favor to many of your readers as well as to myself.

Yours very truly,

Auditor General.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Wednesday Afternoon at the Home of A. B. Harding

MR. AND MRS. CHAS. F. SIZER,

Of Adrian, Enjoyed the Celebration of the 50th Anniversary of Their Wedding Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Sizer, of Adrian, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Arthur Harding, Wednesday afternoon, the occasion being also the anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Harding.

The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers, many of them of the golden hue which afforded the appropriate color. The following program was rendered:

Mendelssohn's wedding march—Mrs. Howard Field.

Recitation, "The Wife's Influence"—Miss Ina Westerman.

Music, "When do flow'rets bud and blow"—Miss Flora and Clifford Westerman.

Reading, "The Wedding Fee"—Miss Myrtle Stanley.

Duet, "When you and I were young, Maggie"—Mr. Wilbur and Miss Ina Westerman.

Remarks—Rev. Howard A. Field.

Response—The groom of 50 years ago.

Solo—Arthur Harding.

Following the program an elegant supper was served in the dining room. Mr. and Mrs. Sizer received many beautiful gifts, the gift of the groom to the bride being a handsome gold watch. Mrs. Harding also received a number of beautiful remembrances.

Those from out of town, who attended were Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Field, of Milan; Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Field, of Rollin; Mrs. J. B. Crawford, of Menominee; Walter Westerman and family and B. F. Stanley and family, of Adrian. Mrs. Westerman and Mrs. Stanley are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Sizer.

Queer Indian Beliefs.

There is an [illegible] feature in the theology of the [illegible] Indian tribe of the Bella Coola, [illegible] inhabit British Columbia in about latitude 52. They believe that there are five worlds, one above the other, and the middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are two heavens, and under it are two underworlds. In the upper heaven is the supreme deity, who is a woman, and she doesn't meddle much with the affairs in the second world below her. The zenith is the center of the lower heaven, and here is the house of the gods, in which live the sun and the rest of the deities.

Our own earth is believed to be an island swimming in the ocean. The first underworld from the earth is inhabited by ghosts who can return when they wish to heaven, from which place they may be sent down to our earth. If then they misbehave again, they are cast into the lower of the underworlds, and from this bourne no ghostly traveler returns.

The Bella Coola are sun worshipers, for Senex, the sun, the master of the house of gods, who also is called "the father" and "the sacred one," is the only deity to whom the tribe pray. Each family of the Bella Coola has its own traditions and its own form of the current traditions, so that in the mythology of the tribe there are countless contradictions. When any one not a member of a clan tries to tell a tradition which does not belong to his clan, it is like a white man trying to tell another's joke—he is considered as appropriating the property right which does not belong to him.

Hard Ducks to Kill.

The screaming walloon is a hard duck to kill. Its hide is very tough and is thickly covered with feathers and down. Besides the bird is a great diver, one of the kind that used to "dive at the flash" when hunted with the old arm that flashed when fired. It is of very little value for table use, being so tough. The only way to manage it at all is to skin it and parboil it in a big pot with plenty of water. The negroes make caps of walloon skins.

"They are great ducks for diving," says a well known Tred Avon river progger.

"They can dive quicker, go down deeper, remain under water longer and come up farther away than any other duck that frequents our waters. I remember once I succeeded in killing a walloon, and, being short of game for the table, I determined to cook my bird. I got a negro to skin it, giving him the hide for his trouble. After being cleaned we put it in a great pot full of water and under it kindled a hot fire. After awhile I wanted to see how the cooking of my duck progressed and lifted the top off the boiling pot, but there was so much steam escaping I could not see into the pot and struck a match over it. The blamed walloon, sir, dived at the flash of the match. It disappeared and has never been seen since."—Baltimore Sun.

A Lesson to Humorists.

One cannot safely assume in these days that there is any region in which such and such a journal is not read. Recently a certain humorist needed a rest and went and stopped in a cottage in a remote village by the sea. His sitting room opened on the kitchen, where his landlady, a woman widely esteemed as a person of great acumen and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and put both landlady and neighbors into some amusing sketches which were promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Then one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cower before an indignant matron, who told him, among other things, that he had one hour in which to pack his traps and quit the village. She was not going to have an eavesdropper in her house, and she added a significant hint to the effect that the people of the village were of the same opinion and might be betrayed into an attempt to give a forcible demonstration of their views.—London Post.

Now They Are Married.

A bashful young man went three times to ask a beautiful young lady if he might be the partner of her joys and sorrows and other household furniture, but each time his heart failed him, and he took the question away unpopped.

She saw the anguish of his soul and had compassion on him. So the next time he came she asked him if he had thought to bring a screwdriver with him.

He blushed and wanted to know what for.

And she, in the fullness of her heart, said she did not know but that he would want to screw up his courage before he left.

He took the hint and the girl.—Pearson's Weekly.

A LONG FELT WANT.

It is Supplied in This Vicinity at Last.

It is hard to always be pleasant.

Good natured people are often irritable.

If you knew the reason you would not be surprised.

Ever have itching piles?

Not sick enough to go to bed or not well enough to be content.

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Keeps you awake nights.

Spoils your temper—nearly drives you crazy.

Isn't relief and a cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for every one in Doan's Ointment.

Doan's Ointment never fails to cure Itching Piles, Eczema or any itching of the skin.

Here is proof of it at the testimony of an Ann Arbor citizen:

Mr. C. C. Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemorrhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of and used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a different effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into account the number of years I was afflicted, the irritation ceased and the inflammation was allayed. When Doan's Ointment cured me it will cure others."

The Mysterious Sunday Disease.

Many people are seemingly well during the week, but afflicted with all manner of ailments when Sunday comes around, and on Monday they are all well again. I really dread the approach of the Lord's day, for with the day there come to many of my flock colds, sick headaches, pain in the side and nausea, while numbers complain of "that languid feeling."

Sunday before last I spent really an anxious day, for there happened to be absent from the services quite a number, for the best of reasons, of course—a rushing in the head, a touch of sciatica, cramps, toothache, hardness of hearing, catarrh, torpid liver, inflammation of the membranes, lumbago and, worse than all, "that tired feeling."

Then, what greatly distressed me the next day was that Mrs. Henry Van Blarscom had issued invitations to an "at home" for that evening, and the fear well nigh paralyzed me that but few would respond, seeing many of her invited guests had been absent from the Sabbath services. Imagine, then, if you can, my profound surprise to see on that Monday evening so wholly unexpected, so general and complete a recovery, and when I made inquiry concerning the Sabbath ailments only two were able to recall what had really been the matter with them the day before.—A Minister in Christian Intelligencer.

A Kindly Joke.

Judge Braxfield, famous in England for his love for hanging criminals, when on circuit always put up near Perth with a crony who was devoted to chess. The laird had rather the better of his lordship at the game. In the revolution of the circuits Braxfield found himself trying his hospitable friend, who had got awkwardly mixed up in some abduction of cattle. The evidence was clear, the panel was convicted and the judge passed the solemn sentence of death. Then, bending down, he chuckled to the unfortunate prisoner—the accommodation in the provincial courts was cramped—"And now, Donald, my friend, I think I've checkmated you for once." But Braxfield delighted in a kindly joke.

Trifling With Charon.

Just as Charon was about to make the ferry slip the ex-distiller nudged him in the ribs.

"If it isn't too much trouble," said the latter, "I wish you would put me with the arrivals from Boston."

"But you are from St. Louis," protested Charon. "Wouldn't you feel out of place among so much culture?"

"No, indeed. I always feel at home in the midst of refined spirits."

Thereupon the ancient ferryman tossed the ex-distiller into the Styx.—Chicago News.

Be[illegible]d.

FAUST'S WILD CHARGE.

It Sent Marguerite Flying In Terror From the Stage.

The name of the hero of this anecdote I shall not give you, for he has long since been gathered to his fathers. Let it suffice that in his heyday he was one of the greatest tenors who ever sang to a breathless and enthusiastic audience. He had a penchant, however, for the red, red wine, which in the end proved his undoing and ultimately provided a pathetic ending for an otherwise great career. In his prime his drinking seemed only to affect his legs, but never his head or voice. He could always sing and sing true, but at times he had no more ability to guide his wandering footsteps than has a sufferer in the last stages of locomotor ataxia.

At one time, when he was singing Faust to Emma Abbott's Marguerite, he appeared at the opera house in an apparently hopeless condition. The management was wild, but there was no one to take his place, and so they had to chance it with him as Faust. All went well until they came to that scene where Faust, in leaving Marguerite, crosses the stage and then, giving way to an impulse, rushes back and kisses Marguerite yet once again ere taking his departure.

Faust on this occasion got to the other side of the stage all right, but trouble arose when he tried to get back. Marguerite sits in the window of her cottage, and Faust comes back and kisses her through the window. Faust measured the distance with a wabbling eye, but made a start when his cue was given. Then he seemed to lose control of himself. One-quarter way across he was trotting, one-half way the trot was a run, and the remainder of the way it had become a gallop.

Up to this point Miss Abbott stood her ground bravely, but that rapidly approaching figure awed her, and with a frightened scream she fled. Faust, poor Faust, charged on. He reached the place he had last seen Marguerite and essayed to clasp the atmosphere in outstretched arms. Then his impetus carried him through the window, and all that the astounded audience looked upon were his waving legs. Somebody pushed him back, and, absolutely undisturbed, he finished the opera, singing in an unusually superb manner. Not so with the unfortunate Marguerite, however, for from then on she was suffering from a case of "rattles," which in simple justice should have been the property of Faust.—New York Tribune.

PRETTY IRISH GIRLS.

Why the Lasses of the Emerald Isle Are Beautiful.

The Irish peasant girls have long been famous for their beautiful, clear skins and healthy complexions. They owe much of their loveliness to the moisture of the climate and the simplicity of their lives. Plain, wholesome fare and rainwater for the wash basin tell their own tale. No matter how homely are the features of the genuine peasant girl, her skin is almost invariably soft and firm, the arms nicely rounded, the eyes brilliant and expressive.

There are no eyes finer than those of the healthy daughter of Erin's isle. Soft and tender one moment, to flash with passion if aroused; dark blue, gray or brown, the Irish eye is peculiarly lovely and possesses a luster all its own. Long lashes shadow these bewitching orbs—lashes that curl upward to sweep the cheek when the face is betrayed into blushes.

So much time is spent out of doors that the feet, usually bare, become enlarged. The ankle, however, is usually well shaped and neat, the instep high and the skin of baby fineness. The Irish girl of humble station is proud of her shapely feet and believes that walking through the grass before sunrise in summer enhances their beauty, which, of course, it does.

No need to powder that fair skin—it owes its peachy bloom to health, happiness and the freedom of outdoor life; no need to resort to the rouge pot—the roses are there hard and fast, nature's own coloring. The hands may be rough by hard work, not diminutive, but shapely; the hair burnished and often luxuriant.—London Answers.

How to Lie When Sleeping.

The correct posture for sleep is to lie on the right side with the limbs stretched out to their full length and the arms either straight down by the body or in any comfortable position, provided they are not raised above the head. The mouth should be closed, and all the muscles of the body should be relaxed.

The lungs work with greater deliberation during the hours of sleep, and if the arms are raised above the head at this time and for any period the action of the heart drives the blood away from the arms and sends it to the head, frequently making one very restless when it does not prevent sleep entirely.—American Queen.

Having a Purpose In Life.

Ambition to achieve has saved many a man and woman from an early grave. From a health point of view a definite purpose in life, something which the mind is bent on accomplishing, is a factor which is too rarely considered. The will power which holds one to a set task oftentimes wards off physical weakness and weariness better than the drug or medicine which the physician prescribes. "I must accomplish this before I die," has been the expressed purpose of more than one of the world's great workers.—A. S. Atkinson in Woman's Home Companion.

The perfumers of Rome lived in a special quarter set apart for their use, and whole streets were filled with their shops, which were lounging places for wealthy young nobles.

Got More For the Money.

A gentleman living in a rural part of England sent his coachman to a neighboring village for 5 shillings' worth of penny stamps.

After a time John returned from his tramp of two miles.

His face wore a self satisfied look when he came into his employer's presence.

"Got the stamps, John?"

"Yes, sir," the man replied, handing over a batch of halfpenny stamps.

"I said penny stamps, John, and you have got halfpenny ones."

"Yes, sir," and the smile widened. "I asked for 5 shillings' worth of stamps, an the postmaster says, 'Halfpenny or penny?' 'Do you sell halfpenny stamps?' I asked. 'Yes,' said he. 'Well,' says I, 'if you can buy stamps for a halfpenny, what's the use of payin a penny?' An I bought the halfpenny stamps, sir."—London Telegraph.

None of His Business.

While waiting for the train the bride and bridegroom walked slowly up and down the platform.

"I don't know what this joking and guying may have been to you," he remarked, "but it's death to me. I never experienced such an ordeal."

"It's perfectly dreadful," she answered. "I shall be so glad when we get away from everybody we know."

"They're actually impertinent," he went on. "Why, the very natives"—

At this unpropitious moment the wheezy old station master walked up to them.

"Be you goin to take this train?" he asked.

"It's none of your business!" retorted the bridegroom indignantly as he guided the bride up the platform, where they condoled with each other over the impertinence of the natives.

Onward came the train, its vapor curling from afar. It was the last to their destination that day, an express. Nearer, nearer it came at full speed. Then in a moment it whizzed past and was gone.

"Why in thunder didn't that train stop?" yelled the bridegroom.

"Cos you sed 'twarn't none of my bizness. I has to signal if that train's to stop."

And as the old station master softly stroked his beard there was a wicked twinkle in his eye.—London Spare Moments.

What a Singer Must Know.

For a singer to succeed it is necessary that he should have more than a voice or be a vocalist. Wagner has set a higher standard, and to him we owe it. Not only the cultivation of the voice, but the higher education is necessary. The voice alone is not sufficient, even in the concert room. Singing has grown to be quite another art. The singer must be an impersonator.

I myself studied for five years at the university. But that, as a rule, holds one too long. But at least a good general knowledge of literature and of science is necessary.

The day is past when a fiacre driver, because he has a beautiful voice, is accepted as a singer; so also is the day when a concert in costume is regarded as an opera. The standard of impersonation has been immeasurably raised by Wagner. History, literature, knowledge of the plastic arts, are all necessary to the singer.

American women have, many of them, beautiful voices. Again, many of them go abroad to study. That is a mistake. It is at home that they should lay the foundation. Build by degrees. Do not aim to be a star, but a good artist. Study always, be content with small roles. The rest will come of itself.—Ernest Van Dyck in Saturday Evening Post.

Sold at Last.

A traveling man who is absent from the city about 60 days on each trip carried a pair of shoes to a German shoemaker to be half soled before leaving on a tour through the country towns. The shoemaker was accustomed to selling articles left with him for repairs if not called for in 30 days. The drummer stated to the shoemaker he would be absent from the city for at least 60 days and would not leave the shoes to be repaired unless he was assured that they would not be sold.

The traveler's trip was prolonged to 90 days. When he returned, he went immediately to the shoemaker for his shoes.

The shoemaker's inability to distinguish between have and half came near resulting in his receiving a thrashing.

"Have you sold my shoes?" asked the drummer.

"Ya, I haf soled them," replied the shoemaker.

"What in blazes did you do that for?" yelled the traveler.

"You told me for to do it."

And then the drummer engaged in a bit of shocking profanity and threatened to clean up the ranch.—Memphis Scimitar.

PINGREE IS WEAKER

Latest Bulletin Shows This to be His Condition

GOV. BLISS CABLES SYMPATHY

It Is Expected That the Pingrees Will Reach the Bedside of the Sick Man by Next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Detroit, June 18.—The following dispatches have been received here:

London, Eng., June 17, 7 p. m.—Ex-Gov. Pingree's condition is no more satisfactory than it has been for the past 24 hours.

H. S. Pingree, Jr., said this evening: "Father seems about the same, except that I think he is weaker even than yesterday."

Dr. Mills said to a representative of the Associated Press: "There is no material change in thepatient, except that the constant drain on his constitution is proving a most difficult problem for his physicians to combat."

London, Eng., June 18.—Ex-Gov. Pingree's physician left him at midnight last night. There is continued apprehension as to his condition. The strongest drugs have failed to check the dysentery, and the only hopeful symptom is that the patient is enabled freely to partake of nourishment.

When Frank C. Pingree yesterday forenoon showed Mrs. Hazen S. Pingree a copy of a cablegram from her son "Joe" reading: "Governor's condition unchanged; slightly weaker," she at once decided to start for London and the bedside of her sick husband.

"The information that the ex-governor was 'slightly weaker' was what caused Mrs. Pingree to positively announce her intention of making the ocean voyage, notwithstanding her own frail health," said Frank C. Pingree yesterday afternoon.

Accompanied by Mrs. Hazen S. Pingree and Miss Hazel Pingree, the ex-governor's only living daughter, Frank C. Pingree left for New York city on a Michigan Central train at 4:25 standard yesterday afternoon. They will sail tomorrow on the American line steamer St. Paul, for London, where the ex-governor lies dangerously ill at the Grand hotel fronting Trafalgar square.

Carl E. Schmidt, a close friend of the Pingrees, accompanied Mrs. Hazen S. Pingree to the train. Mrs. Frank C. Pingree, John B. Howarth, of the shoe manufacturing firm of Pingree & Smith, and Robert Oakman were also there to see the party off. Everybody expressed hope that the members of the party would find the ex-governor greatly improved and ready to start for Detroit upon their arrival in London.

It is expected that the Pingrees will reach London next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Eastern friends of the ex-governor have telegraphed Frank C. Pingree, offering services through English friends, and several telegrams of sympathy have been received by the family.

Before leaving Frank C. Pingree said he had much faith in his brother's strong constitution to carry him through, but he was not so hopeful as last week.

Gov. Bliss was in the city on business last evening. Before departing for Saginaw he sent a cablegram to ex-Gov. Pingree, which read:

"Lansing, Mich., June 17, 1901.
"Ex-Gov. Pingree, Grand Hotel, London, Eng.:
"The people of Michigan join me in expressing sympathy and best wishes for your immediate recovery.
"A. T. BLISS, Governor."

Otsego, Mich., June 18.—While working in his barn, Wm. J. Cushman fell down stairs, breaking his leg at the knee and injuring his shoulder. He will probably live.

Old Pioneer Dead.

Marine City, Mich., June 18.—John Dornoff, aged 67 years, a well-known pioneer resident of this city, is dead. He had filled many public offices with eminent satisfaction to his constituents and credit to himself.

Gash in the Shoulder Blade.

Flint, Mich., June 18.—Leroy Skal had some words with Hastings Johnson, and, it is alleged, stabbed him with a pocket knife. Johnson has a serious but not dangerous gash under the left shoulder blade.

Quick Relief for Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parsons, Kansas, writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar and it has never failed to give immediate relief." J. J. Orr.

The lack of energy you feel, the backache and a run down condition generally, all mean kidney disorder. Foley's Kidney Cure will restore your strength and vigor by making the kidneys well. Take no substitute. J. J. Orr.

LABOR BILL STOLEN.

Original Copy of "Employers' Liability Bill" Missing.

Denver, Col., June 18.—Conferences of labor leaders are being held in this city to investigate the reported theft from the official files of what is known as the "employers' liability bill," passed by the last legislature in the interest of the wage-earners.

"If it is true that the record of the passage of the employers' liability law has been stolen from the official journal of the senate and cannot be recovered the law is invalid." That is the statement made by Lieut.-Gov. Coates.

"If the bill has been stolen it has been done deliberately and with the sole intent of invalidating the law. When the bill was pending it was bitterly fought. Duplicate copies will do no good. The courts will accept only the original.

"This theft comes as a stunning blow to the working people of Colorado."

At a conference held in the offices of the state federation of labor, President Garman declared that if the bill is declared void by reason of the theft organized labor would expend hundreds of dollars in finding and convicting the guilty persons.

REMARKABLE CEREMONY.

German Veterans Dedicate Monuments to Austrians and French.

Berlin, June 18.—A remarkable ceremony occurred at Patchburg, Prussia, Sunday when the military attaches to the French and Austrian embassies in Berlin, together with 55 German veteran associations, jointly celebrated the dedication of two monuments, one erected by Austria in honor of those Austrians who fell in 1796 during the war with France, and the other to the French general, Marceau, who was mortally wounded on a reconnaissance at Altenkirchen in Rhenish Prussia, Sept. 20, 1796, and died three days after.

At the dedication of these monuments the bands played the Marseillaise and the Prussian hymn. A French attache proposed three cheers for Emperor William and an Austrian attache expressed his confidence in the durability of the dreibund.

The ceremony was witnessed by large numbers of German army and navy officers on the active list and high civil and military officials from a number of districts.

Fire Raging at Buffalo.

Buffalo, June 18.—A second alarm was sent in for a fire at the foot of Ferry street, on the Niagara river. The docks, landing and ticket office of the International Navigation company have been destroyed and the fire has spread to the Schoelkopf flour mill and elevator adjoining. The docks and elevator are on a narrow strip of land forming part of Squaw island. The fire has destroyed the bridge across the channel separating the island from the main land, making the situation a hard one for the firemen to contend with. The fire tug from the upper harbor is on the way down the canal. There are no other large buildings in the vicinity of the mill, but there is a wooden dock extending along the river front for about 1,000 feet.

With Intent to Deceive.

Kansas City, Kan., June 18.—The case of M. D. Beardon, newspaper solicitor and postmaster of Bonner Springs, Kansas, during the last administration of President Cleveland, charged with attempting to extort $1,000 from Frank Warner, a banker of that place, was called for trial here yesterday. The prosecution rests on an anonymous letter which Warner received through the mail Feb. 25, in which the writer threatened to blow up Warner's house with dynamite unless he placed $1,000 in gold at a point on the outskirts of Bonner Springs. A bag containing slugs was deposited by the banker as directed. It was taken by Beardon and he was arrested.

To Dump the Outfit.

Honolulu, via San Francisco, June 18.—The senate committee in the legislature returned a report recommending the entire abolition of the national guard. The report suggested that the military paraphernelia be put aboard a scow, towed out to sea and dumped overboard.

NOT FOR STUDENTS

They Will Not Take the Places of Striking Machinists

THE NOTICES PULLED DOWN

Appeals From the Labor Leaders to the University Authorities Seems to Have Had the Effect of Keeping Them Away.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 18.—There has been a sudden change regarding engineering students taking the places of striking machinists since the appeal from the labor leaders to the university authorities was received.

There is no doubt but that several undergraduate students intended to go into the works in Detroit and Chicago, but now this is denied and it is thought that somebody has been called off.

The university, it is alleged, has no desire to make enemies of the labor unions, and now it is announced at the university that only one student intended to take a striker's place.

The letters from the Olds company of Detroit and the Chicago Navigation company have been mysteriously pulled down from the bulletin board in the mechanical laboratory.

Detroit, June 18.—No students from Ann Arbor appeared at the Olds Motor works this morning, prepared to take the place of the striking machinists; but 15 union men were put to work by the Crescent Manufacturing company on the new terms.

Chicago, June 18.—Settlements with striking machinists were effected yesterday at five plants of local manufacturers, making a total of over 70 Chicago plants in which the strikers have won the fight inaugurated through the general strike of three weeks ago. Under the terms of settlement the strikers returned to work this morning at all five shops, having been granted the nine-hour work day without a cut in the rate of wages paid per day under the 10-hour system. Firms that settled have membership in the Chicago Machinery Manufacturers' association, two being also represented in the National Metal Trades' association, the organization of employers in the foundry trades. Out of the original 2,300 men involved in the local machinists' strike only 1,600 are now out of work.

BIG LUMBER FIRE.

Fifteen Million Feet Destroyed on Georgian Bay.

Toronto, June 18.—Word was received last night that fire has destroyed all the lumber in the yard of the Ontario Lumber company at French river, on Georgian bay, amounting to 15,000,000 feet and valued at over $200,000. The fire started from an unknown cause on top of a pile of timber, and, fanned by a high wind, swept across the whole yard, consuming every board.

Two schooners were lying at the dock, and though tugs immediately pulled them out into the lake the tugs were scorched, so quick did the fire spread. A boarding house and three dwellings were burned, destroying nearly all the belongings of the occupants, who barely escaped with their lives. By the use of hose from the tugs the mill and the rest of the village were saved. The mills have again started cutting timber and work will be resumed.

Not Caught Yet.

Shreveport, La., June 18.—Prince Edwards, the murderer of John G. Foster, is still at large. The posses have not abandoned their efforts to locate him and the search in northeast Texas is still in progress, but there does not seem to be any hope of immediate results. The rumor that the negro was captured between Jonesville and Scottsville is an error, as well as the statement circulated that Edwards was caught at Monroe. No further attempt has been made to lynch the negroes at Benton.

Tale of Shipwreck.

St. Johns, N. F., June 18.—Another fishing schooner named The Lady Clare has been lost by being crushed in the ice in the strait of Belle Isle. The 47 persons on board were rescued. Two other fishing vessels have reached St. Anthony. Their crews were in a destitute condition, having lost everything they possessed. The British flagship Charybdis arrived last night.

Americans Right in It.

London, June 18.—The American trap shooters accomplished a further success yesterday when Crosby won a £100 cup, while the other American shooters carried off sweepstakes also aggregating £100.

"You look thoughtful tonight, Smith," remarked Brown as he stretched himself on two chairs.

IN DARKEST AFRICA.

Remarkable Discoveries by Sir Harry Hamilton Johnston.

London, June 18.—Sir Harry Hamilton Johnston, special commissioner for the Uganda protectorate, has returned to London after an absence of two years. He brings stories of Uganda rivaling Henry H. Stanley's description of "Darkest Africa." Sir Harry relates that the country surrounding Moanteigon is totally depopulated as a result of intertribal wars, and is consequently marvelously stocked with big game that are as tame as English park deer. Zebras and antelopes can be approached to within ten yards and there is no sport in killing them. Elephants and rhinoceros are also abundant and, according to Sir Harry, lions in Uganda are too busy eating hartebeeste to notice a passing caravan.

The prehistoric giraffe has been discovered in this country by the commissioner, who proposes to maintain the region referred to as a military park. He photographed a race of apemen in the Congo forest differing entirely from Stanley's pigmies and secured phonograph records of their language and music. Sir Harry says that 12 varieties of rubber trees are found in this country in exhaustible supply.

THE MAD MULLAH

Gave the British Expedition a Pretty Stiff Fight.

London, June 18.—A dispatch to the foreign office from consul general of Semaliland says that the Mad Mullah expedition had heavy fighting May 28.

The flying column of mounted infantry, under Capt. Merewether, struck the Mullah's supply camp during a night march and captured 5,000 head of cattle, killed one important chief and captured another; covered 100 miles, fought a sharp action and returned to its base all in 24 hours.

The main force of the British under Col. Swayne departed for Eldab June 2, leaving Macneill with 300 men to guard Zariba. Swayne's column advanced against the Mullah's base. In the meantime the Mullah, with 3,000 followers, attacked Zariba three times. He was finally driven off by Capt. Macneill with a loss of 500 men. The British in Zariba had ten men killed and nine wounded. The Mullah is now cut off from his base and a decisive action is imminent.

The Battle of Bunker Hill.

Buffalo, June 18.—The anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill was fittingly observed at the Pan-American exposition yesterday. New England's beautiful building, erected by joint appropriation of the New England states and shared in common by them, was dedicated. The structure is of colonial style, built of red brick effect with tall white columns and massive facade.

After Several Attempts.

Chicago, June 18.—James Shepardson, editor of a weekly society paper, committed suicide at his home in this city by shooting. His mind had been impaired by brain fever and he had made several attempts to take his life. Saturday while walking with friends he attempted to drown himself in Lake Michigan, but was rescued.

GRUMPY WILHELM

Don't Like Von Buelow's Eulogy of Bismarck

IT WAS AN ELOQUENT ORATION

German Papers Eulogize Von Buelow for His Frank and Honorable Speech on the Life of His Predecessor.

Berlin, June 18.—The German papers are filled with accounts and comment upon the unveiling of the Bismarck memorial which occurred Sunday. Generally speaking, the liberal press heartily praises Count von Buelow's speech, while the conservative newspapers, with few exceptions, make no reference to the matter. Eugene Richter, radical leader of the reichstag, says that von Buelow deserves praise for his speech on the occasion of the unveiling of the statue because he did not join the court view concerning Bismarck and did not call him "grandpa's servant" and the tool of the workmen. It is said that the emperor is displeased at von Buelow's frank and manly manner in characterizing Bismarck. It is also said that the displeasure of Emperor William is also shown by the fact that Sunday he conferred no orders or decorations, not even upon members of the monument committee, which has labored years without recompense to effect the construction of the memorial. It is further believed that the emperor does not approve of the statue from an artistic standpoint, and in this view he is joined by the press and public generally. The Kleines Journal calls the symbolical figures around the pedestal a menageries, and the Kreuz Zeitung calls attention to the absence of the entire centrist division of the reichstag at the unveiling.

The Vossische Zeitung says that Buelow's speech is an honor to the German nation as well as to the bundesrath, Count von Buelow himself, and Bismarck, and shows the present chancellor's complete appreciation of the first chancellor.

The Tageblatt says that von Buelow's address is worthy of the never-to-be-forgotten man who called it forth, worthy of the people, as whose representative the present chancellor spoke, and that the free and courageous speech honors the man who made it.

Two Fatal Fires.

Baltimore, June 18.—Henry L. Lineweaver, aged 72, was suffocated to death while attempting to escape from a burning building at 739 W. Mulberry street, and Robert Birchett, another old man, lies in the hospital so badly burned that his death is momentarily expected. The fire was caused by the explosion of gasoline which an occupant of the first floor of the house was pouring from one receptacle into another.

A cat knocked a lighted lamp from a bureau in the second story of a double-wooden house near the Baltimore & Ohio railway station at St. Denis, Md., and a four-year-old child, Herman Kierchner, who was asleep in one of the rooms, was burned to death.

Interlake Yachting Association.

Toledo, O., June 18.—The Interlake Yachting association has arranged to hold its annual regatta at Put-in Bay July 15, 16, 17 and 18. Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo and Sandusky boats will participate. The first race of the series in the regatta will be sailed on Tuesday, July 16, over a triangular course off Gibraltar island. On Wednesday, the 16th, the free for all contest for the Victory cup is scheduled. Thursday will be occupied with a squadron sail to Wherle's club house on Middle Bass island, where a chowder dinner is to be served. Friday, the 19th, will witness a race over a windward and leeward course for the various classes.

Prisoner's Claims Seem True.

London, June 18.—Chas. Lillywhite, who claims to be a naturalized American and who says he had been in the United States since 1885, but who was arrested in New Zealand in November last and brought to this country charged with being Arthur Blatch, who is accused of murder, robbery and arson, committed at Colchester, Essex, England, in 1893, had his first hearing yesterday in Camera, to the disgust of a number of curious people who crowded into the court room. The discovery of relatives the prisoner claims to have in Leeds presages a breakdown of the government case.

Honors to a Frenchman.

Washington, June 18.—Ambassador Cambon of France has gone to Chicago, where he will receive the degree of LL. D. from the University of Chicago. The honor is the more notable as it has been conferred by this university only on President McKinley. This is the second American university to give this high degree to the French ambassador, Harvard having bestowed the doctorate upon him two years ago. The ambassador will deliver an address at Chicago on the influence of the university on the development of national character.

Won't Lay Down Their Arms.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 18.—Advices received here from Columbia say the rebels refuse to lay down their arms owing to the ill treatment of political prisoners by government officers. Prominent prisoners were paraded through the principal towns. As a warning to liberal sympathizers and in view of the recrudescence of rebel activity in the interior the Columbian government has purchased the steamer Darien to be used as a gunboat.

BOTH TURNED UP.

McGarry and Taylor Arraigned and Give Bail.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 18.—Thomas F. McGarry and Millionaire H. A. Taylor, indicted by the grand jury for alleged bribery and conspiracy, did not wait for the officers to go after them. They arrived here yesterday and went to the superior court to accept the service of warrant.

They refused to recognize the regularity of the proceedings and a plea of not guilty was entered for them. Henry Spring, Wm. S. Gunn, W. A. Gunn and P. J. Klingman signed the $5,000 bail bond for Taylor, and William Alden Smith and Chas. W. Watkins became surety for McGarry. Spring, who signed Taylor's bond, is foreman of the grand jury and is said to be one of the three who voted against the indictments. McGarry has been his attorney for a long time and it was at McGarry's request that Spring signed the bond.

BODY OF AN UNKNOWN

Woman Found Floating in the River Near Wyandotte.

Detroit, Mich., June 18.—The body of an unknown woman was found floating off Grassy Isle, and is now at Thon Bros.' undertaking establishment in Wyandotte, awaiting identification. The remains, which are badly decomposed, are those of a woman presumably 24 or 25 years of age. The deceased wore a blue and white striped shirt waist that looks to be new, a black silk skirt, a purple underskirt, as well as a white and gray checked underskirt. The stockings are black to a certain point, and although discolored, look as if they were white and red striped at the top.

Justice Perry of Ecorse, who will hold an inquest, found two cards in the dead woman's pockets. One bore the name of Emma S. Scheeler, and the other a card advertising the furnished rooms establishment of Bertha Unterborn at 294 Antoine street. A pocketbook containing 12 cents and a ticket to Bois Blanc island were also found.

The woman was about five feet six inches in hight, and would weigh 130 pounds. Her hair was black and on one foot there was a slipper.

A BIG COMBINE.

Box Factories and Lumber Firms of Saginaw Valley.

Saginaw, Mich., June 18.—Four of the largest planing mills, box factories and lumber manufacturers of the Saginaw river valley are to form a combine, capitalized at $1,000,000 and known as Mershon, Schuette, Parker & Co.

The firm entering the combine are: W. B. Mershon & Co., Schuette & Co. and A. L. Sastman & Co. of Saginaw, and the Eddy Sheldon Co. of Bay City. Competition is the reason assigned for the proposed combination, which will include lumber yards handling 110,000,000 feet of lumber yearly, a dozen planing mills and three box and sash factories. The new company will begin operations July 1.

Burned to Death.

Ovid, Mich., June 18.—Mrs. Ruth Neal, who for some time has lived alone in the south part of this village, was burned to death at her home. Fire started from some unknown cause. It is thought the woman was suffocated before the fire reached her, as she was not very badly disfigured. The body was found lying on the floor near the stove, in which it is said she constantly kept a fire. Mrs. Neal leaves a sister and one brother.

Lightning Did It.

Allegan, Mich., June 18.—During the severe electric storm Sunday night, lightning killed two horses and injured another in the barn of Robert Mabbs, four miles north of Allegan. The barn did not burn. In Trowbridge township Walter Holland's barn and contents, including two horses and 100 bushels of corn burned. A house and barn near Huggins' bridge in this township also burned.

Died from Blood Poisoning.

Centerville, Mich., June 18.—William Steninger, aged [illegible]0, died of tetanus, caused by puncturing the ball of his foot with a shingle nail on June 6. He continued his labor for seven hours and then, after the wound began to pain him, he went to A. F. Kingsley for medical treatment. Although the wound was probed several times nothing could be gotten therefrom and blood poisoning soon developed.

Pulled Their Legs.

Pontiac, Mich., June 18.—The home of Frank Miller of Lawrence street was burglarized at an early hour Sunday morning and nearly $20 in money was secured. Miller keeps a boarding house and the money was taken from the trousers pockets of the boarders. The theft was not discovered until late Sunday, when it was reported to the police.

Laid on the Table.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 18.—In the council meeting last night Alderman Renihan offered a resolution requesting City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury to resign in view of his indictment. The resolution was put without discussion and was laid on the table by a vote of 12 to 11. Alderman Shinkman (dem.) voted for the resolution and Alderman Ghyssels and Mol (rep.) voted to table.

The Good Effects of Apple Eating.

The apple is such common fruit that few are familiar with its remarkable efficacious properties. Everybody ought to know that the very best thing they can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. The apple is an excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than any other vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. That is not all. The apple agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach, helps the kidney secretions and is one of the best preventives known of diseases of the throat.—Journal of Agriculture.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

For a moment there was silence. The soldier still remained respectfully at attention, standing close to the door. The surgeon had spoken impressively, earnestly, significantly, and Hunter could not but notice it, could not but realize that behind it there was some urgent meaning or reason, yet he persisted.

"I hope the colonel will pardon me," he said. "I will not refer to the furlough again until I can explain more fully, which will be possible after I have talked with Captain Ray, but, as to returning to the troop, I beg that I may not be detained here through—another morning."

The surgeon was seated in a wicker bottom office chair, which he twisted round, and so squarely faced his visitor, looking keenly yet not unkindly into the pale, handsome face. It was a moment before he spoke.

"I thought you greatly appreciated those morning readings," said he at last. "I'm sure the young lady has done very much to make hospital life bearable."

It was Hunter's turn to color, but before he could speak he had to spring aside. Into the outer hall came banging a burly form enwrapped in cavalry circular. "Where's Dr. Connell?" brusquely demanded a loud, unmodulated voice. Then, slap bang, with all his characteristic impetuosity, Mainwaring burst into the room.

Direct as ever, never noting or caring who was present, he went straight to the point. "Hello, doc!" said he, loud, gruff, yet hearty. "Just the man I'm looking for. Say, Truscott tells me I hurt your feelings this morning, and I've come to 'pologize. I didn't mean a d——d thing. It's all right. If you want to be called colonel, why, colonel it shall be. I'll issue orders calling the attention of the whole command to it, if you like."

And then for the first time he became aware of the tall soldier, now trying to slip quietly behind him so as to leave the room. Mainwaring whirled on him in a trice. "Hello, you're up again, are you? Well, this man's able to answer for himself now, I see, doc—er—colonel?"

But the post surgeon had risen from his chair and held up a hand appealingly.

"He is still a patient under my charge, sir, and is not restored to health or duty as yet. I protest"—

"Oh, you needn't protest. I'm done for the present. I'm giving way to everybody this evening, all on your account." Here the surgeon signaled significantly to the soldier, and, silently, wonderingly, Hunter withdrew. "'Tisn't only Truscott. My wife's jumped on me with both feet; says I've insulted you—done nothing but make enemies ever since I came into the —th. Why, I've been catching it right and left, doc—colonel; haven't had a moment's peace. What d'you think that dash dashed long legged lath of a man Blake says to me not an hour ago, begad? I asked him if he thought you had any right to feel offended, and he said if you didn't it was only because everybody agreed that no notice was to be taken of anything I ever said. I never know whether he's in earnest or joking. If I thought he meant what he said, by God, he'd be in arrest this minute."

Again the post surgeon held up a warning hand. "Pray do not speak quite so loud, Mainwaring," said he. "Some of my patients are trying to sleep. I beg you will think no more of this morning's incident. What you have said is more than sufficient. I am possibly hypersensitive."

And then it was the doctor's turn to be abruptly silenced. For a second time the outer door was hurriedly opened, silvery voices and soft laughter were heard in the corridor, and then, marshaled by Blake, there at the entrance stood Mrs. Mainwaring, and behind her, silent and a trifle pale and anxious looking, Kate Leroy.

"I knew he'd be coming right over here," laughed Mrs. Mainwaring. "But really, Colonel Connell, my husband is even more impetuous in rushing to make amends than he is in treading on people's tender spots. No, don't go wandering off to the wards, Kate," she cried, for Miss Leroy looked anxiously up the corridor and showed a tendency to follow her eyes. "Come now, major, if you have finished what you were saying to the colonel, we want you to come home. Indeed," she persisted, as she saw how angrily his eyes were regarding Blake, "you've got to come and make your peace with us now, for you were simply unbearable all through dinner, and we had to ask Captain Blake to escort us in search of you." Then, as Mainwaring still held back as though striving to speak, she seized his arm. "Come. Indeed," lowering her voice, "I must speak with you before you go any further in that case." And then did Connell feel sure she spoke of Hunter.

An instant later he was surer still, for in came an attendant, alarm on his face.

"Did the post surgeon give Hunter permission to leave hospital? He's picked up his coat and gone, sir."

Outside the moon was shining brightly on the glistening snow. Objects were plainly visible over 100 yards away. Mainwaring sprang to the door with excitement in his eyes and flew to the porch, the others following in every stage of astonishment. Outside the gate, as luck would have it, was marching a relief of the guard, the men swinging rapidly by in their heavy winter dress, the carbine butts grasped in their fur gloved hands, the gleaming barrels tossed over the shoulder. Over toward the trader's store a tall, slender form in soldier's overcoat was rapidly striding. Mainwaring's voice rang out with the force and volume of a trombone. "Halt your relief, corporal! Catch that man over yonder, quick, and bring him here!"

"Oh," almost whimpered Mrs. Mainwaring, "do hear Captain Blake first!"

Astonished, the corporal obeyed. "Relief, halt!" he ordered. "Come with me, two of you." Then away he rushed. "Halt! Halt, you!" was the next shout, and all in a moment they had overhauled the offending soldier. There was brief parley, and then back they came, the unresisting prisoner between the two members of the guard.

"Oh," almost whimpered Mrs. Mainwaring, "do hear Captain Blake first! He's sure there's some mistake"— Then broke off short with exclamation of amaze. From the lips of Kate Leroy, too, there burst a stifled cry, for there, before them, his clear cut, refined face perfectly outlined in the brilliant moonlight—there, clad in the rough garb of a private soldier, stood the courteous, helpful, distinguished looking stranger of the night of the collision.

Mainwaring must have had a love for the dramatic.

"Corporal Rice," said he deliberately, "take Trooper Hunter to the guardhouse and confine him by my order on the charge of conniving at the robbery and destruction of the magazine."

CHAPTER XIII.

In the 48 hours that followed the arrest and incarceration of Trooper Hunter one excitement chased another with such rapidity that it was hard to keep track of them, and Mainwaring, with almost a sigh of relief, welcomed the premature return of old Standard, to whom somebody (believed to be Ray) had given the tip by telegraph that the sooner he got back the better.

"Take this infernal regiment and see what you can do with it," said Mainwaring despairingly. "I thought I knew something about soldiering, but there's too d——d much individuality in the —th for me."

And, besides Trooper Hunter's incarceration on the charge of aiding and abetting in the robbery and destruction of the magazine, the senior major had the following matters now to tackle: Captain Blake, in arrest for using insubordinate language to the commanding officer ("Said that compared with my mental condition the magazine wasn't a circumstance in the way of a wreck, begad," explained Mainwaring to his senior, who strove to keep a straight face, but couldn't); Mrs. Merriweather, disappeared since the night of Hunter's transfer from hospital to guardhouse; Sergeant Merriweather, transferred from guardhouse to hospital with a bullet through one lung and a knife wound in the other; Corporal Croxford and Trooper Elzey, deserted—two hitherto shining lights of the garrison and admirers of Mrs. Merriweather ("Could Mrs. Merriweather have gone with either of them?" asked some one of the ladies, "Or with both?" asked certain brutes among the officers)—and, finally, Lieutenant Brady, back from a bacchanalian bout with his kindred spirit Rawson, and now laid by the heels in quarters with an Irish orderly in attendance, for doctors would have nothing to do with him.

The way Stannard sailed in was characteristic. Brady had not been drunk on duty. He had taken advantage of the absence of Atherton and Stannard to relax the reins of his self control, but had only got a good start when he sought and received a seven days' leave from Major Mainwaring, which enabled him to meet Rawson at Pawnee. This was about ten days after the explosion. He was to have staid his week away, but in two days suddenly reappeared in Butte, full of whisky and information. Mainwaring, who knew him but slightly, received a dispatch saying that he had news of a most important character resulting from discoveries he had made at Pawnee and urging the commanding officer to meet him at the railway station on his arrival, which Mainwaring did, and then the very next night ordered Hunter's arrest.

"I always said that when Brady drank he could be depended upon to make an ass of himself," said Blake, "and this proves it." But what Brady's revelations might have been Mainwaring refused to disclose. It was enough, he said, to hang Hunter high as the hayman, and the hay contractor, in Mainwaring's opinion, was the double dashedest scoundrel that ever lived. This statement so rejoiced Blake's heart that he repeated it broadcast and was in the merriest of moods until he heard that Mainwaring had forbidden Captain Ray's having an interview with his imprisoned recruit. Then Blake boiled over and made the odious comparison between Mainwaring's brain and the blown up building which resulted in his own summary confinement to quarters. Brady's leave had still two days to run when Stannard got back, but Stannard had heard enough of his doings in Butte to warrant the immediate action taken. An officer was sent with the post ambulance and orders to fetch him forthwith. Then and there Dana waited on him with the major's message to the effect that he would give him 24 hours in which to sober up and face the music, and Brady had sense enough to know he had no time to lose.

Then another snarl had to be disentangled in which Stannard could not help, since it was purely domestic. The veteran post surgeon had had a flare up with Mainwaring, all on account of Trooper Hunter. The doctor protested against his patient's being put in the guardhouse, declaring that no matter what the charges were he was entitled to humane as well as medical treatment. Mainwaring said the man of his own volition had removed himself from hospital and therefore deserved no consideration. The doctor said if Hunter were kept in the prison room with the garrison malefactors overnight he would hold Mainwaring responsible for ill results that were certain to occur, which staggered Mainwaring for a minute. He finally compromised, ordered Hunter sent back to hospital, but put in a room by himself with a sentry at the door and another at the window, and orders prohibiting his being seen or spoken to by anybody except the doctors and the steward, unless it were himself or on his own written order.

Then Mainwaring had to go home and face the women folk, and there for the first time (Miss Leroy, shocked and stunned, having gone to her room) did Mrs. Mainwaring have him to herself and tell him of the identification of Hunter as the polite and helpful stranger of the night on the train. Then, furthermore, did she add her plea to the doctor's and finally admit that, much to her own distress and consternation, she feared Pet was actually deeply if not indeed very painfully interested in this mysterious trooper. In justice to Pet, she must say that that young lady was probably unaware of the feeling that had been growing upon her until the denouement of that evening. She (Mrs. Mainwaring) had striven to wean her from the morning services, but without success, and now she knew not what had happened, for Pet had shut herself in her room and begged to be left undisturbed.

Which was more than Pet would permit the major to be next day, however, for she was up and on the lookout for him on his return from stables. He marveled and was shocked at the pallor of her face, the trouble in her eyes. Without preliminary remark, she went straight to her subject.

"Major Mainwaring, at what time and where may I see Trooper Hunter, as you call him, today?"

"Well—I, I'm sure I don't know, Kate," for the major, like many a lion among men, was a lamb among women. "I—don't think you—ought to wish to see him."

"But I do wish it, major. Moreover, I should be ashamed of myself if I did not." And the reply conveyed all the more weight because of the calm decision of her manner.

And so the first written order Mainwaring signed was one to permit the bearer to visit the prisoner Hunter, and at 10 o'clock that morning, when, pale, calm, but resolute as ever and smiling still despite her sleepless night, Miss Leroy entered the hospital for the customary reading, she sent the steward to tell Mr. Hunter that she hoped he would be able to see her soon after 11 and then indomitably went on with her self appointed task.

At 11:15 the post surgeon came, silently gave her his arm as they left the big sunshiny ward and led her to a doorway up the corridor in front of which a sentry was pacing—a sentry who halted and presented arms as the doctor opened the door and ushered her in.

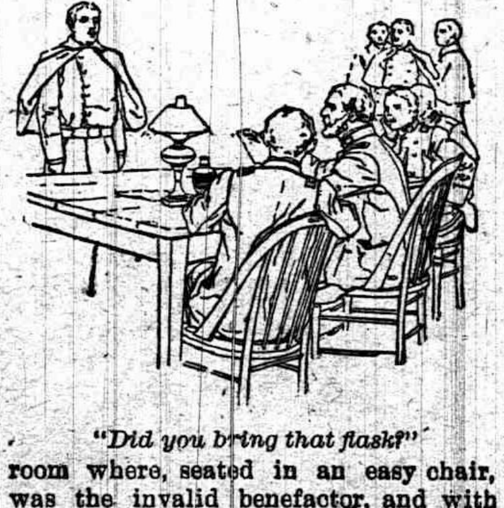
It was that night that Merriweather was brought back from town to the guardhouse, shot and stabbed, as has been said. Mrs. Merriweather had fled during the previous night, and the sergeant had been missing since reveille. It was the next night that Stannard returned and had Brady hunted up. Then came new labors and honors for Sheriff Conway, and this time there were no troops to divide the honors of the capture with him, for his prisoners were deserters all—one from an overindulgent husband, the others from a not too indulgent Uncle Sam. Pawnee was the Mecca of the fugitives. Thither had Mrs. Merriweather fled to a married sister. Thither had Croxford and Elzey followed, after having remained to cover her retreat and settle matters with the sergeant, which they had done only too effectually, for Merriweather's days were numbered.

Two days later Stannard had straightened out affairs at the post in marvelous fashion (all save matters domestic—wherein, said he, no wise man meddled), and the man to start him on the right scent was that scapegrace, the Kid, whom he had disciplined time and again in Arizona days and appreciated at his true value. The Kid's derisive and explosive laughter when told that Major Mainwaring had ordered Trooper Hunter confined as accessory to the magazine robbery, etc., had been promptly reported to Stannard on his return, and that versatile young reprobate was sent for, marched to the adjutant's office and collared by his old time troop commander, for one of his several enlistments the Kid had spent with Stannard, and knew him well.

And this was what the Kid divulged. Every one knew he could use a lasso like a cowboy, and Croxford had asked him, just for deviltry, to join him and "some other fellers" in roping the swell, Hunter, on the midnight relief, and he was going to, but happened to hear that Merriweather was in it, and that set him to thinking. He'd heard the women talking about Mrs. Merriweather's boasting that she had made a conquest of the swell recruit, and he remembered Merriweather's black eye and the rumor that it was Hunter "laid him out," and the Kid scented mischief and backed out. Then Croxford came and told him it would be best for him to keep his promise, as he might get the credit of it anyhow, which prompted the Kid to tell them all to go to Ballyhack. But when Elzey and Hughes later came and "stumped him" to join them in a spree to town that night and displayed their money he forgot Croxford's threat in the prospect of whisky and, anything for a frolic, started with them, only to run foul of the patrol just across the creek.

But the moment he heard of Hunter's being hauled out of the stream after the explosion the whole plot dawned on him, and something more, for he remembered the stories of forage and cartridges being sold in town and saw that it was planned to fix the guilt on Hunter, and, if not, to fix the crime of the assault on the sacred person of a sentry upon himself, the innocent Kid. Then Stannard would have cross questioned the two deserters, for such they were, despite stalwart protestations that they were only out for 24 hours' fun, but detectives, ferreting their movements, warned him to make no attempt. Merriweather might make an antemortem statement, but not these men. Neither would Mrs. Merriweather "peach." She was in the county jail begging piteously to be taken to her Danny and declaring he and she were only going to Pawnee to see her sister for a day, and he must have been waylaid in town.

But while Stannard was waiting for Merriweather to regain consciousness and Brady to become once more a responsible being there came still another witness, an old carpenter and new citizen of Butte, who appeared at Ransom, solely troubled on account of a friend there enlisted whom he hadn't seen for many a day—not, in fact, since the morning of the train robbery—and had just heard of him as having been arrested for complicity in the robbery of the magazine. Stannard heard his story, which was that the accused was a man of means, a charitable, kind gentleman, who just for a whim had come out to enlist for awhile in the cavalry; that he had helped him, the carpenter, to a home and work and his wife to health, and his clothes and things were all at his, the ex-tramp carpenter's, house, and couldn't he see Mr. Hunter? Whereupon Stannard said, "Come on," took him to the hospital and marched into the room where, seated in an easy chair, was the invalid benefactor, and with him the old surgeon and the young lady. Dr. Jayne, it seems, had suddenly discontinued his attentions to both the patient and the nurse.



"Did you bring that flask?"

It struck Stannard unpleasantly at the time that no one of them looked pleased at his coming, but men are obtuse. A woman would have appreciated the impropriety of interruption at a glance.

And even while they stood there, hesitant, at the door the steward came hurriedly to say that Merriweather was conscious and had asked for his wife and a priest. The two veteran majors, trooper and doctor, hastened at once to the greater ward, and Hunter, smiling, held forth a long, thin, white hand.

"The ring I left with you would slide off the biggest of these fingers now, wouldn't it?" he asked. "Miss Leroy, this is Mr. Murray, now a resident of Butte, but a fellow passenger with us on the night of the collision."

Before the sounding of the retreat that night and the boom of the sunset gun Sergeant Merriweather's soul had drifted away over the dreary waste of snow clad slopes and leaves of prairie, but not before he had made clean breast of all his trials, temptations and downfall. His vain, empty headed, frivolous wife was brought out from Butte, but proved scant comfort to his dying hours. To Father Keefe and Stannard, Blake and Ray, he told his piteous tale, Kittie sniffling, sobbing, wailing at intervals, but ever intently listening. One extravagance after another had swamped him. He used the money of the men's Athletic and Dramatic association, of which he was treasurer. He stole forage from the stables and sold it to a dealer in Butte to cover his shortage; but, that not yielding enough, planned the robbery of the magazine, which took place, Croxford and Elzey assisting, one furiously stormy night. They worked the old ordnance sergeant with liquor and got his keys, took out the boxes of cartridges, revolvers, etc., and, lo, the wagon of their confederates in Butte failed to come. It was beaten back by the storm. They then ran everything to the stack nearest Merriweather's stable and cottage and hid the plunder underneath. Dawn almost surprised them at the task. Luckily the old sergeant was made too sick to go to his magazine for two days. They had arranged for the wagon to come out the next night and then to blow up the magazine and so destroy evidence of their guilt, but again there was failure, and Merriweather was at his wits' end when he heard the colonel say that stack must be moved on the morrow. Then, rain or shine, snow or sleet, the wagon had to come, and then it was found, too late to change the hour, that the swell recruit, Hunter, was on the very post that guarded the stacks and stables and would be there at the very time they needed to act. So to robbery they were compelled to add assault.

The plunder was safely run off to Butte and paid for at about one-fifth its cost and one-tenth its value in a frontier city. They got their money and felt measurably safe so long as Hunter remained in hospital, used up as a result of the fearful contusions he had received. But his wife had told them of her encounter with and revelations to Hunter, and their fears of discovery were such that Croxford and Elzey determined to desert. The news that Hunter was arrested as having guilty knowledge of the whole affair was a thunderbolt. Now in self defense he would have to produce even a woman as witness and that woman Merriweather's wife. 'Twas Merriweather who bade her go at once to Pawnee, whither Croxford and Elzey followed. The three men were to meet and divide their spoils in a certain saloon in town. The first two demanded more than their share. There was a quarrel, then a murderous battle. They took all he had and fled, but, with fatuous blundering, had gone to Pawnee to buy her silence, and there all three were jailed. Hunter was an innocent man.

And when this was told to Mainwaring he bellowed, "Then what in dash dashnation did Brady mean by his story?" For Brady's story was practically this:

That he and Rawson occupied a room together over the one fine restaurant in Pawnee, and one night they were having supper in one box when a party of four railway hands came into that adjoining, talking loudly about the engineer of 783, old Jim Long, and the swell that engineered the hold up—how he had pretended to be out there to enlist in the cavalry, how he had tried to ride with and get points from Long and had two or three of his gang on that very train all ready for business, but was scared off by the fact that there was a carload of soldiers. Then when the train robbery did take place they nabbed seven of the followers after a long chase, but never got the leaders at all. Why, one of them was right there at the fort this very day, enlisted so as to divert suspicion, and he was keeping his hand in by engineering other robberies. That magazine explosion they had read about was all his doing.

If Brady had not been addled, he could have remembered that Hunter had enlisted before the train robbery took place. But he posted back to Butte, gave Mainwaring a wildly exaggerated account of what he had heard, vowed he could bring the men with him next trip, and Mainwaring, already suspicious, had ordered Hunter's arrest accordingly.

The fact that Hunter could not have been connected with the robbery was pointed out to Mainwaring as they sat in consultation, Stannard, Mainwaring, Truscott and Dana, in the adjutant's office that night, Blake being still in limbo, and Ray being excluded because he had resented Mainwaring's refusal to allow him an interview with his imprisoned trooper. It was pointed out that Hunter's enlistment occurred some time previous to the train robbery, and none present happened to think of the fact that he had asked for and obtained a pass the very night before it happened. Then Brady was sent for, and with him came his comrade, still on leave from Winthrop, Mr. Rawson.

"You hear how completely Sergeant Merriweather's antemortem statement has cleared Hunter, gentlemen," said Stannard. "Now, I suppose, you are satisfied."

"As to that point, major, yes," said Mr. Rawson, with preternatural sang froid. "But I understand you have ordered his release, and he is to come here presently for his exoneration. Is that so?"

"Certainly," growled Stannard. "What of it?"

"Well, first I would ask the trooper when he comes to say where he was at the time of the robbery of the train." And Rawson's face beamed with the consciousness of calm conviction of an erring brother's guilt.

Stannard nodded brusquely. "Entirely unnecessary, Mr. Rawson," said he. "That has already been settled. He has witnesses in plenty—three, at least, here at the post or in town—to establish where he was at that very time. He spent that night and the morning following at the house of one Murray, a carpenter in Butte."

Brady and Rawson exchanged glances indicative of incredulity, but Rawson then went on.

Four Bears at a Shot.

A number of years ago Mr. Withee was presented with two fine hounds, and, wishing to try their training and their grit, he took them out to do a little bear hunting.

The first morning Withee let the dogs out for a run while he was getting the breakfast, expecting them to be back in a short time. When breakfast was over, the dogs had not returned, so, taking his gun, Mr. Withee started out in the direction they had taken. After traveling about a mile the faint barking of dogs could be heard, and it was then plain why the dogs had not returned. They had scented game and were in pursuit. The sound of the barking led him far up the side of a mountain, and soon he came in sight of the dogs standing around the upturned roots of a tree.

Mr. Withee crept up cautiously until within about 15 feet of a cave that was near by, and then a black, shaggy head could be seen just above the roots. Taking good aim, he fired his .44 caliber and awaited results. After several minutes he went up to the cave, and what he saw there gave him a shock from which he has never recovered. Two bears lay dead, and two more were so stunned that a few quick passes with a knife settled them.

For the four bears Mr. Withee received $20 bounty, $27.50 for their hides and $42 for the bear oil, making $89.50 for one day's hunt.—Maine Woods.

All For Love.

It was a runaway match. The young couple had nothing to live on but love, and they grew thin on it, for the butcher, baker, etc., heartlessly refused to barter any of the necessaries of life for a bit of love, and the landlady wouldn't accept even a large slice of it for rent.

At last they were reduced to such extremities that starvation stared them in the face. When starvation does this, it, so to say, "puts you out of countenance."

"Oh, George," wailed the young wife, "what shall we do? I am so hungry!"

"Alas, I know not, darling!" he sighed fondly but sadly, toying with her luxuriant tresses.

"But I know, George!" she suddenly exclaimed after a pause. "Sell my hair!"

"What!" he almost shouted, with a horror stricken face. "Sacrifice your lovely golden locks! Ruthlessly cut off the greatest ornament a woman can possess? Never! Never! I will starve first!"

"But, George," she assured him, "it does not require cutting off. See!"

And she detached the glistening 3 guinea switch from her head and laid it in his hand.

That night the young couple supped luxuriously, but still he was not happy.—Pearson's Weekly.

JESSUP PLEADED GUILTY.

Robbed His Mother-in-Law, Mrs. Ruth Ayres, of Springfield.

Adrian, Mich., June 15.—In the circuit court Friday Chas. E. Jessup, who is charged with robbing his mother-in-law, Ruth Ayers, of Springville, entered a plea of guilty of burglary. The court had a private interview with him and, while it is not known just what Jessup said, the court seemed reluctant to accept the plea of guilty to burglary. Jessup is very reticent and scarcely spoke when questioned by the court, merely nodding or shaking his head for answer. He declines to say how much he secured.

Mrs. Ayers had considerable money hidden that was not taken, and this week has placed it in the banks.—Detroit Free Press.

An Official "Not at Home."

With the President and Cabinet away, the capital city has been in an official way like a closed book. It may be that as many people are at work as usual but a feeling comes over the visitor that the whole government is not "at home." The tourists at the White House go about in a listless and uninterested way as if it were "Hamlet" without Hamlet—or even the ghost for that matter. The capitol on the hill serves only to suggest memories, and the darkened corridors and covered furniture have a sepulchral aspect.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in "The National Magazine" for June.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY

Adrian Mourns the Loss of Two Estimable Ladies,

MRS. T. S. APPLEGATE AND MRS. WM. HUMPHREY.

These Ladies, Together with Major Buckingham and Daughter, Miss Anna, of Flint, Killed Friday in that City by F. & P. M. Train.

Friday morning, while Mrs. T. S. Applegate and her sister, Mrs. Wm. Humphrey, of Adrian, who were attending the convention of the W. R. C. at Flint, were driving with Major Buckingham and daughter, Miss Anna, they were struck by the Pere Marquette passenger train and all four instantly killed.

Just how the terrible accident occurred will probably never be known, but it is thought that they were so engrossed in talking and sight seeing that they did not notice the 9:03 Pere Marquette train until it was nearly upon them and realizing their danger, knew that the only hope of escape was to force their horses across. But it was too late and the train struck the surrey in the side between the wheels, raising it in the air and freeing the team which ran away, and instantly blotting out the lives of four prominent people. The bodies of Major Buckingham and Mrs. Humphrey were found in a ditch several rods from where the accident occurred and those of Miss Buckingham and Mrs. Applegate on the pilot of the engine after the train was stopped.

The bodies of Mrs. Applegate and Mrs. Humphrey were taken to Adrian Saturday in the private car furnished by the Pere Marquette people, and the funeral was held in the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The G. A. R., W. R. C., the employes of the Times and the members of the Adrian Woman's Club, of which both ladies were valued members, attended in bodies.

Mrs. Harriet Applegate was born in Adrian April 19, 1846, and was the daughter of Gen. and Mrs. D. D. Sinclair. In 1870 she was united in marriage to Tom S. Applegate, who was one of the founders and proprietor of the Adrian Daily and Weekly Times until his death. At the request of Mr. Applegate, his wife took up the work of the newspaper after his death and she has been very successful in her work.

Mrs. Applegate was a woman of high character and beloved by all who knew her. She was very popular with the newspaper people of Michigan and was a regular and honored attendant of all press associations. Last May she was elected president of the State Women's Press Association and was also treasurer of the Michigan Republican Newspaper Association. With these deaths, not Adrian alone, but Michigan mourns the death of two of her most estimable and highly respected ladies.

Mrs. Elizabeth Humphrey was born in Adrian June 18, 1844. She was equally well known to Adrian people as her sister and her acquaintance throughout the state was nearly as great, owing to the war record of her husband, the late Gen. Wm. Humphrey. Like her sister, Mrs. Humphrey was a woman of rare attainments and enjoyed the respect of a large circle of friends. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Bert Tobias, who resides in Adrian.

Brothers of the two ladies, Ed. Sinclair, of St. Louis, Mo., and D. C. Sinclair, of Troy, Kas., attended the funeral.

Costly Wines.

Our millionaires think $75 a gallon for rare old Madeira an utterly impossible price simply because their tastes are blunted by champagne, and they care no more for a bottle of Welsh Reserve, Newton-Gordon or Chillingsworth-Oglethorpe than for a cheap sherry. In the famous cellars of the Hotel de Ville at Bremen there are a dozen cases of holy wine which have been preserved for 250 years. A merchant figures out that if the cost of maintaining the cellars, payment of rent, interest upon the original value of the wine and other incidental charges are considered a bottle of this choice Madeira has cost no less than $2,000,000, each glassful $270,000, and a single drop could not be sold without loss under $200.

It is probable that this very old wine is worthless on account of "starvation." Charles Bellows, our ablest authority on Madeira, says that it becomes "starved" after feeding upon its own lees for 30 or 40 years. "It seems to me that it is very human and requires companionship," he says. "Demijohns of the same variety should be blended. The marriage of the two wines would probably give the fees more character, and the wine would thus continue to improve. This certainly ought to be done as a tonic after the Madeira has been 50 years in glass."—New York Press.

Peculiarities of Asthma.

The peculiarities of asthma are well known, and one New York woman thinks that she has more than usual reason to complain of the vagaries of the disease. She had always lived in the lower part of the city on one of the avenues distant from the two rivers and had suffered in no unusual degree from asthma when the weather was not unfavorable. The doctor was not consulted when her husband bought a house in another part of the city, and it is indeed doubtful if he could have foreseen the effect upon her of living in the new neighborhood.

It took the sufferer only a few hours to realize that it would be impossible for her to live in the new house, which was only a short distance from the North river. Her discomfort became so great that she was compelled at the end of a week to give up all attempt to reside there, and the house that had been built with so much care and expense had to be abandoned.

Another example of the vagaries of asthma is to be found in the case of a New Yorker who is comfortable enough in this city so long as he lives on the upper stories of a lofty hotel or other residence building, but is in great distress so soon as he is compelled to be on terra firma.—New York Sun.

Martin Bacon, aged 14, was drowned in the Raisin river, just north of Victorsville Thursday at 4 o'clock. He was in bathing. About fifty men dragged the river for three hours before they discovered the body and recovered the same.

Some of the pupils of our school have queer ideas concerning President McKinley. One of the sixth grade said that he was governor of Michigan and a pupil of the third grade said he was the capital of the United States.—Petersburg Sun.

An editor out west printed an item which stated that "the man who was hugging the hired girl had better stop or his name would be published." In a few days about 25 citizens paid up their subscriptions in advance and told the editor to "pay no attention to the foolish stories goin' round."—Brooklyn Exponent.

The weather was freezing cold Wednesday night, but that did not prevent a tent full of people from witnessing the Bently show on West Main street. More amusing than any of the performance under the canvass, was the scene about Dan Weaver's cooper shop, after the lady balloonist got her back broken, on the roof. The doctor, undertaker, reporter, butcher, jeweler and a half dozen other humanitarians hastened to the rescue. A ladder was procured but before the victim of the tragedy could be reached, the cry of "rubber" mingled with those of distress and—sure enough, the figure was found to be only a dummy. It took the crowd less time to disperse than it did to collect, and the cigar trade became brisk.—Addison Courier.

The Adrian Times says that Probate Judge Larwill received something of a jar a few days ago when a middle-aged man walked into his office and inquired if the estate of John Parcels was being settled in probate court. Judge Larwill replied that it was, whereupon the stranger remarked: "Well, I'm John Parcels." The idea of having the supposed dead come to life in this manner for a moment unnerved the judge, but he recovered his composure while Parcels related his story. He formerly lived in Morenci, but about ten years ago drifted away and his family had heard nothing of him since. Sometime ago he fell heir to some property amounting to about $625, and in order for the son, Clyde Parcels, his sole heir, to gain possession of it, it was necessary to probate the estate of his father, whom he supposed dead. The matter has been regularly administered up to the present time, but the appearance of the elder Parcels on the scene brought the proceedings to an abrupt terminus.

Obeying Orders.

General Harney was an officer of the old school, a strict disciplinarian who took no excuses for hesitation in obeying orders. When he was on his way to Mexico, when the United States was at war with that country, he engaged teams to transport the baggage and placed in charge of them a Texan named Carter. The streams were all up, and Carter had much trouble, but whenever he tried to modify the general's requirements he was cut short with the admonition, "All you've got to do is to obey orders."

Says Noah Smithwick in his recollections called "The Evolution of a State:"

They camped one night near the Nueces river, which Carter found to be impassable. He said nothing about it to the general, and the next morning the order was given to move on. Carter started with the wagon train and halted at the river, which was absolutely impassable. Harney came blustering up.

"Didn't you know that river was up?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir," meekly replied the wagon master.

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"You didn't ask me, sir. You said my business was to obey orders. You ordered me to hitch up and move on, and I did it."

"You did quite right, sir. Turn round and drive back to camp."

If the general had been "done," he was not going to show it.

Mr. Hare's Fountain of Youth.

Mr. John Hare, the eminent English actor-manager, said that the most delightful compliment he ever received was from Mr. Gladstone. It was a double ended compliment. Whichever way you took it it was satisfactory.

Mr. Hare earned fame playing old men's parts, his character as Mr. Goldby in "A Pair of Spectacles" being a good example. Added to this was a horror of having his picture taken.

Mr. Gladstone had never seen a picture of the actor, but he knew him well behind the scenes as well as before the footlights. The premier's favorite play was "A Pair of Spectacles," and he always went behind the scenes to chat awhile with the actor. The really old man and the made up old man would sit there and talk in the most delightful way for an hour after the show.

One day the Earl of Rosebery had Mr. Gladstone to dinner, and he also invited his friend, John Hare. The actor came in smooth shaved, looking about 35. He was presented to Mr. Gladstone, and the prime minister shook his hand most cordially and said:

"My dear sir, I am very, very glad to meet you. I know your father very, very well. Splendid actor! Fine old man!"

It took the whole evening for the earl and Mr. Hare to convince him that this son was really the father.—Saturday

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Many Times Nothing—Sometimes A Fund of Knowledge.

It's a good old saying, and a true one too, "Know all men by their works." The public have been imposed upon so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation made in Michigan and no imposter can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings emphatic rejoicings and words of praise the like of which has not been equaled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name of Doan is dear to him:

Mr. R. N. Elliott, of 143 High street, Detroit, says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of the rheumatism and the end of the kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension."

NAVAL FOOD STORES.

WHAT "JACKY" GETS TO EAT IN UNCLE SAM'S SERVICE.

The American Navy Is Better Fed Than Any Other Navy In the World. What It Costs the Officers to Run the Wardroom Mess.

The United States government gives its sailors only 30 cents a day each to live on, but the American navy is better fed than any other navy in the world. In fact, "jacky" lives better than the average mechanic on shore.

As the appetite of a seafaring man cannot be appeased by angel food the provisions are of the most substantial kind.

All naval vessels are liable to be sent on long voyages or to be stationed where markets are inaccessible, and the stores purchased for the crew must be such as will keep for a long time and not become damaged by changes of climate. Naturally salt pork, corned beef, hard tack, beans, flour, sugar, canned fruits and vegetables are carried in large quantities and must of necessity constitute the main part of the daily rations. With these staples as a basis many appetizing combinations can be made. At sea fresh meat and vegetables are not to be had, but while in port or within reach of a market the navy regulations require the issuance on certain days of these desirable additions to the food supply. In the olden days no fresh meat was included in the navy ration, and "jacky" was compelled to subsist largely on corned beef, known in the sailor vernacular as "salt horse," owing to the fact that some unscrupulous contractor at one time long ago passed off horseflesh for beef in a navy supply. The barrel in which the salt meat is kept is to this day known as the "harness cask."

The enlisted men are divided into messes consisting of from 18 to 24 men each. Every month the mess elects one of its number to the position of caterer, and he looks after all matters culinary during his term. To him the daily allowances of staple foods are issued each morning by one of the paymaster's men, known as the "Jack of the dust," presumably from his handling flour. The ship's cooks then prepare the supplies for the table. Each mess is usually allowed from four to six commuted rations—that is, the caterer is given the value of such rations in cash and is thus provided with a fund of from $36 to $54 per month with which to buy fruits, vegetables, fish, butter and other items which are not included in the list of articles furnished by the government. To furnish the table still further it is customary for each man to "chip in" a dollar or two each month out of his own pocket.

The old time shellbacks looked with glee upon a plum duff dinner, but such dainties as that seem commonplace to the new style navy men, who on holidays and frequently on Sundays have delicacies like roast turkey with cranberry sauce, celery, oranges, bananas and even ice cream.

If "jacky" has one failing in the commissariat line, it is his craving for pies of any constituency or nationality. He will eat them on any occasion and in any place. The ship's cook, if he be ambitious, takes advantage of this and makes up a tempting array of pies from materials which he purchases from the paymaster and retails them to the sailors.

The government does not discriminate in the allowance for food supplies in the navy as between officer and enlisted man—that is, it did not up to a year or two ago, when every man in the ship, from the admiral down to a coal heaver, received 30 cents each day. Now the discrimination is that the coal heaver continues to draw his 30 cents, while the admiral and all other officers except the gunner, carpenter, pharmacist, chief machinists and the naval cadets receive absolutely nothing for their subsistence on board ship. Many who visit naval vessels and are entertained at dinner or luncheon are heard to remark that the government provides very good living for its officers, not thinking that the entire cost of the repast has come out of the officers' own pockets.

The cost of an officer's living on one of our vessels varies considerably. In a port where much entertaining has to be done and where there are high priced markets the mess bill, as it is called, sometimes runs as high as $35 or $40 a month for each officer and is rarely less than $25 a month. This represents merely the actual cost of the food and the incidental expenses of the mess, as the government furnishes all servants, crockery, fuel and table linen.

In connection with this subject it may be interesting to note that the captain of a war vessel does not eat with the other officers, but has a separate establishment for himself and is provided with a cook and a steward whose only duties are to wait on him. On flagships the admiral also eats alone. The wardroom mess usually includes all officers above the grade of ensign and on most vessels consists of from 10 to 20 members. Junior officers and naval cadets constitute another mess, known as the steerage mess.—C. A. McAllister in Saturday Evening Post.

Tit For Tat.

The correspondence was brief, but to the point. The letter she received was as follows:

> Dear Madam—I take pleasure in shipping to your address a rug valued at $50, for which I shall be glad to receive your check. If you do not desire the rug, please return it.

"The idea!" she exclaimed. "I never knew such impertinence."

Then she sat down and wrote the following:

> Dear Sir—I have ordered no rug from your establishment, and I see no reason why I should go to the expense of returning that which I do not want and which was sent to me unsolicited.

To this she received the following answer in due time:

> Dear Madam—I will send for the unsolicited rug, and I trust you will do me the favor to send for the unsolicited charity entertainment tickets which now lie, with about 28 others, on my desk.

"The discourteous boor!" she exclaimed.

"Evidently," he soliloquized, "there are methods of procedure that cannot be successfully applied to business."—St. Paul Trade Journal.

A Colored Philosopher.

"Ain't no use a-worryin about nuthin," said the colored philosopher, dangling his feet over the edge of the barrel on which he sat. "Ain't no use t' get blue ner t' feel down in the mout', 'cause it ain't goin t' do any good 'tall. I says t' myself, says I: 'Mose, what's the use of you scratchin? Wife's been dead 'bout four yeahs. Las' of ma child'en shuffled off las' week. I don't care if I eats cawn pones er lasses bread. Live just as long nohow. Ain' goin t' trouble ma min' 'bout nothin. W'ite man, he have wife an child'en an a good coat an a 'ouse. Bar'l good nuff fur me. Ain't got nothin t' work fur an ain't goin t' work.'" He shuffled off the barrel and moseyed easily down Hickory alley.—Columbus Dispatch.

Filthiest Place In the World.

Port-au-Prince, the capital, is by consent of all who have had opportunity of comparing it with other cities—the filthiest place in the world. The town was laid out by the French, and the streets are wide. It is only their great width that makes them passable, for the roadway before his dwelling is every householder's rubbish shoot, and slab sided pigs and starveling dogs perform all the sanitary offices for the town of Port-au-Prince save in the rainy season, when a heavier storm than usual comes to flush the open drains. In consequence the populace live in an atmosphere of combined cesspool and ash pit, which by all the laws of hygiene should produce chronic plague.

The free and independent negro leads the life that most nearly approaches his ideal. They have a proverb in the country that "only white men, black women and asses work," and there is truth in it. The black man lies around all day sleeping in the sun. His utmost effort is to play dice or watch a cockfight, but sleep is his favorite occupation, and he can do that better than anything else. In the country districts the old plantations have long since slipped back into the luxuriant overgrowth of the forest. In town any trading done is by the women and by foreigners. Undisturbed by the white man, to whom he is insolent, the town bred negro is pacific enough. The only exertion demanded of him is to avoid the attentions of the police.—Chambers' Journal.

Uncle Mingo and the Waiter.

Uncle Mingo was in town a day or two ago. It had been a long time since the old man had been to Savannah, and he rambled over the streets all the morning, impressed with the wonderful things he saw.

Naturally toward the midday he began to feel a little tired and very hungry, so as he passed in front of one of the eating houses for colored people, of which there are several in the neighborhood of the Plant system depot, the succulent piles of edibles in the windows offered too great a temptation to be resisted. He entered the restaurant and sat down to a table.

"All right, sah," said the affable waiter, coming up. "Wot'll it be?"

"I want," said Uncle Mingo unctuously, "some o' dat fried fish een de winder an a piece o' dat pie."

"Yes, sah. Wot else?"

"I want some o' dat fried chicken, too, an some o' dem doughnuts."

"Yes, sah. Wot else?"

"I want some o' dat ham and some town bread."

"Yes, sah. Wot else?"

"An I want a cup o' tea."

"Cup o' tea. Yes, sah. Wot kind o' tea?"

"Wot kin o' tea I want?" replied the old man, with a severe look. "Wot kin you 'spec' I want? I want sto' tea, sto' tea. You t'ink I come on de train all de way from Possum Holler for to drink saccafrax?"—Savannah News.

A Tutor Who Maintained His Dignity.

Dr. Chalmers always had a high sense of personal dignity. When a young man, be was engaged as tutor in a private family. His young lady pupils resented his strictness, and the mother foolishly took sides with her daughters. In petty spite when company was invited to the house young Chalmers was shut out from the table, and dinner was sent to his room.

He made no protest against the treatment, but when it was attempted again he told the servant he had ordered a dinner at a neighboring town and should need nothing. When this had been done a few times, an explosion came. The master of the house called Chalmers to account for insulting his family. Chalmers replied that he had been insulted by banishment from the table. The young teacher conquered and ever after held his place as one of the family at all social gatherings.

No Apparent Cause For Offense.

It was the third day out on an ocean liner, and some of the passengers were just getting acquainted. A lady who had made the trip many times lay comfortably in her steamer chair, when the pretty and stylishly clad daughter of a newly rich family stopped near her, and they drifted into conversation. Presently the lady bowed to a pale faced man who walked by.

"Who was that?" inquired the girl.

"That was Signor Slambangski, the famous pianist," replied the lady, who then went on to speak of the probable performers at the inevitable concert at the journey's end.

"Oh, are there any musicianers on board?" eagerly inquired the girl.

"I beg your pardon?" said the lady interrogatively.

The girl gazed at her inquiringly.

"What for?" she asked.—New York Mail and Express.

How She Rules Him.

"Skinphlint's wife certainly has remarkable success in managing him. I wonder how she does it."

"When he undertakes to deny her anything she really wants, she threatens to sue him for divorce."

"Does he care so much for her, then?"

"Oh, no, it's not that, but he figures that it is cheaper to let her have her own way than it would be to either defend the suit or pay alimony."—Chicago Post.

A Question of Salutations.

"What is your favorite salutation?" she asked the dilatory youth.

"Eh! Why, I don't know. What's yours?"

The fair girl yawned wearily.

"It would have been good night," she said. "But in about two minutes it will be good morning."

"Goodby," said the dilatory youth.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lighting Up the Coliseum.

The Romans have the hideous habit of periodically lighting the Coliseum during the tourist season with Bengal lights and, what is more amazing still, usually succeed in making a financial success of it, although no one was ever known to go twice.

There is the additional abomination in these days of a big brass band and a chorus of 100 voices in an invocation to the Flavian amphitheater. The effect is tremendous, but somewhat stunning to those who are accustomed to their Coliseum empty and flooded with peaceful moonlight, where pictures from the past rise with the clearness of second sight, and no sound is heard but one's own breathing or the song of the nightingale. Contrast with such a scene the red, blue and yellow Bengal lights, the smoke, the confusion, the hundred shrieking throats and the clang of the brazen instruments! Imagination shrinks and curses the Roman of today with whom such a thing is possible. But is it his fault? As I said before, it is a great financial success, and the Italians certainly do not patronize it. Query, Who does?—Rome Letter in Pall Mall Gazette.

It Rained Copper.

The cadets of Annapolis sat in the side aisles of the chapel, leaving the center aisles for the officers and their families, says Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady in "Under Tops'ls and Tents."

When the offering was received, the two boys charged with the duty of passing the plates did not make the slightest effort to circulate them among the cadets, for we never had any money. They would walk rapidly down the aisle and then come deliberately up the middle, gathering thence what they could. One Sunday the chaplain announced that he would preach a missionary sermon the next Sunday. It did not have the ordinary effect in emptying the church, for we were obliged to go as usual.

During the week it occurred to the bright mind of a senior, or first class man, who is now a prominent New York financier, that it would be well for the cadets to make an offering. So he sent out to the bank on Saturday morning and succeeded in smuggling in over 300 copper cents, which he distributed 1 cent per boy to the Episcopal battalion. We stationed a strong, long armed man on the outside seat of the first pew in each aisle.

The chaplain made a piteous appeal for pennies even, and when the astonished cadets who passed the plates started on their perfunctory promenade the strong, one armed men aforesaid promptly relieved them of the metal plates, and each one dropped in one copper cent with an ominous crash and then deliberately handed the plate to the next boy, who did the same thing. It rained copper cents for about ten minutes. The chaplain was dreadfully disconcerted, the officers fidgeted and looked aghast. Some of them laughed, and the cadets preserved a deadly solemnity. The affair was a striking success.

A Pigeon as Valet to a Crow.

"Tom was the name given to a lordly young crow," says Florence M. Kingsley in The Ladies' Home Journal. "Beauty was a snow white pigeon of about the crow's age, with whom he was reared. Just how it came about we never knew, but we soon discovered that Beauty regularly acted as maid of all work to Tom. She fetched and carried morsels of food at his imperious command, and one of her unvarying duties was the preening of her master's feathers. Tom was very much of a dandy. His coal black plumage always appeared perfectly dressed and shining, but the arduous labor of his toilet was performed for him twice every day by the humble and affectionate pigeon.

"Our fine gentleman would come in from a roll in the dust or a dip in the fountain and, seating himself upon a certain railing, utter a short, sharp call. Instantly Beauty would descend to his side and begin her task, fluttering anxiously from side to side as she worked, drawing each shining black feather carefully out to its full length in her pink bill, Tom meanwhile dozing luxuriously, with closed eyes, after the manner of the complacent patron of a skillful barber. If Beauty unfortunately pulled a feather too hard, a squawk and a sudden peck informed her of her mistake."

His Spelling System.

Dobbs met his friend Turner in the tram. They were both going to Birmingham and stopped at the same hotel. Turner registered his name "E. K. Phthholognyrrh."

Dobbs, noticing it, exclaimed, "Here, what are you using such a foreign, outlandish name for?"

"I am not assuming any foreign name," replied Turner.

"What kind of a name is it, then?"

"That is my identical old name, and it is English too—pronounced 'Turner.'"

"I can't see how you make 'Turner' out of those 13 letters; besides, what is your object in spelling that way?" asked Dobbs.

"Well, you see, nobody ever noticed my name on the register when I wrote it 'Turner,'" the latter explained, "but since I commenced writing it 'Phthholognyrrh' I set them all guessing. It is, as I said before, English spelling. 'Phth' is the sound of 't' in 'phthisis,' 'olo' is the sound of 'ur' in 'colonel,' 'gn' there is the 'n' in 'gnat,' 'yrrh' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now, if that doesn't spell 'Turner' what does it spell?"—London Standard.

Optimism.

When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously.

"Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired a passerby.

"Because I have just now been emancipated from toil," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!"

Then the optimist walked off, whistling gayly, into the sunshine.—New York Sun.

"I say, Scribbler," said Sappy, "how on earth do you think up all these chawacters you wite about?"

"Oh, I take them from real life," replied Scribbler, "but they never suspect. Take, for instance, the character of Woodby Britten, who is always saying 'dooced' this and 'dooced' that. Now, that's a fellow I know very well, but he doesn't know I'm using him."

"Oh, come now, I say! How dooced clevah of you! Dooced stupid of him, though!" — Catholic Standard and Times.

The Mermaid's Pun.

Neptune had returned from the market with a fine fish.

"How many pounds does it weigh?" inquired a mermaid.

"He is about a ten-er," responded Neptune.

"If he is a tenor," returned the mermaid, "he cannot, of course, be a bass."

Neptune was stung by the retort, but was much too polite to reply in kind by any allusion to her scales.—New York Marine Journal.

Japan's Impregnability.

The coast of Japan, notwithstanding its long shore line and numerous harbors, offers scant allurement to an invading army. There is very little beach. The bold crags and bluffs overlooking every spot where a modern war vessel can ride at anchor are protected by strong fortifications defended by the most modern guns.

Yeddo bay, the most feasible bight for invading purposes, needs careful navigation even by steamers of moderate draft. When torpedoes are planted, it is simply impregnable, says a writer in Collier's Weekly. When the war with China broke out, a small steamer was selected to pilot merchant steamers up and down the bay. I remember perfectly the unexpected curves made by this steamer, showing plainly the countless dangers besetting a hostile fleet regardless of the care that may be used in feeling its way. No invading army could possibly land, and even if it succeeded in doing so the rice-fields, readily submerged as they are, would aid materially in thwarting the advance and in isolating the enemy. A successful invasion of Japan is simply impossible.

An Irish Retort.

Pat, the driver of the coal wagon, seemed puzzled when he got up on High street the other day. He looked at the numbers of several houses and scratched his head in a perplexed way. Finally Mrs. Eaton, for whom the coal was intended, appeared and inquired:

"Beg pardon, but is that coal for Eaton?"

"No, mom," responded Pat promptly; "it's not for 'atin; it's fur burnin!"—London Telegraph.

Bismarck's Philosophy of Life.

With dutiful trust in God, dig in the spurs and let life, like a wild horse, take you flying over hedge and ditch, resolved to break your neck, and yet fearless, inasmuch as you must some time part from all that is dear to you on earth, though not forever. If grief is near, well, let him come on, but until he arrives do not merely look bright and blessed, but be it, too, and when sorrow comes you bear it with dignity —that is to say, with submission and hope.—Love Letters of Prince Bismarck.

Twenty Lost Gold Mines.

There are at least 20 lost gold mines in various parts of the world. Many of them have yielded rich ores and then have been deserted and entirely lost.

There is one in the north of the Transvaal, for instance, that was discovered by accident in the eighties by two Englishmen. The finders had encamped one night and had, as they thought, securely tethered their horses when they suddenly heard a loud neigh from one of the animals and a moment later saw them both racing away apparently in the greatest terror.

Soon after dawn they were up and after an hour's tramp found one of the poor beasts lying on the ground with a broken leg. In its struggles it had kicked up the ground and had exposed rich gold quartz only a few inches below the surface.

The two men marked the spot and returned to the district a month later to start work on the mine. But in spite of all their efforts they could not find the place, and to this day the mine has not been rediscovered.

In the late seventies there was tremendous excitement in California when a prospector described a gold mine he had found. A party soon prepared to set out, with the discoverer of the mine as guide, but the mine has never been discovered, though thousands of dollars have been spent in prospecting for it.—Stray Stories.

PINGREE LAMENTED

Letters of Condolence and Sympathy From All Sources

WILL ERECT A MONUMENT

Contributions Pouring In From All Over the State—Citizens' Committee of Five Hundred Appointed to Carry Out the Work.

New York, June 21.—Mayor Maybury is making arrangements for a tug to take the Detroit councilmen down the bay to meet the incoming steamer with Mr. Pingree's remains on board. He will see Mayor Van Wyck today and personally notify him, believing he would desire an opportunity of testifying respect for the distinguished dead.

Mr. Maybury will remain here till Sunday or Monday and will make any further arrangements the Detroit council desires. He says:

"It is very gratifying to hear among business men here universal expressions of regret at Pingree's demise, and to note the splendid estimation placed on his accomplishments in public and private life. His death is looked on almost as a national calamity."

Detroit, June 21.—Robert Oakman, of the Pingree citizens' committee, will interview the railroad officials with a view to securing a low rate of fare on the day of Pingree's funeral for people coming in from the state. It is believed that thousands of friends of the ex-governor would be glad to take advantage of the low fares to pay a last tribute to him by attending the funeral.

UNABLE TO COMPLY.

Request for a Warship to Bring Remains Home Not Feasible.

Washington, June 21.—The telegram which Congressman Corliss sent to President McKinley asking that ex-Gov. Pingree's remains be brought home in a United States war vessel, was received at the White House yesterday. It was immediately referred to the navy department, and placed before Secretary Long, who consulted with several officials of the department, who told him that there was no precedent for bringing the remains of private citizens of the United States from abroad in that manner to this country, although one was placed at the disposal of John Sherman when he was ill at Porto Rico.

Said Secretary Long:

"Ex-Gov. Pingree was a private citizen at the time of his decease, and the remains of no such person has ever been brought home in the way suggested by Corliss. Whenever a United States minister dies abroad his body is brought home by the government, but Mr. Pingree was not a federal official, nor an officer of any state."

Secretary Long intimated that to comply with Corliss's request would open the way to later requests of the same kind, which the government would not want to grant. In the present instance there is little doubt that a war vessel would be placed at the disposal of the ex-governor's family, if that were the only thing to be considered.

After conferring with the president, Mr. Long announced that he regretted to say that the department is unable to comply with Corliss's request, as there are no warships available for the duty.

MONUMENT TO PINGREE.

Fund to be Raised in Ten Days for That Purpose.

Detroit, June 21.—The citizens' committee originally appointed to arrange for a public reception to ex-Gov. Pingree upon his arrival in Detroit has reorganized itself into a committee to prepare for memorial monument and to take charge of the arrangements for a public funeral.

At a meeting of the committee held yesterday plans were adopted for receiving and acknowledging subscriptions, which already amount to about $2,000. Frank C. Andrews has subscribed $1,000. It is proposed to raise a memorial fund within 10 days, and subscriptions will be received from any part of the state, for the committee decided yesterday not to limit the popular expression to Detroit.

The general citizens' committee is composed of about 500 citizens of the city and county. On the list is the president and secretary of every labor union in the city as well as representatives named by the aldermen of the several wards. This plan was adopted as the best means to secure a representative committee of all classes of Detroiters, such as was felt would be most appropriate.

From Out in the State.

Ex-Labor Commissioner Joseph L. Cox of Battle Creek who was named as state chairman for the Pingree memorial fund, telegraphed Robert Oakman yesterday that he would accept and that he will arrive in Detroit today to commence work.

Sybrant Wesselius, Mr. Pingree's former railroad commissioner, was also asked to serve on the memorial committee and telegraphed as follows:

"Accept for me the invitation to serve on the memorial committee. To perpetuate our dead friend's memory is to serve the state."

Amos S. Musselmon of Grand Rapids, in accepting membership in the memorial committee said, "I shall consider it a privilege to serve."

George B. Horton, president of the state grange, wired as follows:

"I will esteem it a high honor to serve on a citizens' Pingree memorial committee and to contribute with the thousands of appreciative citizens of Michigan for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of that true, tried and never found wanting friend of the people, Hazen S. Pingree."

Charles P. Downey of Lansing wired:

"Would be more than pleased to serve on a Pingree memorial committee. Please notify me duties and time."

Telegrams of acceptance were also received from ex-Senator John Holbrook of Lansing and City Assessor Louis Smith of Saginaw.

S. J. Tomlinson of the Pontiac Gazette, one of Mr. Pingree's most constant supporters, and Irwin W. Snyder of the Bay City Tribune, telegraphed that they would receive contributions for the memorial fund.

BRYAN AND LUCE

Eulogize the Life and Character of the Dead Ex-Governor.

Chicago, June 21.—The death of ex-Gov. Pingree is a loss to the country. He had conscience, courage and ability.—W. J. Bryan.

Coldwater, Mich., June 21.—I became acquainted with Gov. Pingree when he first assumed the duties of mayor of Detroit. I then learned with what extreme reluctance he accepted the responsibilities imposed by the office. He assured me he felt it his duty to resign because of the unpleasant nature of some portions of the business placed in his hands. He said he had been elected to fight thieves, and while it would be easy to fight the small thieves, the task of contending with the larger ones was a fearful one. But with the long and intimate acquaintance I enjoyed, I learned to admire his courage and the fidelity with which he discharged every duty as he understood it; his instincts and sympathies were with the right.

The antagonism that he aroused developed the fighting qualities of the man, and this brought upon him keen criticisms and was sometimes deplored by his friends, but the good work that he performed and tried to perform will live in the minds and hearts of the people of Michigan long after his faults will be forgotten. His courage was worthy of all emulation by officials everywhere, and I am one of the mourners because of his death.—Cyrus G. Luce.

Joe Pingree Better.

Before leaving New York for Detroit last night, Mrs. Pingree and party were made happy by a cablegram from London announcing the fact that Joe Pingree was rapidly getting better.

MAYOR PERRY PRESIDENT

Of the State Municipal League for the Ensuing Year.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 21.—The following officers were elected for the coming year at the annual meeting of the Municipal league in this city: President, George R. Perry of Grand Rapids; vice-president, Mayor Frank E. Palmer of Jackson; secretary, Ald. George H. Phillips of Battle Creek; treasurer, Mayor A. J. Mills of Kalamazoo; trustees, Mayor James J. Owosso will entertain the league next year. Owosso received four votes, Traverse City two, and Kalamazoo one vote for the meeting place.

The following committee was appointed to draft resolutions of respect in regard to the death of ex-Gov. Pingree: Mayor Perry, Grand Rapids, chairman; ex-Mayor Stearns, Adrian; Mayor Gillette, Battle Creek; ex-Mayor Hamilton, Traverse City, and Mayor Frank E. Palmer of Jackson. The resolutions were presented and accepted by the league.

DIDN'T DO A THING

But Give a Couple of Bullies Ninety Days in Jail.

Detroit, Mich., June 21.—George and John Drewicz, two strapping Poles, were before Justice Clark of Glenwood yesterday afternoon charged with assault and battery on their mother, a woman about 65 years of age. The two sons came home about a week ago. Both had been drinking and both were in a quarrelsome mood. Something said or done by their mother angered them and both pitched upon her. They gave her a severe beating while drunk and the matter ended by her falling to the floor, where one of them kicked in two of her ribs.

Justice Clark imposed a fine on each of $106 with the alternative of 90 days in jail. The two inhuman sons had more time than money and were taken to the house of correction.

A New Sanitarium.

Niles, Mich., June 21.—D. C. Sheehan, local capitalist, will convert what was formerly the palatial residence of Millionaire Chas. Chapin of Chicago into a sanitarium, which will be conducted on an elaborate scale. Mineral water recently discovered at a depth of about 1,200 feet will be used in connection. This water is declared by medical authorities to possess marvelous curative powers.

Little Leo Hall Dead.

Detroit, Mich., June 21.—Golden-haired Leo Hall, 6-year-old son of Letter Carrier Charles A. Hall of 605 Putname avenue died at Grace hospital at 4 o'clock yesterday morning as the result of burns received in a gasoline explosion. Grace Hall, his sister, aged 15, also lies at the hospital, but she was not so severely burned and will survive.

Recovered the Body.

Ishpeming, Mich., June 21.—The body of Thomas Nichols, a miner, who was caught in the run of mud in the Cleveland Lake mine a week ago, has been recovered. The mud came from the lake basin, causing much damage to the mine. Nearly 100,000 tons came in, most of which was removed in the search for the body.

Guilty of Incest.

Traverse City, Mich., June 21.—Nathan Potts was found guilty of incest at Leland. The jury was out 10 hours. Potts ruined his daughter Ardie, aged 30, and she died in March from a criminal operation.

Both Killed in a Duel.

Atlanta, Ga., June 21.—A special to the Constitution from Waynesboro, Miss., says: A. M. Leary and J. L. Davis engaged in a duel, in which both were instantly killed. The trouble arose as the result of a family feud. Davis, who owned a big licensed distillery, opened fire on Leary with pistol. He fired three times. After Leary was down he fired a shot with a pistol, killing Davis.

Ambassador Choate Ill.

London, June 21.—United States Ambassador Choate is confined to his bed by a summer cold, which has proved somewhat irritating. Last night his physicians report an improvement in his condition.

STORM IN INDIANA

Rain, Lightning and a Cyclone Get in Their Work

A NUMBER OF PEOPLE KILLED

Houses, Barns and Growing Crops Destroyed and a Path Seven Miles Long by One and a Half Wile Laid Desolate by the Storm.

Indianapolis, June 21.—Three persons were killed and several injured by lightning during the severe electrical storm which passed over Indiana last night. Bert Hathaway, Idaville, Ind., was killed, as were Grace Larkin, 16 years old, daughter of Harvey Larkin, Riley, Ind., and Ira Smith, Youngstown, Ind.

The storm took on cyclonic aspects at several places. At Marion the First Presbyterian church was struck and partially destroyed. Five men who were in the saloon were knocked senseless.

At Greentown trees were uprooted and fruit and growing crops badly damaged by hail. Three hundred windows were broken. Several barns were burned. The loss in and around Greentown will probably reach $40,000.

At Roachdale the building occupied by the Roachdale News was entirely destroyed. The machinery and fixtures are badly damaged. At Monticello a barn was struck by a bolt of lightning and Mr. Hathaway, who had taken refuge from the storm in the building, was instantly killed. The barn and contents, including seven horses, were entirely consumed, causing a loss of $5,000.

Hartford City was visited by a terrific wind and hail storm last night. Fifty oil derricks were blown down, and several buildings were damaged, causing a loss of $25,000.

Muncie, Ind., June 21.—In the southeastern part of this, Delaware county, thousands of dollars' worth of loss followed last night the wake of the greatest hailstorm known in the history of Indiana. Fruit trees are stripped and the strawberry crop is ruined. Many farmers are ruined. Names of 40 farmers whose crops are ruined were procured and their total loss will be $75,000. The storm district is seven by one and a half miles, and no farmer escaped.

Father Gets His Child.

New York, June 21.—After a long fight for possession of his 13-months-old daughter Gladys, Frank Weyant, a wealthy ranch owner of Lincoln, Neb., won his suit in the appelate division of the supreme court, Brooklyn. The court reversed the decision of the lower court, which had dismissed a writ of habeas corpus. The child's mother died in the east more than a year ago and Gladys was placed in the care of her uncle, Henry Weyant, in Brooklyn. When she was six months old her father desired to take her west with him. but under advice of a physician, who said she could not stand the trip, her uncle refused to surrender her. The father then appealed to the courts.

Badly Wanted.

Boston, June 21.—A letter and photograph received by Chief Watts from the Chicago police was identified as the likeness of an alleged forger and swindler and a man who, on one occasion at least in a desperate attempt to escape from custody, shot an officer. The letter from Chicago said the man was arrested there under the name of Chester Melville, Jr., and he said his home was in Boston. He is known here, however, as Jordan Hall, wanted here on the charge of swindling merchants by means of bogus drafts. It is said he is also wanted in Philadelphia, New York, Denver and elsewhere.

There is no Change.

Washington, June 21.—Though very slow, the improvement in Mrs. McKinley's condition continues steadily and each day shows here to be a little stronger than the preceding one. Dr. Rixey, as he left the White House, said while there was nothing new in her case, she continued to improve and was able to sit in her rolling chair and see a few friends.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

J. P. Morgan is to be in New York in three weeks to stir up the financial menagerie.

New York state is asked by Buffalonians and Gothamites to put up $26,000,000 for a bargeway to carry 1,000-ton barges.

Gen. C. G. Bartlett's body has been fished out of East river, New York. He was a victim of the ferryboat Northfield disaster last week.

Knights of Pythias supreme lodge gathers in Chicago July 9 to adjust investment of endowment funds and provide for the growing needs of the insurance department.

Tom Burns, noted gunfighter, was shot from his horse in Mammoth, Arizona, by a cowboy named Wallace, who got the drop of him.

English-speaking anarchists in New York have notified Giovanni Branchi, Italian consul there, to stop employing spies to watch anarchists in Paterson, N. J., or look out for some deplorable blood-letting.

Manitoba expects 60,000,000 bushels from 2,000,000 acres of wheat. C. P. R. is about to build some branch lines to help farmers of the interior reach markets.

Geological survey parties have just begun work on the Gunnison river valley in western Colorado to divert the river by means of a great tunnel through a mountain range into a dry and fertile valley.

Sugar crop figures from Matanzas, Cuba, show an estimated crop of 600,000 tons, bringing $30,000,000. Next season's acreage will be one-third greater. Planters in Cardenas district are working off a lot of poor lands on greenhorn Americans. The day of the baronial proprietor is over and that of the small farmer is dawning.

Committed Suicide.

Owosso, Mich., June 18.—J. C. Nusbaum, a Michigan Central section hand at Oakley, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid while in a fit of despondency. Nusbaum was 31 years old, and leaves a widow. He came here from Fremont, Ind., last November and was a member of the Knights of Pythias. Owosso lodge pays the expenses of the funeral.

No Smallpox at Hudson.

Hudson, Mich., June 18.—Not a single case of smallpox has been reported to the board of health here and there are no cases of the disease in this section. Reports that Hudson had been quarantined are entirely without foundation.

MINERS KILLED.

Union Miners Shot Down by an Armed Posse.

Matewan, W. Va., June 21.—The trouble long anticipated has at last taken place, and the strained relations between the union and non-union miners have resulted in bloodshed. Several hundred union miners who were on strike marched in a body against the Maratime mines of this place, where non-union men were at work. They tried to effect an entrance, but the operators, with 20 guards armed with Winchester rifles, blocked the entrance. The non-union miners were headed by Supt. Lambert, and when the previously warned union men persisted in their attempt, he gave the command to fire. Fully 50 shots were fired. Boyd Martin and Riley Johnson were fatally shot and Sam Artrip was dangerously wounded. The union men did not return the fire, but dispersed, waiting reinforcements and swearing vengeance for the blood of their comrades.

All the union miners throughout Mingo are collecting to get here today. Serious trouble is expected when they again try to effect an entrance to the Maratime mines. Sheriff Hatfield, a nephew of the notorious "Cap" Hatfield, is on the scene with 50 deputies and says he proposes to do his duty, and unless the union men back down it is hard to predict the result.

WILL FIGHT THE TRUST.

Indiana Authorities Will Contest Transfer of Coal Mines.

Indianapolis, June 21.—The state may try to prevent the organization of the proposed coal trust by bringing suits to enjoin the operators from disposing of their property in that way.

Deputy Atty.-Gen. Hadley said that he intends to inquire into the plans of the trust promoters for the purpose of finding out if they are violating any of the provisions of the anti-trust statute. It is not believed that the Cooper anti-trust law, enacted at the last session of the legislature, will reach this case, but Mr. Hadley thinks the law under which the suits were brought about two years ago to prevent certain glass manufacturers in Madison county from selling their property to the window glass trust may apply.

If the coal suits shall be brought it is probable, he said, that the issue would be the same as in the glass cases.

Edward Biddle Convicted.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 21.—Edward Biddle has been convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Thomas D. Kahney, the Mount Washington grocer. The crime occurred in Kahney's home in Albert street, early in the morning of April 12 last. John Biddle, a brother of Edward, was convicted on the same charge last week. Walter Dorman, the third member of the gang, pleaded guilty. The jury was out 30 minutes. Biddle took the verdict coolly and was led back to the county jail.

Another charge of murder hangs over Ed. Biddle's head for the killing of Detective Fitzgerald, who tried to arrest him after the Kahney murder.

Nobody Killed.

Greenville, Pa., June 21.—By the ditching of the Erie & Pittsburg flyer at Transfer last evening four passengers were badly hurt, but none of them seriously. Just after leaving the station the rear axle of the tender broke, throwing the tender, baggage car, express car and vestibuled coaches from the track and turning them over. It was at first thought many were killed, but it was soon learned that four of the passengers were the only victims.

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals of the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. Dr. Blackford says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land.—Chicago Chronicle.

CUBAN PROSPERITY

Guaranteed by the Acceptance of the Platt Law

SAYS CIVIL GOVERNOR NUNEZ

With the Acceptance of the Amendment the Suspicions of the Cubans Have Become Allayed and the People Are Satisfied.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Gen. Emilio Nunez, civil governor of the province of Havana, passed through this city on his way to Atlantic City. In speaking of the conditions of the island Gen. Nunez said:

"Since the acceptance by our Cuban national assemblies of the Platt amendment the political situation has improved a great deal. The business people now think there will be no question raised or any misunderstanding in relations between Cuba and the United States. For a time ill-feeling was threatened, but the final adoption of the amendment has settled this. The result is the stablishment of frienly feelings between the two governments, and the Cuban people are satisfied with existing conditions. New companies with American capital have come to Havana in consequence, and more money is being invested in the country than ever before. The administration of Gen. Wood, all in all, has been very successful. He has had to cope with many difficulties, but has succeeded in keeping the confidence of the people. The Cubans are anxiously awaiting the time when they will have their own president, and we expect that one year from now Cuban government will be established. The Platt amendment, if carried out, will be a benefit to Cuba. Senator Platt himself has explained its terms. It will keep Cuba in peace and protect her from foreign nations. The proposed establishment of a coaling station by the United States is satisfactory to the people, who are grateful to this country for its assistance.

"With the acceptance of the amendment in the assemblies, by a vote of 16 to 11, whatever ill-feeling existed was quieted, and the Cubans are satisfied.

"For myself, I never have had any doubt of the good intentions of President McKinley. I have faith in the man and believe he is honest and straightforward and wants to do good for us.

"Many Cuban people, however, not knowing the American nation, supposed the United States is like Spain, which so often broke her promises to Cuba."

Riot in Rio Janeiro.

Rio Janeiro, June 21.—Great indignation and excitement have been aroused here by the charging of an increased fare on the Sao Christovao street railroad. Street cars were burned by rioters Monday night and Tuesday further excitement was fomented by the disgruntled elements of the population. The police and cavalry charged at Ouvidor and in the business district, killing four persons and wounding 20. The disturbances continued yesterday and several were injured, but the excitement is abating. There is no political significance in the rioting.

Official Announcement.

Washington, June 21.—Secretary Root received a letter from Gov.-Gen. Wood containing the official announcement of the adoption of the Platt amendment by the Cuban constitutional convention. Like the constitutions of most of the South American republics, the Cuban constitution has been framed with the constitution of the United States as a model. The adoption of the Platt amendment makes it sufficient for all the purposes of this government in its relations with Cuba.

Not His Sentiments.

London, June 21.—Herbert Asquith, former liberal home secretary, speaking at a liberal dinner last evening, protested against the pro-Boer resolutions adopted at Queen's hall Wednesday evening being accepted as a pronouncement of the liberal party. He declared that Boer independence was impossible and said the liberals favored a free, federated South Africa, on the lines of Canada and Australia.

Portia After the Duke.

No One Was Hurt.

Chihuahua, Mexico, June 21.—There is some truth in the report of an attempt to kill A. R. (Boss) Shepard, formerly of Washington, D. C. Mr. W. W. Mills, United States consul here, says that an angry discharged employe presented a shotgun at Mr. Shepard and threatened to shoot. No one was hurt.

DEATH OF A SOLDIER.

Took a Hearty Meal and Jumped Into the River.

Detroit, Mich., June 21.—Herbert Botzon, aged 29 years, of Company D, Fourteenth infantry, was drowned off Eugene Webber's boat house in Delray. Botzon, who has been a soldier for the past eight years, is from Detroit, his parents residing at 152 Illinois street. Botzon had eaten heartily at supper and decided to take a swim afterward. He was seen to dive into four feet of water by Privates Taylor, Grady and Corporal Zeringer, who were in swimming a block distant. The soldiers mentioned happened to be looking that way and not seeing Botzon come to the surface decided that something was wrong. Zeringer and Grady found the body laying on the bottom of the river. It was pulled ashore and everything possible done. Surgeon Morris said that Botzon had smothered, as there was no water in his lungs. The sudden chill caused by striking the water after a hearty meal caused death.

EMBEZZLER FOUND GUILTY.

Almost Mobbed in the Courtroom at Hart.

Muskegon, Mich., June 21.—It didn't take a jury very long to find Banker Frederick Neilson of Pentwater guilty of embezzlement. The feeling at Hart, where the trial was held, is very bitter against the prisoner, and he was almost mobbed in the courtroom at recess by a crowd of women and children who had their money in the defunct bank. Neilson was a member of the firm of Neilson & Co., which, in connection with the other business, did banking. The firm failed last December and the deposits and savings of hundreds of laborers and farmers were lost in the financial wreck.

The charge of embezzlement was preferred against him by J. E. Peterson, who was induced by Neilson to send to Denmark for $12,000 which he had there and entrust the money to the care of the latter. After the failure Neilson failed to make an accounting of the money.

SETTLEMENT REACHED.

Machinists of Bay City and Saginaw Go to Work Monday.

Bay City, Mich., June 21.—The strike of machinists of Bay City and Saginaw was settled yesterday afternoon as the result of a conference between the manufacturers and representatives of the strikers. The Metal Trades' association of the valley submitted the following proposition: "The Metal Trades' association of the Saginaw valley propose to make an advance to their employes on present wages per hour of 6¼ per cent, nine hours to constitute a day's work; final agreement to be the same as that agreed upon between the National Metal Trades' association and the International Association of Machinists as regards wages and hours."

This proposition was laid before the unions of both cities and approved. The shops here will resume operations next Monday morning. Over 500 men have been affected in Bay City alone by the strike.

A Fire Scare.

Saginaw, Mich., June 21.—The Naegely house laundry burned yesterday morning. It is in the heart of the city and a general alarm was turned in. Quick work by the firemen prevented a disastrous blaze.

Police Officer Killed.

Atlanta, Ga., June 21.—Patrolman E. H. De Bray was shot and instantly killed last night in the west end of this city. His murderer was a negro, who has not been captured. It is believed Officer De Bray was decoyed to his death. One man, a negro named Hammond, who sent the officer to the place where death was dealt him, has been arrested. Hammond told the officer there was trouble at the end of the car line. De Bray found three negroes there apparently in a row. One of the negroes resisted arrest and shot the officer.

Both Governments Satisfied.

Washington, June [illegible].—Minister Visuna of Chile was at the state department yesterday to arrange for the payment of the awards recently made by the United States and Chilean claims commission, amounting to about $28,000 for American citizens and $3,000 for a Chilean citizen. Both governments are well satisfied with the outcome of the commission and the comparatively small amount assessed against each.

Gold from the Klondike.

Seattle, Wash., June 21.—The first gold shipments of the season are now on the way from the Klondike. Sums aggregating $1,500,000 were started from Dawson on June 4 on the river steamers Canadian and Zealandia, according to telegraphic advices received in Skagway. The Zealandia got away from Dawson on June 4 and the Canadian left the same day. Both consignments will probably arrive in Seattle next week.

Gen. Nugent Dead.

New York, June 21.—Gen. Robert Nugent died at his home in Brooklyn last night as a result of a bullet wound in the stomach, received at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862, while he was charging at the head of Meagher's Irish brigade. Gen. Nugent was born in Ireland July 24, 1824, and emigrated to New York when a young man. He was lieutenant-coloned of the Sixty-ninth regiment New York state militia before opening of the civil war.

Difficult Dutch.

The Dutch language is of a good old fashioned tongue. It is so difficult that English speaking people cannot without difficulty acquire it. In fact, some folk say it is more like unto English than it is to German. The Boers in South Africa use the Dutch tongue as it was spoken 200 years ago.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U.S.A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

"In justice to my friend Mr. Brady and myself, I ask that he be required, then, to bring with him the silver topped flask the steward says he has there in his room this very day and explain where he was the morning of the train robbery if not with the robbers."

Stannard snorted derisively, but sent the order as requested, and just as the first call was sounding for tattoo Trooper Hunter, pallid, yet calm and self possessed and decidedly prepossessing, was ushered in and stood patiently at attention.

Stannard looked him carefully over and said, "Did you bring that flask?" to which the soldier calmly replied:

"I did, sir, rather unwillingly."

"Why unwillingly?"

"Because," and here a quiet smile flickered over his face, "it is hardly a part of a private soldier's equipment. But it has only been in my possession a few hours since my joining the regiment, and I've not had time to send it away."

Then Stannard turned in his chair and glared at Brady and Rawson. "Well, what do you wish to ask about this flask?"

Rawson rose deliberately. "First, that it be placed here on the table where all can see it; then that I may be permitted to read this." And he unfolded a newspaper.

Very coolly the soldier stepped forward and handed the handsome toy to Stannard, who gazed admiringly at it and placed it in the full light of the lamps on the table of the commanding officer.

Then, clearing his throat, the lieutenant began:

"Among the passengers arriving in this city from the east today is Lord Lunemouth, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Lancaster. Lord Lunemouth is traveling for his health and has been advised to seek the glorious climate of California, but has met with unpleasant experiences on the way. His train was held up by desperadoes in Wyoming, the passengers were robbed and his personal losses consisted of some $200 in cash, a superb watch and a handsome, silver topped flask, the arms of his noble house engraved on the stopper. The latter he valued as a keepsake. Here follows," said Mr. Rawson, "a description of the arms. Here," said he, lifting the flask, "are the arms and motto of the house of Lancaster, and now perhaps this gentleman, whom I perfectly well remember seeing in very different attire aboard the Pacific express the night of the collision, will explain how he came into possession of the missing flask of Lord Lunemouth?"

Then Mainwaring's face was indeed a sight to see, but the amaze deepened, broadened, almost overmastered him when, with perfect composure, the strange trooper replied:

"With pleasure; though this is not Lord Lunemouth's, but the mate to it. It was given to me by a member of the house of Lancaster months ago. At the time of the train robbery it was not in my possession at all. For further information on that head I must refer you to Major Mainwaring."

"House of Lancaster be blowed!" was that veteran's explosive reply. "It was in my house right here at Ransom at that very time. Say, Rawson, you and Brady haven't had any more sense in this matter than—I have!"

CHAPTER XIV.

A remarkable winter, from a cavalry point of view, was that, the first which the old regiment spent at Ransom, but, like many other things temporal and most things military, it came to an end, and people looking back upon it afterward declared they were rather sorry, after all, for there was so much to make it vividly interesting at the time and to form topics for talk in the weeks to come.

Sensations flattened out lamentably for nearly a fortnight after the quashing of Mainwaring's martial indictment against "the swell of the sorrel troop," as Blake described Hunter, and when they reopened, about the height of the holiday season, other names and households than those herein mentioned were mainly conspicuous, although Blake managed to mix in more than one of them. Between him and Mainwaring was patched a truce, based primarily on the latter's admission that he had probably made a mess of the whole business, but really couldn't be held responsible in the face of such testimony as was offered by prominent officers of the —th, Messrs. Brady and Rawson. Then Blake apologized for comparing the head of the junior major to the wreck of the magazine, and peace with honor, though not without difficulty, was established so far as the men were concerned. It was, in fact, less difficult than in the case of the women, for Miss Leroy had, it seems, a very pretty will of her own that Mrs. Mainwaring could neither bend nor break. Mrs. Mainwaring was of an old and distinguished family, and so was Miss Leroy, and the woman Miss Leroy most seriously affected was Mrs. Blake, nee Bryan, daughter of a rather dissolute old ranchman once well known about Russell. It stung Mrs. Mainwaring that her niece should have, as she said to her and whispered to others, so little pride. The story spread in the regiment through what was whispered, not through what was said, and Miss Leroy, already popular, became a hot favorite forthwith.

She had come to spend the winter, but as soon as the holidays were over and her precious post children had their Christmas tree and other Christmas joys—even before the new year was fairly ushered in—she returned from the morning reading one day and found Mrs. Mainwaring impatiently awaiting her. There were invitations for dinners, etc., extending a week, even ten days, ahead, and Mrs. Mainwaring wished to know which it was her niece's pleasure to accept and was aghast at the reply—any that might be acceptable to aunty up to Jan. 5, none for her after that date, as she would then have to return to New York.

Remonstrance proved utterly useless. The second week in January saw Miss Leroy, accompanied to the station by most of the ladies and a few of their lords, safely aboard the east bound train, with old 783 and Jimmy Long in the lead. There were dozens of the children there to bid her goodby. There were even a number of enlisted men, with whom she warmly shook hands before she took her seat in the roomy Pullman. Captain and Mrs. Blake, her devoted friends, went with her as far as Omaha, where she was to join another party. Mrs. Mainwaring fairly dissolved in tears as they kissed each other goodby, for, after all, Kate was the daughter of a long loved, long lost brother, if she was headstrong and independent and never yet had woman left the dingy precincts of old Ransom so generally and thoroughly esteemed.

But every one wondered for all that—even the many who would not give their thought expression—whether an understanding did not exist, whether she was not going with the expectation of meeting somewhere the remarkable recruit by the name of Hunter, for Hunter had left on a month's furlough just ten days before.

Mrs. Mainwaring declared that Kate's sole reason for going was that she was too conscientious. She found her health restored, no one remembered having heard of it as impaired, and she felt she must return to her kindred in the east and resume her interrupted duties there. But Mrs. Stannard and other wise women well knew that the main reason for her going was that life with Uncle and Aunt Mainwaring was not as peaceful or congenial, despite their pride in and affection for her, as it should have been.

And then there was still another and more vital reason. "Everybody" was talking about her interest in Trooper Hunter and his undoubted admiration for her. But Hunter had had to go back to duty with his troop, had met Miss Leroy only on the long afternoons and evenings when he, with two or three other bluejackets, worked at the festooning and decorating under her active supervision of the post assembly hall. Then he had had an interview with Ray, his captain, that brought matters to a climax. He applied for and received his furlough in the midst of the holidays, left his kit with the first sergeant, his uniform with Murray, the carpenter, and Butte in a snowstorm, the Pullman smoker, and familiar looking tweeds, traveling cap, and ulster, at which Jim Long stared in astonished recognition when as he alighted from his cab at the Junction a swell civilian stepped up and smilingly tendered him a cigar.

Whatever clouds had lowered over the house of Hunter were wafted away the night of that decisive conference of the powers, when Stannard and Truscott demolished the theories of Mainwaring and the aspersions of Brady and company. Even Conway had limped out of his buggy a few days later to say he, too, had been fooled. (He was destined to be fooled still more when a jail delivery turned loose his seven star performers on Christmas eve.) Corporal Croxford and Trooper Elzey still maintained their conviction of Hunter's guilt until Mrs. Merriweather weakened over her husband's death and confirmed his whole confession. The Kid was enjoying a temporary relapse into virtue and was wearing a halo until pay day. Mrs. Merriweather, bailed out by Freeman, was living in temporary retirement in Butte, yet already beginning to "take notice," and all Ransom was wondering what Trooper Hunter had gone on 30 days' furlough for and betting two to one that he never would come back, when he suddenly came.

He had been gone but 20 of the 30 days. He reported in person in the nattiest of fatigue uniforms to Captain Ray just before stable call one sharp, clear January afternoon, and in a brief conversation asked of his captain that he would send to Miss Leroy a little package he had brought with him from the east and was manifestly disappointed when told that she had gone.

Then they probably had not met at all, and Ransom was off the scent again.

Just what might have been the result of this disappointment had matters remained in the usual midwinter plane of monotony cannot be stated. What did happen was a sudden call from the department commander, a sudden demand for a strong escort to accompany him to the hills, despite the biting weather, for sacred Indian lands were being invaded, and only his presence could prevail upon the Sioux to trust the matter of righting the wrong to him and Uncle Sam. Him they trusted readily enough, but shook their shaggy heads at mention of the Great Father. "Let the Gray Fox leave enough soldiers here to drive away the would be miners and prospectors, and they would keep the peace." And so it was ordered. March and April saw the swell trooper deeply interested now, despite longings for news from civilization, in daily contact with and study of these warlike people, learning their uncouth language, buying their furs and beadwork, winning their good will by unexpected gifts and straightforward dealing. May came and trouble. Congress was too busy with other matters to heed the request of the president that the recommendations of the general commanding the department of the frontier be immediately carried out. The horned cattle and other supplies failed to arrive. The Indians said, "Sold again," and scalped an attache of the nearest agency as a hint of what might happen to the agent himself if he didn't expedite those supplies. Mid-May failed to bring the goods, but it brought the grass, and that was enough. Storm signals had been set for a fortnight, yet the tornado burst with sudden and shocking force. Five hundred warriors swooped suddenly into the lower valley of the Ska. Out went every available man from Ransom, Rossiter and Winthrop, and there was war to the knife ere the Gray Fox could interpose.

A "dandy" battalion was that with which Mainwaring danced away that sweet May morning, men and horses the pictures of health and high condition and eager for the field and the fray. Stannard, with his four troops, had marched eastward for the lower valley, but Mainwaring was to hasten to the hills, gather up the little force still in stockade at the nearest agency, then sweep on down to join the others. The telegraph line was repaired to Crested Butte, where the mutiny began, and there came this startling message just in time to meet them:

"Sioux agency reports that Lord Lunemouth and party of friends, 12 in all, including guides, passed up the Ska en route to the northern hills two days before the outbreak. Use all means in your power to find and protect him. Acknowledge receipt and report action."

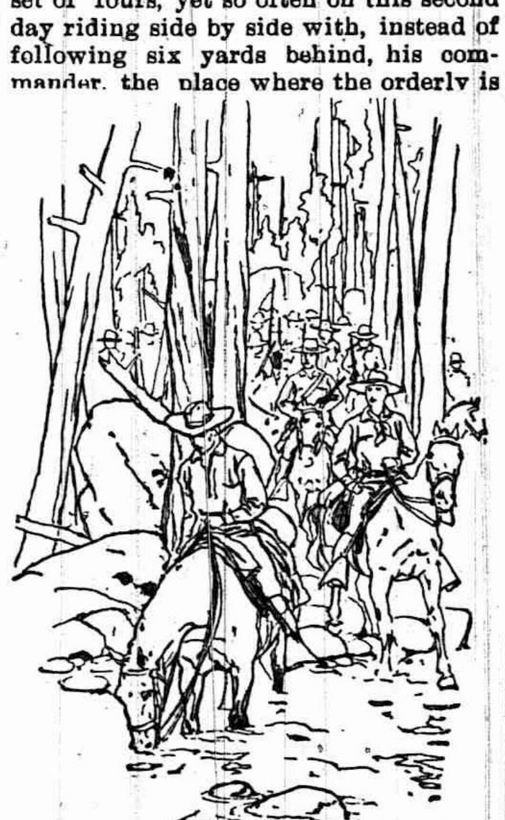
It was forwarded to Mainwaring by Atherton, who said he was coming posthaste to take command in person in that part of the field; meantime to lose not a moment, but to do his best. As usual, the call went out for Ray.

Two days later, away up among the pine crested heights, hot on the trail of a big war party of Indians, the sorrel troop was pushing. Mainwaring, with the three remaining companies, was trotting down into the valley of the North Fork to intercept and beat back further parties should they be tempted to follow their friends in the search for the unsuspecting tourists. Atherton, with the Winthrop battalion at his heels, was coming across country to the support of Mainwaring, while old Stannard, on familiar ground, was rounding up stragglers down the Ska, herding them back to the agency and eagerly watching for the coming of the troops from Rossiter and the big posts away to the north. Then the Indians would be hemmed in.

But meantime what damage might they not do! There were no railways then save the few trunk lines, no means, except by marching, to reach the fabled Indian lands, and Lo was in his glory. Warned of their peril, settlers, herders and stockmen had taken to flight and abandoned the lower valley, so the Indian was riding, proud monarch of all he surveyed, over the broad waste of the lowlands, burning, pillaging and raising, as the newspaper men first on the scene expressed it, "no scalps, but much hell." If only good news could be heard of those tourists, all might yet be well.

But what mad brained trick could have prompted so hazardous a picnic? The agent at Bruce Springs swore he had done his best to dissuade them, but there were three Englishmen who had never seen elk and were possessed with longing to stalk and shoot them. They were lavish with their money. Their interpreters talked directly to some of the old chiefs, Thunder Eagle and Rolling Bear especially, and the presents made these warriors caused the Sioux to clamor for more, but won a lordly permit from the crafty leaders to go shoot what they would—the Sioux wouldn't care—and so led them squarely into the trap. Ray had found the debris of one of their camps toward noon of the second day of his daring march and four hours later as he sped along their northward winding trail he came suddenly upon a deep cleft among the hills, away down in whose depths trickled an ice cold rivulet where the tourists had drunk their fill, then gone on up the opposite heights, and after them, swift pursuing, a formidable war party that had evidently come up this tributary to the Ska hoping here to find and intercept their prey.

Men and horses of Ray's troop both were weary. They drank eagerly, and some eyes, already haggard, looked appealingly at the set face of their captain. Forty-eight hours had they come with but scant halt for rest, and there was hardly a man in the party that could not have slept instantly had he lain down on that soft, inviting turf—all, perhaps, but the indomitable leader and the tall trooper originally of the center set of fours, yet so often on this second day riding side by side with, instead of following six yards behind, his commander, the place where the orderly is supposed to be. Scott, the young lieutenant, who should perhaps have taken exception to such favoritism, seemed to understand and object not at all. "Hunter was up through here last month with surveyor's escort," was the explanation, and, though some men might have growled the information that "other fellers were along, too," no one seemed to object, for the reason that it was thoroughly known that Hunter made topographical notes from day to day and had them with him now, and it was these to which Ray so frequently referred as they hastened on.



They drank eagerly.

Plainly enough had the captain seen the symptoms of growing exhaustion on both his men and mounts—the dark lines under the deep set eyes, the utter silence that prevailed along the dust little company, the painful stumbling of the horses and the constant effort needed to keep closed on the head of column. But he knew his men, and they knew him. It was not the first by many times they had been called upon to ride with life or death the stake. Somewhere, not three hours ahead probably, was a murderous band of Sioux seeking to redress undoubted injuries by the only method the Indian knows—the blood of the pale faced brothers of those that had wrought the wrong.

That these tourists had bought the consent of their chief to hunt, camp and explore through the Indian lands, that they were innocent of wrongdoing, that they despised the robbers of the red man as much as the Indian hated him, had no bearing on the case. These were white men, rashly intruding far within the Brule lines at a time when the Great Spirit, through their medicine men, had sounded the call to battle, and high or low, rich or poor, English or American, man, woman or child, it made no difference. That fated party represented just so many coveted scalps, no more and no less, and if Indian strategy could compass their capture alive or their destruction without the spilling of a drop of Indian blood all the more would their warrior band receive the acclamations of a tribe that worshiped prowess like unto that of the prairie wolf or fleet footed fox. Ninety strong, led by a daring young chief whose father and mother both had died when the soldiers of the long hair dashed upon their village some years before, they had cut loose from all bands around the Ska and hastened in search of the white invaders guaranteed by old Rolling Bear safe conduct not a week before.

And unerringly their instinct led them to the lovely park country on the north side of the hills, for there was noble game in profusion. Thither must the lordly whites have gone, rich in horses, arms, stores and provisions of every kind, and for months the Sioux were starving.

It was the sight of the fresh hoof prints of fourscore ponies that settled all question of rest at the rivulet in the mind of Captain Ray. "Men," said he, "I hate to wear you out, but before another sunrise we must circumvent these fellows, or it's all up with the tourists."

There were Irish troopers in the leading four who loved to talk of the Clanna-Gael and home rule for Erin and death to "England's cruel red" when time hung heavy on their hands in camp or barrack, but that seemed all forgotten now. Like the famous Mavericks, they only talked of mutiny when no other fighting was to be done. Only the horses seemed to groan at the command to mount, and once more on went the sorrels on [illegible]

JOHN ADAMS' WIFE.

A Letter From Abigail Adams—The Vice President's Function.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6, 1797.

Dear Sir—I received your letter of Nov. 24 by the post of yesterday. With respect to the notes you write me about, I wish you to do by them as you would by your own, as I do not want at present either principle or interest. I think it would be most for my interest to do by them as you propose. The method you mention, of adding to the outhouse so as to give me a dairy room, I like very much and would leave it to your judgment. I think it would be best to have it large enough to take of a closet that cold victuals, etc., may not be mixt in with dairy affairs. I should be glad to have it compleated if possible before I return in the spring, but the winter has set in with great violence here, and the rivers are already frozen up, so that I fear we shall not have a chance of getting any cheese here.

Congress are but just getting into business, and the vice president is not yet arrived to sit six months together. Regulating debates, moderating warmth and reading papers is a laborious task and what, I fancy, the present V. P. does not like so well as rocking in his pivot chair or amusing himself with the vibration of a pendilum. I have never yet seen the southern man, Washington excepted, who could bear close application for any length of time. What a ringing would here have been in all the Jacobinical prayers from one end of the United States to the other if somebody else had done so!

We are all well. The cold weather has entirely put a stop to the yellow fever, and no person would now suppose that such a calamity had ever befallen the city. The synod recommended a day of fasting and prayer. The difference between this place and N. England was this: Being recommended by a body of Presbeterian ministers, none of the church clergy would join in it. Every shop in the city was open as usual, and a very small proportion of the inhabitants attended worship. Business and pleasure went on as usual.

Remember me to Mrs. Tufts and all other friends. From your ever affectionate ABIGAIL ADAMS.

THE BRITISH TOURIST.

He Was Pleasantly Surprised by the Train Boy's Attentions.

The British tourist sat in the car and gazed idly across the bleak prairies. He felt a slight touch and, looking around, found that a uniformed youth had deposited several ruddy oranges on the seat.

"He didn't wait for the money," remarked the tourist, gazing from the fruit to the rapidly retreating train boy.

"He never does," said the fellow passenger, with a knowing smile.

"Oh, I see! It is one of the advantages of your great railroad system. Free fruit for its patrons."

The British tourist was just peeling the second orange when a dainty package of chocolate confectionery was deposited on his knee.

"By Jove," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "this is delightful! When I return home, I shall write a paper on the excellence of American travel."

In less than ten minutes he was the recipient of another package. It was a little box containing a black cigar and two matches.

"No wonder you Americans like to travel," he said, biting the bitter end of the cigar. Then he found that a comic publication had found its way to his seat.

"This is great!" he grinned. "I am going to tip the boy. Wait a moment."

The train boy halted, and the tourist held out a dime.

"What is that for?" asked the boy.

"For yourself."

"You owe me a half, mister."

"Owe? I thought you were giving these things away?"

"Not today. The half, please."

"But why don't you take the money when you leave the st[illegible]?"

"Because we'd never sell it."

The tourist reluctantly handed over the coin.

"Going to write about the excellence of American travel?" asked the fellow passenger.

"Not I," responded the British tourist. "I am going home and tell the nation about the train robberies over here!"—Exchange.

Vitality of Hebrews.

If the future population of the earth is to be estimated on the basis of race vitality, then there is no question but that the Hebrews will yet be in the majority. Statistics show that the average longevity of the Hebrew race is greater than that of any other. Their numbers must therefore be increasing relatively to every race, and they certainly are. Whether it is due to the sanitary measures enjoined by their religion or because of native vitality is for students of sociology to decide, but the fact still remains. Yet numbers are not always to control the destiny of the race, and it is to be supposed that fraternity and good sense are slowly wiping out race distinctions.—Boston Globe.

A Humble Apology.

"We feel that an apology is due," explains the editor of the Spiketown Blizzard, "to the estimable young woman who teaches at the schoolhouse in District No. 5. Through the wretched blunder of a worthless tramp printer whom we trusted with the setting up of an item just as we were closing the forms for our last week's edition we were made to say that 'Miss Ruby McConnell, the handsome and popular teacher in Riggs neighborhood, is the proud possessor of an elegant new black beard.' We wrote it 'blackboard.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Wonderful Musical Memory.

Sir John Stainer had a wonderful musical memory. It was put to the test once at the Crystal palace when he had to play the organ in the "Messiah" and a folio copy, on which alone he could see the score, was not forthcoming. The conductor was in despair. Sir John cut the knot by a wonderful tour de force, playing the part faultlessly right through and entirely from memory, probably the only time the "Messiah" has been so rendered.—London Standard.

Story Told by the Bones.

"He was probably a man of means, with a large family of daughters," the irreverent bystander commented as the skeleton was brought to view after having reposed for ages in the vault.

"Why do you think so?" asked one of the scientific persons present.

"Observe the skeleton," he replied. "See how much longer one of his legs was than the other."—Chicago Tribune.

Saves Two from Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by C. A. Wright. An Impartial Woman.

"This is the grave of the most impartial woman on record," said the guide in Cave Hill cemetery to a party who visited the beautiful cemetery the other day. "Away over that second knoll there is a lot containing only two graves, and the headstone of each is marked 'Father.'

"The woman who is buried here was married twice, and the two graves in that lot are the graves of her two husbands. She tried her best to treat her second husband as she did the first, and even when he died she had no idea of showing any preference. But she was sick when the funeral service of her second husband was held. She directed that the partner of her second matrimonial venture be laid by the side of the first, but that enough space be left to bury her between the two.

"By some hook or crook a mistake was made, and when she visited the cemetery she found that they were buried side by side, with no space between.

"Well, sir, she didn't know what to do. She argued that if she should be buried by the side of her first husband it would not be fair to the memory of her last spouse, and vice versa. What did she do? Why, when she died she left a request that she be buried in another lot, away from both of them, and it was heeded."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Translators' Stumbling Blocks.

Some amusing instances of translators' misunderstandings are mentioned by the London Daily News. An Italian paper not long ago turned Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "Absentminded Beggar" into a "Distracted Mendicant." A footnote to the same version explained "son of a Lambeth publican" as a reference to Mr. Kruger! The translator who explains is often lost.

Another Italian editor who translated a passage from an English paper about a man who had killed his wife with a poker added an ingenuous footnote to say, "We do not know with certainty whether this thing 'pokero' be a domestic or surgical instrument."

In the French version of one of Scott's novels a Welsh rabbit has to be dealt with. The translator, never having met with that article of food, naturally turned it into "un lapin de Galles." Unfortunately he had some doubt whether his countrymen would understand this and added a lengthy footnote describing how the peculiarly delicious flavor of the rabbits of Wales created a large demand for them in Scotland, whither they were exported in bulk that would compare with the trade of Ostend.

Browne—No; I'm not. He's an Englishman, and he invariably calls it "'ome."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Forrest R. Dickinson.

Forrest Rose Dickinson was born in Waterloo, Ind., Aug. 30, 1869 and died in Tecumseh Tuesday morning, June 18, 1901, in the thirty-second year of his life. His early years were spent in Waterloo, following various callings, chiefly clerking in stores. In 1891 he removed to Tecumseh, where for five years he was a clerk in the store of Avery & Co. In 1896 he formed a partnership in the meat business with his brother, C. M. Dickinson, which lasted two years. He then went into business for himself. Failing health compelled him to sell out in January of this year. He tried every means to gain restoration of health, but his trouble was too deep seated to yield to remedies and his decline was gradual and sure. He was fully conscious toward the last that he was soon to die and a week before his death he made a clear expression of his readiness to die and that he was at peace with God and man.

Mr. Dickinson was popular in both business and fraternal circles. His business ability and integrity were ever unquestioned. At his death he was a member of the Royal Arcanum and the Masonic order. He was at one time a member of the Sons of Veterans, his father, Simon Z. Dickinson, having served with distinction throughout the Civil war. Ancestors in the direct line served in both the war of 1812 and the war of the revolution.

Mr. Dickinson's personal habits were good. He always prided himself on having never used liquor or tobacco in any form.

Mr. Dickinson married Maggie Montgomery in Franklin township, June 6, 1895. To them were born three children, Clare Leroy, Zorah Rose and Zerah May, the last two being twin girls. The loving wife who ministered to him so faithfully in his last illness and their three little children are left to mourn the loss of husband and father. His aged father and four brothers, Chas. M. and Will S, of this place, Curt, of Hillsdale, and L. B., of Cripple Creek, Col., also survive him.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held yesterday afternoon at 3:30 at the house, conducted by Rev. W. F. Jones. The Masons accompanied the remains to the cemetery and conducted the services there in a beautiful and impressive manner. The pallbearers were Harry Moore, Geo. Fields, Chas. Smith, Frank Nyland, Ben Pulver and O. McBride.

The ordinance committee recommended the adoption of the following ordinance which was passed as follows:

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING TO THE UNITED STATES TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CLEVELAND, OHIO, THE RIGHT TO ERECT POLES AND CONDUCT AND MAINTAIN A TELEPHONE TOLL LINE ON CHICAGO STREET, IN THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN.

The village of Tecumseh ordains: That right, permission and authority is hereby granted to the United States Telephone Company of Cleveland, Ohio, their successors and assigns, to construct and maintain a telephone toll line along and upon Chicago street in said village, from the west line of Adrian street to the east line of Ottawa street, and to erect poles thereon for the use and support of said toll line wires. Said poles to be of sufficient height to clear the telephone poles now occupying said street and also to clear the shade trees on either side of Chicago street. Provided, that all poles shall be placed in a direct east and west line with the poles of the Tecumseh Telephone Company, under the direction of the street committee of said village, and all poles shall be shaved, kept painted and in good repair.

CUT OUT RYE IN WHEAT FIELDS.

Farmers Should do so for Their Own Protection.

The growing of rye in the vicinity of wheat fields has caused no end of trouble in the general markets and among millers and discriminating flour buyers. Wheat mixed with rye is not wanted, and hence it is always docked in price, the financial loss falling most heavily upon the grain grower.

The name Michigan throughout the country has become synonymous with purity. Everybody in this state, including the grain grower, should take a great pride in the present condition, and should do all in his power to help maintain such a reputation.

Rye in the wheat deteriorates the variety by hybridizing, thereby producing a mongrel grain that is neither wheat nor rye and is wanted nowhere in the flour markets.

You cannot do a more profitable piece of work, Mr. Grain Grower, for yourself and for the reputation of Michigan wheat than to go carefully over the wheat fields and cut the rye out perfectly clean. Cut it out!

A Cursing Contest.

A professor of languages some years ago on returning from India remarked upon the paucity of objectionable phrases among the British working classes when compared with the abundance supplied by the orientals of similar rank. To prove this he gives a case which came under his own notice. He had dismissed a manservant for dishonesty, and the next morning at 6 o'clock he sought an interview with his former master. He flourished a carving knife, with which he plainly intended to emphasize his remarks. When he found it impossible to gain admission, he sat under the window, and the "swearing" process began. He cursed the professor along the genealogical tree back to the first ancestor of his race. Then he dwelt upon every detail of his anatomy, from the top of his head to the end of his toes. "For three consecutive hours he sat there and swore," says the professor, "without once repeating a phrase."

While traveling on the underground railway in London a party of workingmen entered the same compartment and interspersed their remarks with the commonest forms of "swearing." The professor politely asked them to desist, whereupon he was told to mind his own —— business. He at once commenced to translate into English some specimens of eastern oaths which he had heard a Calcutta merchant's servant use to a missionary's servant. The men sidled from him as if he had the plague and at the next station sought another compartment.—Liverpool Post.

The Common Frog.

If a traveler were to announce that he had discovered in some remote part of the globe an animal whose tongue was rooted in the front of its mouth, the tip pointing down the throat, and, further, that the creature's manner of breathing was so peculiar that the surest way of suffocating it was to keep its mouth fixed open, there would be some little curiosity about the "find." If the discoverer went on to say that the creature began existence as a fish, breathing by means of gills and having a heart of only two chambers, but had undergone transformation, discarding gills and gradually acquiring lungs, adding a third chamber to its heart, and so in the truest and most literal sense passing from the order of fishes to the order of reptiles, the public might even become excited about this extraordinary animal—until it came out that it was no other than the common or garden frog. Then probably 19 persons out of 20 would instantly cease to take any interest in the subject, if they did not feel some resentment against the man who had contrived to draw their attention for a time to such a common reptile.

The Gain In Going Through College.

The benefit that a man who cares for a college education gets by going to college is a benefit that is already his at the time he graduates. During the four years or three years which he spent at college he made himself a richer man for life. The world is a larger, more varied, more interesting place for him. His life will be a broader, more liberal, more satisfying life than it would have been if he had not spent a few of his best years in contact with the results of high thought and in the daily performance of invigorating intellectual tasks. The ups and downs of the Stock Exchange cannot take away from him what he has thus stored up, nor could the best gifts of the money god have enabled him to purchase, after years spent in relentless pursuit of dollars, that which in the golden days of early manhood he had made his own in the quiet college halls.—Baltimore News.

His Uncertainty.

Farmer Honk—Say, Lem!

Farmer Stackrider—Har?

Farmer Honk—Is that 'ere solemn, spectacled young nephew of yourn that's bein called "doctor" and goes around lookin as wise as a treeful of owls a dentist, a horse physician, a corn curer, a layer on of hands, a presidin elder or just a common doctor that saws bones and kills folks?—Puck.

All Embracing.

"I see that somebody says Edmund Kean, the most famous of English actors, lived to adapt the kind of meat he ate to the part he had to play, choosing pork for tyrants, beef for murderers and mutton for lovers."

"That's a great idea. I suppose when he had to play several parts in one evening he ate hash."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When you can get a hearse at a bargain, drive the bargain.—Chicago News.

ALL IS SELFISHNESS.

The Wise Man's Theory and How It Was Exploded.

"After all," said the wise man, "what is it but selfishness? The optimist who goes through life whistling and singing songs of cheer is not entitled to any special credit, because it is a pleasure to him to be happy. If it didn't make him glad to be happy, he wouldn't be that way. So you see selfishness lies at the bottom of his good cheer.

"Then there is the pessimist. Is he discouraged because he thinks it is his duty to mankind to paint dark pictures? Not at all. His is another clear case of selfishness. He gratifies himself by being unhappy and trying to make others so. Love, too, is selfishness. The maiden doesn't love the man to make him glad. It's her own happiness that she promotes in looking upon him as the noblest work of God. Man's love for woman has back of it the same selfish motive.

"So, too, the philanthropist's love of the world. He loves it and loves to do great things for it because it gives him a satisfaction to know that he is doing well.

"Consider it from whatever standpoint you please, and you must always arrive at the same conclusion. Everything that man does he does selfishly. It is always a case of gratifying his own inclinations. It"—

Just then the wise man turned a somersault and skinned his nose against a water plug. When he got up and looked around, with the look of one who was beginning to remember things that had long been forgotten, his pupil asked:

"Was it selfishness that impelled you to stub your toe? Did you do it because it brought a sense of gratification to your"—

"Say, you confounded idiot," the wise man replied, "you ought to have that grin photographed. It would make a good frontispiece to Darwin's works."—Chicago Herald.

GOT A SENATOR'S HAT.

Actor Crane Appropriated the Headgear of a Kansas Statesman.

Among the stories that are retailed in the cloakroom of the senate when that body is in session at Washington is one of how William H. Crane, the actor, put the finishing touches upon his great character study, "The Senator."

"As you well know," said one of the group, "Crane took his character almost directly from Senator Plumb of Kansas. Crane had just started out with 'The Senator' and had opened in Washington. We had all seen the performance and liked it immensely. But I thought I saw one defect. Crane wore a high silk hat, which was not at all, according to my thinking, in keeping with the imitation of Plumb, who always wore the characteristic broad brimmed hat of the southerner. One evening when Crane, Ingalls, Plumb and myself happened to be dining together I remarked to Crane about the matter of the high hat.

"'You really ought not to wear it, for it is not in keeping with the character,' said I. 'You ought to wear one like Plumb's.'

"Crane did not say much in answer, but when he arose from the table he reached out for Plumb's hat and calmly put it on. Leaving his own hat for Plumb, Crane went off down the street with the old felt affair jammed down over his forehead. The senator was too surprised to offer objection. The next night Crane appeared on the stage with Plumb's hat on his head and thereafter wore it at every performance."—Chicago Chronicle.

Turkish Rhubarb.

Possessing a savor all its own, we come on scores of large cases full of big, irregular blocks of a bright yellow colored root. "Rhubarb," says our guide, indicating it. "Ah! Then it comes from Turkey?" we cry joyfully, glad to display our learning for once, but our friend smiles contemptuously. "There is no such thing as Turkey rhubarb," he says, "and, what is more, there never has been." All the rhubarb of commerce hails from China, reaching us through Russia for the most part, but because in olden days it made its journey by way of Turkey it became known as Turkey rhubarb, and Turkey rhubarb it will remain because of the conservative tendencies of the British public.—Good Words.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Many Times Nothing—Sometimes A Fund of Knowledge.

It's a good old saying, and a true one too, "Know all men by their works." The public have been imposed upon so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation made in Michigan and no imposter can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings emphatic rejoicings and words of praise the like of which has not been equaled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name of Doan is dear to him:

Mr. R. N. Elliott, of 143 High street, Detroit, says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of the rheumatism and the end of the kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension."

Rooted sorrow—An aching tooth.

Value of the Footbath.

To break up a cold which certainly disfigures the face of beauty, as well as a valuable adjunct in the removal of facial eruptions, the nightly footbath is invaluable. The largest sweat glands of the body are located in the palms, armpits and soles of the feet. It is of primary importance that the multitudinous outlets should be unclogged. Where facial eruption exists and the whole attention is devoted toward the care of the face, every pore is active and open to afford the escape of clogging impurities.

This is all wrong. The feet should be made the gateway for the escape of effete deposits. The temperature of the footbath should range from 105 to 110 degrees or as hot as can be endured with comfort. Should there exist chronic profuse and offensive perspiration, add a lump of washing soda to neutralize the acid exudation. The feet should be rubbed briskly to draw the blood down to the extremities. Cool the water before withdrawing the feet, so that they may not become unduly tender. Rub long and thoroughly with a soft towel.

Good pedal circulation is a foe to corns and chilblains. Frequent warm footbaths prevent callouses and make walking a pleasure. For beauty and complexion take extraordinary care of the feet.—Ledger Monthly.

Wit and Wisdom of Children.

One very cold day Tom, in his first trousers, was walking out with his tiny overcoat turned back to its utmost limit. "Tom," said his father, "button your coat." The boy demurred. "Look at mine," added his father. "Yes," said Tom ruefully, "but everybody knows that you wear trousers."

Mamma—Why, Susie, you've offered your butterscotch to everybody but little brother. Why didn't you hand it him? Susie (with innocent candor)—Because, mamma, little brother always takes it.

A Sunday school superintendent who happened to be a dry goods merchant and who was teaching a class of very little tots, asked when he had finished explaining the lesson: "Now, has any one a question to ask?" A very small girl raised her hand. "What is it, Martha?" asked the superintendent. "Why, Mr. Brooks, how much are those little red parasols in your window?" said Martha.

Mary was a very conscientious child. One day she was allowed to go and spend the day with some little cousins about her own age. After taking off her wraps she went to her aunt and said very soberly, "Now, Aunt Cassie, if Sallie and Lizzie are bad today please don't hesitate to punish them because I am here."—Current Literature.

A Large Order.

The man from the country took his green necktie and his best girl into the restaurant, and, like some other men, he was disposed to be facetious at the waiter's expense.

"Waiter," he said, "I want you to bring me a boiled elephant."

"Yessir," replied the waiter, perfectly unmoved.

"And, waiter, bring it on toast."

"Yessir."

Then he stood there like a statue for a minute.

"Well," said the man, "are you not going to bring it?"

"Yessir."

"Why don't you, then?"

"Order is, sir, that we get pay in advance for elephants, sir. Elephant on toast, sir, is £1,500 0s. 2d. If you take it without toast, sir, it is only £1,500, sir."

The waiter did not smile, but the girl did, and the man climbed down.—London Tit-Bits.

A Saving Quality.

Gilbert White, the naturalist, was once a university proctor, and of his performance of the office this anecdote is told: "On his rounds one evening White discovered an undergraduate lying on the ground, sleeping the sleep of intoxication, with his outer garments removed and neatly folded up at his side. The proctor awoke him and sent him to his college with an order to appear the next day for judgment. The culprit turned up in a highly contrite frame of mind. White said to him: 'You deserve an exemplary punishment, but I observed one circumstance which shows you are not wholly degraded. Your clothes were folded up by your side, indicating habits of care and neatness which appear incompatible with habitual degradation. I shall therefore say no more.'"

One Still Nicer.

Mrs. Newma—Oh, I wish you could see Mrs. Winkler's baby. It's perfectly lovely! Such a delicate, sweet little creature as it is! It's a perfect little cherub, with the loveliest eyes, the sweetest little mouth, the cunningest little nose and eyes of heavenly blue. It looks as if it had just dropped from heaven and every tiny feature had been fashioned by the angels.

Mr. Newma—Is it as nice as our baby?

Mrs. Newma—Mercy! No; not half as nice.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Costly Funeral.

The most costly state funeral which has ever taken place was perhaps that of Alexander the Great. A round million was spent in laying Alexander to his rest. The body was placed in a coffin of gold, filled with costly aromatics, and a diadem was placed on the head. The funeral car was embellished with ornaments of pure gold, and its weight was so great that it took 84 mules more than a year to convey it from Babylon to Syria.

Grandpa's Pet.

A little boy was sitting on his grandfather's knee, talking about various things, when grandpapa pulled out his watch.

"Grandpapa, when you die will you leave that watch for me?" said the boy.

"Well, I don't know—yes, I guess I will," retorted the old gentleman.

"Well, grandpapa, how soon are you going to die?"—Columbus Dispatch.

A Tougher Rail.

"Excuse me," said the citizen of the plains, "but didn't we ride you out of this town on a rail some ten years ago?"

"Believe you did," responded the fearless barnstormer.

"Well, look out this time."

"Oh, I am used to traveling by rail."

"That may be, stranger, but we only have barb wire fences out here now."—Philadelphia Record.

Borax Soap.

To make an excellent soap out of the scraps and broken pieces that come from the soap dishes in bedrooms and kitchens, drop them into an old tin can, and when it is full dissolve three ounces of powdered borax in two quarts of warm water, and stir till the soap is melted. When cold, it will form a jelly. This borax soap is excellent for cleaning and does not fade articles washed in it.

Doubled the Fee.

A clergyman who used to be a pastor of a church in Kansas City says that on one occasion he had rather an amusing experience in marrying a young couple in that city.

"The gentleman," said the clergyman, "was a handsome, noble looking young man and the bride to be more than usually beautiful. It was plain to be seen that the prospective groom thought he had secured the one prize in all the matrimonial market and was correspondingly elated.

"Just before the ceremony the gentleman handed me the marriage license to see that it was all right. Inside the license there was a crisp $5 note, placed there as the fee. The couple stood up before the few witnesses in the parlor, the ceremony was gone through with, and they were pronounced husband and wife. The first thing the new husband did was to draw his wife to him and imprint a fond kiss on her sweet lips. It seemed to thrill him with unexpected joy, for, immediately turning to me, he said, 'Parson, I'll be switched if I paid you enough for this job,' and, pulling from his pocket another $5 note, he thrust it into my hands."—Baltimore Sun.

Jefferson as an Inventor.

Mr. Jefferson invented the copying press. He writes to Mr. Madison in 1787: "Having a great desire to have a portable copying machine and having studied over some experiments with the principle of large machines made to apply in the smaller one, I planned one in England and had it made. It answers perfectly. I have set a workman to making them, and they are of such demand that he has his hands full. I send you one. You must expect to make many essays before you succeed perfectly. A soft brush, like a shaving brush, is more successful than a sponge." He also sent a copying press to the Marquis de Lafayette as a present. He invented the revolving chair, now a familiar and necessary article of furniture in all offices and counting rooms. The Federalist newspapers used to call it "Mr. Jefferson's whirligig" and declared that he had devised it "so as to look all ways at once."—Chicago Herald.

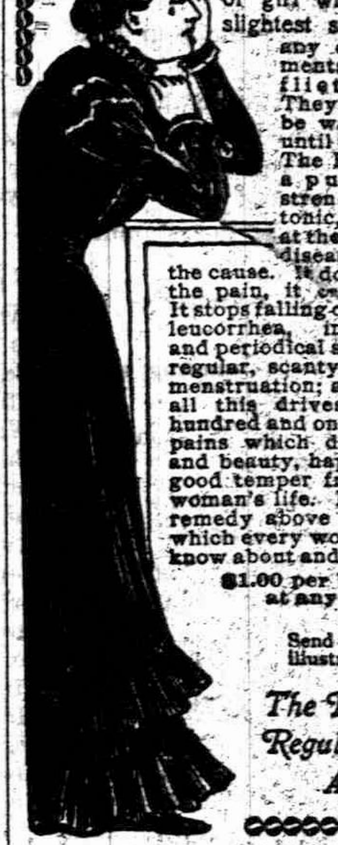
SAPOLIO
LIKE A GOOD TEMPER SHEDS A BRIGHTNESS EVERYWHERE.



If a Woman
wants to put out a fire she doesn't heap on oil and wood. She throws on water, knowing that water quenches fire. When a woman wants to get well from diseases peculiar to her sex, she should not add fuel to the fire already burning her life away. She should not take worthless drugs and potions composed of harmful narcotics and opiates. They do not check the disease—they do not cure it—they simply add fuel to the fire.
Bradfield's Female Regulator should be taken by every woman or girl who has the slightest suspicion of any of the ailments which afflict women. They will simply be wasting time until they take it. The Regulator is a purifying, strengthening tonic, which gets at the roots of the disease and cures the cause. It does not drug the pain, it eradicates it. It stops falling of the womb, leucorrhea, inflammation and periodical suffering, irregular, scanty or painful menstruation; and by doing all this drives away the hundred and one aches and pains which drain health and beauty, happiness and good temper from many a woman's life. It is the one remedy above all others which every woman should know about and use.

THE DEAD CONSUL

Universal Regrests For Young Hay's Death

SECRETARY HAY BROKEN DOWN

Great Regret Expressed at the Untimely Taking Off of the Promising Young Diplomat by All the English Papers.

New Haven, Conn., June 25.—The Hon John Hay, with Mrs. Hay, the Misses Hay, his daughters, and Clarence Hay, his son, left here with the remains of Aledbert S. Hay for New York.

The party occupied two private cars, a drawing-room in which were the family, and a combination buffet parlor car, on the floor of which the casket rested.

There was a solitary spectator to the terrible tragedy, a laborer on the streets. The workman saw the form of a man falling through space. An instant later there was a sickening thud and the body lay directly in front of the main hotel entrance. The horrified laborer rushed to the spot and his shouts brought others. The usual crowd gathered. In it were several belated Yale graduates. They bent over the body. One of them, Julian Mason, of Chicago, and a classmate of young Hay, drew back and, horror-stricken, cried: "My God, its Del Hay."

An examination of the remains disclosed a discoloration of the right forehead, a contusion on the right arm and an abrasion on the right leg. A plain ring worn on the right hand was bent and cut. No ribs were broken and ther was no external fracture of the skull. In the 60 feet flight downward the body escaped striking a balcony one story below and crashed upon the pavement with a force proportionate to the weight of a man of such physique as young Hay.

Adelbert S. Hay was the eldest son of the secretary of state, and was born while the latter was living in Cleveland, O., about 25 years ago. His second name is Stone, which he bears in memory of the late Amasa Stone, the maternal grandsire. He was educated in the private schools of Cleveland and prepared at St. Paul's academy in Concord, N. H., for Yale.

At Yale Hay gave much time to athletics and thus splendidly developed his naturally robust frame, so that he stood at 21, full six feet high, chest and limbs of corresponding proportions.

It was his own impulse that led him to volunteer to go to Pretoria to replace Consul Macrum, and he went to his post and there succeeded in discharging as a simple consul diplomatic duty requiring the exercise of the greatest tact and good judgment.

It had been the proudest recollection of John Hay's life that he had served Abraham Lincoln as his assistant private secretary, so it was to be the lot of Adelbert Hay to serve William McKinley in a like capacity. He had been offered and had accepted the position of assistant secretary to the president, a place now held by Major Pruden.

London, June 25.—People in London are not unmindful that during the early days of the Boer war Adelbert Hay discharged his honorary duties on behalf of the British prisoners in Pretoria with the utmost tact and discretion. It is felt in London that his tragic death closes one of the most promising careers in the American diplomatic service.

The afternoon newspapers voice the sincere regret universally expressed here on the death of Adelbert S. Hay. All the papers refer with emphasis to the debt Britain owed Hay for his many kindly offices.

Serious Accident.

New York, June 25.—When Floyd McFarland of San Jose, Cal., had ridden 13 miles and four laps of a schedule 15-mile motor paced race with Johnnie Nelson of Chicago at the Madison Square Garden last night, he ran into a motor machine which stopped down the incline at the northeast end of the garden, just as it was getting under way to pace one of the contestants. McFarland was thrown from his wheel to the banked track and Nelson, who was following him at a terrific clip, was thrown completely over McFarland. McFarland was picked up bruised and bleeding and was taken to a hospital in a semi-unconscious condition. Nelson was bleeding from a cut in the face, but resumed riding, and after pedalling 14 miles and one lap, which he covered in 27 minutes 42 seconds, he was notified to stop riding and awarded the race.

Studying His Condition.

Berlin, June 25.—Emperor William is now studying the evidence in the preliminary proceedings against Dietrich Wieland, the man who threw a piece of iron at his majesty at Bremen in March last. He is also examining the joint medical opinion regarding the case.

The imperial court at Leipsic probably will pass sentence on Wieland next week. The recent medical opinion tallies with that of the Bremen physicians in declaring Wieland to be an epileptic and that he committed the assault upon the emperor when in an irresponsible condition. No new, vital evidence has been found against the prisoner.

Quick Relief for Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parsons, Kansas, writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar and it has never failed to give immediate relief." J. J. Orr.

The lack of energy you feel, the backache and a run down condition generally, all mean kidney disorder. Foley's Kidney Cure will restore your strength and vigor by making the kidneys well. take no substitute. J. J. Orr.

Cheap Excursions to Lake Chautauqua.

On July 5 the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y will sell excursion tickets to Chautauqua at half rates, good returning for 30 days. These are very popular excursions and afford not only a fine opportunity for visiting Chautauqua but the Pan-American Exposition at a small cost for the side trip. Any desired particulars from agents.

TRAIN WRECKED.

Two Killed and at Least Thirty Injured.

Pittsburg, June 25.—Train No. 23, known as the Cleveland flyer, was wrecked at Monaca, about 30 miles west of here, last evening and at least two persons are dead and probably 30 hurt. The dead are J. W. Cunningham, fireman of the train, lived at McKees Rocks, Pa.; Larry, or Lowry, Black, baggagemaster, of Mount Washington, Pittsburg.

From passengers it is learned that the train, while going at very fast speed, ran into an open switch at Monaca and the entire train went over an embankment some 25 feet high. Every car was turned over, two of them going over twice.

The "flyer," which left here at 4:30 for Cleveland, had its coaches well filled with passengers, and the wonder is that there were not more fatalities.

Fireman Cunningham, when taken from the wreck, was found to be horribly crushed. His death must have been instantaneous.

As soon as the news of the wreck reached the city Supt. Yohe summoned a corps of physicians and took them to the scene on a special relief train. This train returned here with the dead and a number of the injured, when another train was at once dispatched to Monaca, which gives currency to the report that many more are hurt than as yet made known.

Insanity's Deadly Work.

Boston, June 25.—Richard Freedman shot and killed his sister Rosa, aged 21, attempted to kill his sister Helen, aged 17, and then shot and killed himself on a crowded west end thoroughfare here yesterday. Miss Helen was not hit by the bullet intended for her, but just as the pistol was discharged she fell fainting to the sidewalk. It was at first thought she, too, had been killed, and the brother believed his bullet had found its mark, for it was not till both sisters were prostrate that he turned the pistol towards his own body. He aimed at his heart, but the first shot missed a vital spot. A second, however, reached the heart and caused death. Freedman was 25 years old and had just finished a course at Harvard dental college. Insanity, caused by overstudy and illness, is declared to have caused his action.

Show of Strength.

Cincinnati, June 25.—It is quite likely that test of strength will be made between the striking machinists and the manufacturers, whose shops have been idle since May 20. The manufacturers have made their first official deliverance since the strike began, in the form of a public notice that they have decided to open all their shops today in order that every workman may be afforded an opportunity to return to work. They are assured protection. There is no penalty provided for a failure to take up this offer. The machinists declare that they will double their pickets, and if the shops fail to get a working force they hope to receive propositions from the manufacturers for ending the strike.

Important Decision.

Boston, June 25.—Judge Brown of the United States circuit court handed down a decision adverse to the American Bell Telephone Co. in the suit for infringement of patents brought against the National Telephone Manufacturing Co. and the Century Telephone Co. Bills in equity entered by the Bell company are dismissed on the ground that the patent involved in the first case was void, and that effecting the second either was void or so limited as not to be infringed by the defendants. These cases have been pending for six years, having been brought by the Bell company in August, 1895. It is stated that the plaintiff will take appeal from the decrees dismissing the bills.

Drowned While Bathing.

Grafton, W. Va., June 25.—Dr. A. J. Baker, leading physician of this city, and his 8-year-old son were drowned at 5 o'clock last evening while bathing in Valley river, one mile above town. The boy went beyond his depth, and in attempting to rescue him the father was also drowned before help arrived. The bodies when found, one hour and twenty minutes after they sank, were lying within a foot of each other and had floated but a short distance.

Killed Himself.

New York, June 25.—Charles H. Vines, manager of American Trading & Export Co., shot himself in the left breast with a revolver. He died before a doctor could be summoned. Business troubles are thought to have been the cause. He was 40 years old and married. Just before he killed himself he had been dunned for his rent and a butcher's bill.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Some 7,000 Boer invaders are reported raiding around in Cape Colony.

Volcano Kilaua, Hawaii, is emitting smoke, flame and lava again.

Chinese eunuchs have been doing a thriving business in Pekin in selling valuables looted from the Forbidden City.

Kwang Hsü, when he gets back to Pekin in October, will have to spend $250,000 or so in fixing up his palace, repairing the damage done by looters.

In 1876 the United States had 26,000 miles of railways, with gross earnings of $503,000,000. In 1900 the mileage had jumped to 195,000, gross earnings to $1,336,000,000.

New Yorkers object to having an interlake ship canal, constructed by state and congressional aid, because it would make seaports of Chicago and Duluth.

British yeomanry officers are dissatisfied with the new scheme of army reform. One colonel commandant has frankly told Brodrick that his scheme was the most calculated endeavor he had yet known to kill the force. Regular army recruiting continues unsatisfactory, and some additional attractions may have to be offered if its present strength is to be maintained.

Two Deaths from Heat.

Chicago, June 25.—Two deaths and 11 prostrations, of which several are serious, were the result of the heat in Chicago yesterday.

THE LAST RESPECTS

To the Body of Michigan's Great Departed Dead

WILL BE A MONSTER PAGEANT

The Fund Is Approaching $4,000 and the Subscription Books Are Just Being Distributed Among the Merchants and Manufacturers.

Detroit, June 25.—Ten thousand men to march in Hazen S. Pingree's funeral procession. That is a rough estimate made by members of the citizens' procession committee at a meeting held in the city treasurer's office yesterday. It was stated that the funeral will undoubtedly be the largest ever held in the state of Michigan. The parade, according to estimates made, will be about five miles long, while the line of march from the center of the city to the Pingree residence, from there to Elmwood cemetery and then back to town, will cover a distance of nearly ten miles.

With a warm day, the committeemen figured that it will be exceedingly difficult to carry out a march of such an extent. Various suggestions were made for shortening the line of march for most of the participating organizations, by Maj. R. W. Jacklin, Col. Harrah and Strathearn Hendrie, but none were adopted. They will be repeated to Gen. Henry M. Duffield, chief marshal, when he returns from New York the latter part of the week.

As it would be impossible to bring all the marching organizations to the cemetery, Col. Harrah suggested that the parade be disbanded at the hour when the services at the grave might reasonably be supposed to be over.

The formation for a military funeral prescribed in the regular army tactics, which seems to commend itself to the committee, makes this order:

Music, escort, clergy, coffin and pallbearers, mourners, members of former command of deceased, other officers and enlisted men, distinguished persons, delegations, societies, civilians.

About 200 of the Pingree & Smith employes have requested that they be given a position in line near the catafalque.

Detroit post, G. A. R., will probably act as escort for the catafalque carriage, and Pingree & Smith employes will come next in line.

Strathearn Hendrie, lieutenant-commander of the Michigan naval brigade, suggests that if about 10,000 marchers appear a line be formed from the house to the cemetery and that those present simply salute the catafalque and immediate escort as they march slowly by.

Subscriptions to the Pingree memorial fund continue to come in. The citizens' committee is pleased that the amounts are usually small, $1 or less, thus showing that the "common people," for whom the late governor did so much, are conspicuous among the contributors. The fund is approaching $4,000 and the subscription books are just being distributed among the merchants and manufacturers.

HORRIBLE SUSPICION.

Boy Placed Under Arrest for the Death of His Father.

Washington, Mich., June 25.—Carl Bliss, a well-known farmer, not wealthy, but prosperous, disappeared from his home two miles from this village on June 3 last. Monday afternoon his horribly decomposed body was found by a searching party in a piece of thick woods adjoining his own farm. Soon after the body was discovered Deputy Sheriff Frank Wilson placed Homer Bliss, the dead man's son, under arrest. The son, who is suspected of knowing something about his father's death, now occupies a cell in the Macomb county jail at Mt. Clemens.

Blow to Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 25.—It is more than probable that the Peters Lumber & Shingle Co.'s plant, which was destroyed by fire, will not be rebuilt. Recently the state tax commission raised the company's assessment from $30,000 to $150,000, which they claim is exorbitant. The mill was filled with high-priced machinery for planing and joining hardwood and flooring. The loss of the company will reach fully $125,000. Fifteen cars loaded with hardwood lumber, which were standing on the tracks of the Pere Marquette, were also destroyed.

Child Hanged Himself.

Saginaw, Mich., June 25.—Two-year-old Francis Elliott, an inmate of the Home for the Friendless here, hanged himself accidentally. Francis was in a chair operating its movement by a string, also attached to the ceiling. He in some way got the string caught around his neck, and hanged himself as the chair dropped from under him. The other children, unrealizing, watched the little fellow die without giving an alarm. His mother works in the home.

Dr. Ferguson's Body Found.

Manistee, Mich., June 25.—The body of Dr. Ferguson, who was drowned Thursday night, was picked up yesterday near the life-saving station by members of the crew. The dragging of the river had been prosecuted thoroughly, stimulated by the large reward offered, but without success. A diver was also working. Many rumors of a secret flight from the city and foul play which have been circulated are now set at rest by the finding of the body.

Will Think Awhile.

Pontiac, Mich., June 25.—Judge Smith handed a decree in the Durkee divorce suit. Philip Durkee can have a divorce if he will pay his wife $1,100 alimony, $100 attorney fee and costs of suit. He refused and the defendants asked for further time before settling the matter. The case was one of the most bitterly contested in the history of the court.

Mayor Perry Balks.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 25.—In the council last night the resolution was presented and tabled last week asking for the resignation of City Attorney Salsbury was taken from table and when the council voted 11 to 7 to adopt it Mayor Perry declared it lost as it lacked a majority of all the council. Perry made a bitter speech against the resolution, claiming it was a political move.

CUBAN INDEPENDENCE.

Action on Platt Amendment Result of a Compromise.

Havana, June 25.—The republican and national parties have signified their approval of the Platt amendment. The national party takes this action with the understanding that it will later use all possible legal means to effect the repeal of the amendment. Since the amendment was accepted by the Cuban constitutional convention strife has reigned within both parties over a movement that had for its purpose the endorsement of the action of the delegates in accepting it. Juan Gualberto Gomez opposed this movement, and as a result of its ultimate approval by the republican party Gomez has resigned from the party and given up the editorship of La Patria, the party organ.

The vote of the nationalists, by which they approved the Platt amendment, is a compromise. The party explains that it is in favor of the maintenance of order and that it respects the amendment which, owing to the action of the convention, is now Cuban law. The national party will also cooperate towards the establishment of the Cuban republic, but, faithful to its program and revolutionary ideals and understanding that the Platt amendment as declared by the party on solemn occasions curtails Cuban independence and limits Cuban sovereignty, the party will apply all legal means to obtain its repeal. Until this is obtained the party will oppose any interpretation of the amendment tending to pervert the purpose set forth in the amendment by its wording, namely, the maintenance of Cuban independence.

VENGEANCE OF HEAVEN.

Called Down on Officers Who Are Serving Eviction Papers.

Huntington, W. Va., June 25.—Yesterday a posse of deputy United States marshals, led by A. C. Huford of Bluefield were fired on by the strikers and forced to flee from the coal fields at Matewan. Monday afternoon the marshals, under the leadership of A. C. Hufford, set out from Bluefield to reach the scene of the miners' riots. When they arrived within 20 miles of Tracker they found they could not proceed by rail on account of the flood. They struck out across the mountains, encountering almost insurmountable difficulties, and late in the afternoon reached their destination. Proceeding to work, they began serving notices of the injunction which had been issued by Judge Jackson. A mob of strikers followed armed to the teeth with firearms. On all sides could be heard the cry: "Down with government by injunction."

They were threatened with weapons; women called down the vengeance of heaven upon them and children hurled stones. When nightfall came notice had been served on the strikers of all the coal companies but one, and that was to be served at Lick Fork Coal & Coke Co. at Thacker. Fearing an ambush, they waited until morning, and early yesterday set out for Thacker. Sometime before noon they attempted to serve the injunction papers at the above-named colliery. A mob followed, enraged to desperation at the sweeping character of the injunction. One reckless fellow fired the first shot, and quick as lightning the mountain sides echoed and reechoed with resounding reports that followed the crack of 20 or 30 rifles. The deputies were forced to take refuge in flight and then barely escaped with their lives. The strike situation is assuming a frightful stage. Sheriff Paten has withdrawn all his deputies because, it is said, he does not believe in the policy being used to put down the strike. The United States marshals have been left alone, and after being chased from the fields it is believed they will be strongly reinforced and ready to fight when they again appear to enforce the injunction.

After Forty Years.

Chicago, June 25.—After 40 years of service in the Chicago fire department, Wm. H. Musham has become its chief. His promotion from first assistant fire marshal to fire marshal was given him last night when Mayor Harrison sent his name to the council, and his appointment to succeed Denis Swenie was confirmed.

NOT QUITE SO BAD

Reports of Deaths by the Floods Greatly Exaggerated

ONLY SIXTY PEOPLE PERISHED

The Best Information Is That About Sixty Persons Were Drowned and That the Damage Loss Will Not Exceed $500,000.

Roanoke, Va., June 25.—It is now reported that not over 60 persons are missing in the coal fields region as a result of the flood. The town of Keystone, while much damaged, is not wiped out as reported. No estimate of property loss has been made either by coal operators or the railroad officials. The loss, however, is far up in the thousands. No definite news has been received from the coal field, as all wires are still down and there is no means of communication. The estimates that 200 or more lives were lost is certainly too great.

The railroad companies' loss will reach $500,000. Men and material are being hurried to fields from all over the line of the Norfolk & Western.

A telegram dated Ennis, W. V., from General Manager Johnson of the Norfolk & Western railroad says:

"The best information is that about 60 persons were drowned in the north fork of the Elkhorn. Property loss about $300,000. The Norfolk & Western railroad suffered severe damage to its tracks and trestles. Expect to be open for traffic some time Wednesday if we have no more storms."

The following short statement by one of the general officers of the Norfolk & Western railroad, summarizing the flood situation in the light of the latest dispatches, was given to the Associated Press:

"Restoration of telegraph line develops that damage by flood through coal fields was exaggerated. Loss of life will not exceed 60 or 75, and damage to property, including repairs to railroad and coal operations, will not exceed $500,000. It is said the railway will get line opened through today or tomorrow."

Charleston, W. Va., June 25.—Adjt.-Gen. Baker, who resides in Parkersburg, reached the city yesterday and Gov. White reached the city last night from the same place. While there has been no demand made upon them yet for troops either on account of the miners' strike or to prevent looting in the storm-stricken district, they are both considering that emergency may arise. Last evening private secretary to the governor, Gen. E. L. Boggs, left for the Pocahontas district to examine into conditions. Upon the report he makes all will depend. Adjt.-Gen. A. S. Hutson, who has practical charge of the adjutant general's office, also left for the seat of the trouble. An attempt was made to keep quiet the departure of these two officers. It is the general opinion around the state house that the effect of the calamity will be to quiet the miners. It is almost impossible to get communication through from this point. The receipt of a telegram from Gov. Nash of Ohio, offering aid and extending sympathy, was appreciated.

The Other Side.

New York, June 25.—Secretary Devens of the National Metal Trades' association reports the replies to the letter issued by the strike and finance committee. The members, without exception, express a determination to abide by the rules and declaration of principles of the National Metal Trades' association and make no concessions to men on strike. In addition reports from all sections indicate that many of the men are returning to work. Mr. Devens says that in New York and vicinity the reports show that in most all of the shops in which the men have gone out they are gradually returning. They are all working with anywhere from 70 to 80 per cent of their full complement.

General Condition Is Good.

Washington, June 25.—For the first time since she was brought home from California in a very feeble condition, Mrs. McKinley was able to go down stairs and join the president while the latter was at luncheon. She remained at the table for some little time and then returned to her room, having enjoyed the break in the daily routine of life for the past month. Apparently she was not fatigued by the extra exertion. Mrs. McKinley's general condition continues favorable and Dr. Rixey said she was improving steadily.

Gen. Wood Not Well.

Havana, June 25.—The condition of Gen. Wood, who for several days has been suffering from grip and malarial fever, which, however, did not interrupt his official duties, is somewhat worse and his fever is considerably higher and he has been forced to take to his bed. Surgeon Major Howard, the general's attending physician, has advised absolute rest until the fever subsides.

A Sweeping Challenge.

New York, June 25.—Johnnie Nelson has issued a challenge to Harry Elkes for a series of races for the middle distance cycling championship of the world. Nelson asks for five races —20, 25, 30, 50 miles and the hour, and will be willing to add five-mile heats and a 100 kilometre contest to the list.

WAS UP A TREE.

A Well-Known Character Shot and Instantly Killed.

Monroe, Mich., June 25.—William Brackenfelder, alias "Reddy," a notorious local crook, was shot and instantly killed by Jay O. Foster, a well-known young colored man, living just outside the city limits.

Brackenfelder was recently sent to the Jackson prison for five years for highway robbery, but was granted a new trial, returned a few days ago and was released on bail.

The police were given the tip that "Reddy," together with two other well-known characters, were acting in a suspicious manner, and a close watch was kept on their movements until a late hour, when they suddenly disappeared.

Soon after this the Foster family heard a slight noise on the porch roof of their house, and young Foster took a shotgun and stepped to the door, firing at random, it is claimed, with the intention of frightening the intruders away, but Brackenfelder, who was in a tree close to the house, received the full charge in the right side, tearing a large hole and penetrating the lower lung.

The dead man had a bad record, having been twice in the state prison, also serving numerous short sentences in the Monroe county jail, and was looked upon as an all-around bad man. His accomplices have not yet been apprehended.

Foster, who did the shooting, has lived in this city all of his life, and bears an excellent reputation, never having been in trouble of any kind before, and public opinion is decidedly in his favor.

THIS MAN SKIPPED.

Has Two Women on His Hands and They're After Him.

Port Huron, Mich., June 25.—Living in a small but neat house at 608 Superior street is Mrs. Wm. Kurtz No. 1, and living in Canton, O., is Mrs. Kurtz No. 2. William Kurtz, the bigamist and cause of wrecking two women's lives, is still at liberty, although a warrant will be issued for his arrest. Kurtz left his wife and three grown-up children in this city four years ago, and ran away with Mary Hunt, a character. He afterward met the woman who became Mrs. Kurtz No. 2 and married her, representing that his first wife was dead. The two women have been comparing notes for several weeks past, and Kurtz evidently tumbled to the game and has skipped for parts unknown. The Canton wife threatens vengeance on Kurtz, and will spend what little property she has to bring him to justice.

SUSPICIOUS DEATH.

Woman Found Dead With a Bad Wound in Her Forehead.

Wayne, Mich., June 25.—Mrs. Cooper of Perrinsville, six miles from Wayne, was found dead yesterday morning with a scalp wound and an indentation in her forehead. Foul play is suspected. Four doctors will hold a postmortem examination. Janitor Wilson of the county building lives at Livonia Center, and is the woman's uncle. He went out to Perrinsville to visit his niece and then learned of her death. The story that was told him about her death did not satisfy. It was claimed that she fell down stairs and crushed her skull. But Wilson claims she and her husband have quarreled at times, so he went to Sheriff Dickson with his suspicions.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Fisher was sent out at once to investigate. An inquest will be held Wednesday at 4 p. m.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Two Electric Cars Came Together at Muskegon.

Muskegon, Mich., June 25.—A collision which occurred on the Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co.'s street railway line Monday evening at 9:30 p. m. between two cars, seriously injured Motorman H. P. Rhodes and J. D. Sheridan, a passenger.

The two trains were heavily loaded with people on their way to and from Lake Michigan park. The east-bound cars had just stopped to deposit some passengers and the west-bound motorman thought there was a switch ahead and continued at almost full speed. The switch was taken up and consequently the trains came together without any warning. No other casualties have as yet been reported, although the car occupants were badly shaken up.

SHOCKING MATRICIDE.

Woman Killed by an Insane Son Near Wayne.

Wayne, Mich., June 25.—A shocking case of matricide occurred last night, when Mrs. Meggson, living one mile north of the county house, was assaulted by her son and injured to such an extent that she died.

Her slayer, whose name is Rolla Spears, has had insane spells for three years, and it was during one of these that he attacked the woman with a jack-knife. After gashing her face in a brutal manner, he picked her with the knife until her body was a mass of cuts and bruises. She was not found until this morning, when her almost lifeless body was removed to the hospital at Eloise, where she died. Young Spears was found in the woods and returned to the asylum.

RAY'S RECRUIT

BY

CAPT. CHAS. KING, U. S. A.

AUTHOR OF "THE COLONEL'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE RANKS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO.

An hour after nightfall, in the bright light of the climbing moon, they had splashed through another shallow, foaming stream in another and narrower rift among the hills, two veteran sergeants, with Ray and Hunter, well out in front, when just as the foremost, a shadowy form, rode warily to a little point of bluff 300 yards ahead Ray's gauntleted hand swung high his scouting hat in air, as half turning in saddle he signaled "Halt!" for the leader rider was gesticulating wildly, and Sergeant Conners came galloping back.

"Treed 'em, by God, sir!" he cried, in excitement irrepressible. "They've stopped for a scalp dance. You can hear 'em plain."

Yes, faint, but distinct, beating quicker every minute, the weird throb of the war drum could be heard, and with it the shrill whoop and yell of excited dancers.

"Then you're right, Hunter," promptly spoke the captain. "That can mean only one thing. They've located the party over in Keogh's park, just where you said they'd pitch their camp, and these beggars mean to jump them at dawn. We'll show 'em a trick worth ten of that, won't we, Dixie?" he continued, patting the neck of the game little sorrel he rode. "What blessed luck that they should stop to celebrate!"

Slowly, cautiously, the shadowy troop led forward to a grove of pines not far from the water's edge and close to the sheltering bluff beyond which the warriors were having their jollification. There they waited, breathless, the sound of revelry gaining every minute on the night. Taking Conners and Hunter with him, Ray crept forward to reconnoiter—he and his sergeant veterans in the craft, Hunter a novice, whose heart beat wildly, but who never faltered.

Fast and furious drove the dance. Loud and shrill arose the whoops and warcries, dying away at times like the yelp of prairie wolves to faint and distant gurgling, then swelling again like the chorus of hounds in full view of the quarry. Drum, rattle and piercing whistle added to the clamor, echoed back from the dark, pine crested cliffs that overhung this wild nook in the hills. Fresh fagots heaped upon the fire threw the dusky, writhing forms, resplendent in war bonnet and savage finery, into bold relief, and Ray's brave heart almost sank within him as he counted. Ponies they could not see, for they were herded farther up the cove beyond the fire, but every indication pointed to there being well nigh 100 well armed warriors right there within revolver shot, while others doubtless hovered like watchful spies about the unsuspecting camp beyond the range.

"We could never get past them without discovery," muttered the captain finally. "We're far too few to drive them. How far is it back down the valley and around to the park?"

"Not less than 40 miles, sir," answered Hunter, "though it can't be more than six or seven over the old game trail across the range."

"Then," said Ray, "there's nothing for it but to send a brace of men up the heights afoot to warn the camp before daybreak, while the troop hangs on to their heels."

It was barely 9 o'clock now, and high aloft on the northern side of the gorge, glistening white, the cliffs broke through the somber fringe of pine and shone like silver in the moonlight. Somewhere ahead of the watchers in the black depths of the westward end of the deep ravine an old game trail wound and twisted up the mountain side over into the beautiful park beyond. Hunter well remembered and had traced it in his notes. Over this trail Lord Lunemouth's joyous party had evidently gone. Over this the Indian scouts had tracked him. Over this the war party doubtless meant to follow in time to make their dash at daybreak. Over this, neck or nothing, warning must be sent, and the intermediate ground was so completely occupied by the Indians that cavalry could not hope to slip by undetected. It could only be attempted by daring fellows afoot.

And the first man to speak out when in few words Ray explained the situation to the troop was that incorrigible rascal, the Kid: "I'm game to go, sir."

"Good for one," said Ray.

"Here's another, sir." "And here," "And here," came in low tone from half a dozen in the wearied troop, but Ray waited for still another voice, until, half turning, he looked as though inquiringly at Hunter, who had already kicked off his boots and was pulling on a pair of moccasins, drawn from his saddlebags. Then Hunter looked up and spoke.

"I, of course, sir. I'm the only man that knows the way." Whereat Ray's white teeth gleamed in the moonlight and the men knew all was well.

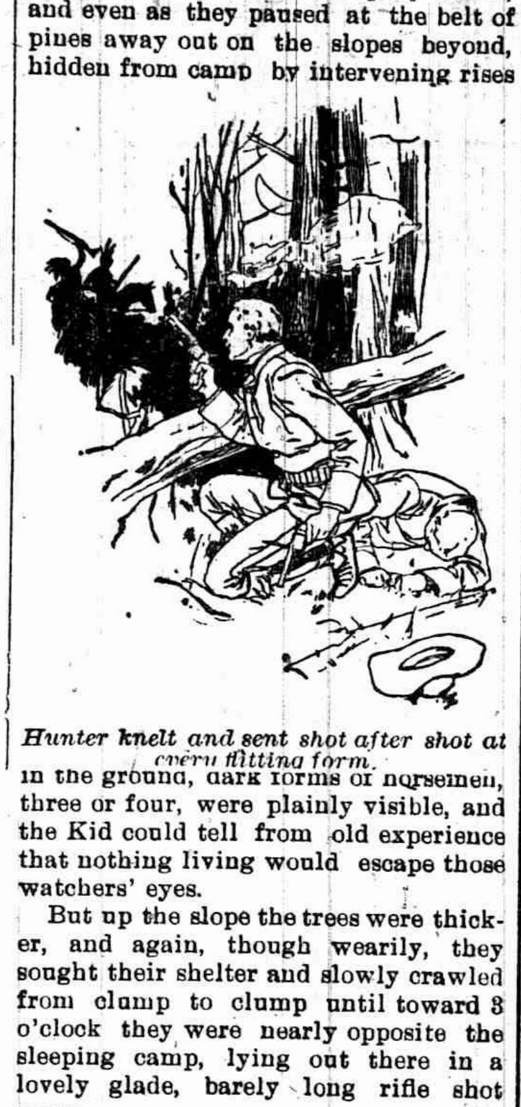
Three hours later a strangely assorted pair, a tall, slender, blond bearded man, with clear cut, handsome features, and an undersized, weazen faced, devil may care Irish lad, dressed alike in dark blue shirts and blouses, in light blue riding breeches and Indian tanned leggings, girt with cartridge belt and revolver, and carrying the brown carbine in hand, halted for breath at the very summit of the divide between Keogh's park and the deep gorge in the southeastward hills. Perilous, indeed, had been their journey. Leaving their comrades well below the position of the Indian camp, they had slowly scaled the cliffs to the north, then crept along among the pines until immediately above the rejoicing Indians, and then, slowly and cautiously through the scattered timber, followed westward by the stars until at last in a depression they came upon the trail, easily recognizable in the occasional patches of moonlight. Then, eager and cautious, they followed up, up the winding way, ever alert for sound of hoof beat, until at last they reached the crest and Hunter's watch proclaimed it midnight.

From a rocky point they could see outspread beneath them to the northward a beautiful park country, faintly pictured in the silvery light, and laying a hand on his companion's sleeve Hunter pointed afar down to their left front.

"The springs lie just south of that high butte," he murmured, "and there we'll find their camp, if only we can dodge the Indian watchers on the way."

Aye, there was the rub, and there was no time to lose. Ever watchful, as before, they began the gradual descent, peering from tree to tree, flitting like shadows from rock to rock, until at last they reached the lower limit of the timber line, and there before them lay an almost open valley, two miles wide, destitute of "cover" except along the stream that nearly equally divided it, and up that stream, perhaps two miles, some white objects gleamed in the moonlight near a clump of trees, and there at Keogh's Springs, just as Hunter had predicted, lay the threatened camp.

But how were they to reach it unobserved, for here and everywhere the Kid could point out fresh pony tracks, and even as they paused at the belt of pines away out on the slopes beyond, hidden from camp by intervening rises in the ground, dark forms of horsemen, three or four, were plainly visible, and the Kid could tell from old experience that nothing living would escape those watchers' eyes.



Hunter knelt and sent shot after shot at every flitting form.

But up the slope the trees were thicker, and again, though wearily, they sought their shelter and slowly crawled from clump to clump until toward 3 o'clock they were nearly opposite the sleeping camp, lying out there in a lovely glade, barely long rifle shot away.

Twice, thrice they had seen an Indian on nimble pony, moving cautiously about, well out of sight of camp. Time and again the coyotes yelped and loud mouthed challenge was bayed by suspicious watchdogs near the tents, but still the Saxons slept, all innocent of danger, and time was getting fearfully short.

"What's to hinder our crawling out as far as we can go, then if we're seen shoot the sucker that tries to stop us and run for it?" muttered the Irishman. "It's the only chance I see."

The moon was well over to the west, but still so high her light betrayed every moving object in the open ground, but, as the Kid explained, there seemed to be no other way. Down went the two flat upon their stomachs, and the slow, tortuous process began. Before they had made 100 yards Celtic patience gave out. "D——d if I can stand this!" said the Irishman. "There's not an Indian in sight now. Come on. Let's run for it."

Suiting action to the word, the little sinner was on his feet and in another minute skimming away like a racer to the goal.

And then as Hunter started to follow he saw a sight that made him thrill with dread. As though they sprang from the bowels of the earth, two Indians on swift ponies darted into view, and, bending low over their chargers' necks, lashing them to mad gallop, they fairly shot across the resounding, turf clad prairie, swift and straight toward the scudding form.

"Look out, Kid! Look out!" rang Hunter's voice in a yell that woke the valley. Bang went the Paddy's ready carbine in reply. Dogs, coyotes, carbines, rifles, Indian yells and Saxon blasphemy burst upon the silence of the night. An Indian pony plunged and tossed his rider sprawling within a dozen yards of where the Kid had turned at bay, and Hunter, rushing to the rescue, had just time to kneel when two or three revolvers seemed to crack at once, and the air was rent with fire flashes. But the soldier's aim was true, and one tall warrior toppled heavily forward and bit the dust as Hunter sped on to his comrade's aid. He found him clasping his hands about his knee and rolling in agony on the turf.

"For the love of God, don't stop!" cried he. "They've smashed my leg, and I'm done for. There's a dozen to one of us." Dozen or not, they were in for it now. Hunter knelt, and, though his heart beat hard, sent shot after shot at every flitting form he saw until, amazed at the vigorous defense, the Indians seemed to haul away. Then up he lifted the protesting Kid and lugged him full another 100 yards before again he had to drop him and fight. Then once more, half lifting, half dragging, he rushed him on, cheered by the evidence that the Indians dared not come too close and that camp was aroused and blazing away. Luckily the guides had quickly realized what was up. Luckily they reasoned that there could be but few Indians in the immediate neighborhood, for out they came—three or four—to the succor of the burdened man and reached him only as, exhausted by his efforts and by loss of blood from a wound hardly noticed when received, he sank, fainting, to the ground, the Kid still pluckily swearing in his arms.

And so, an hour later, when the Indians swooped in force upon the camp, they found it thoroughly prepared, surrounded by hastily constructed rifle pits or breastworks, around which, 500 yards away, they dashed and yelled and kept up their wild fusillade, but both times they strove to charge three or four saddles were emptied by the cool aim of the defense, and then, to cap the climax of their discomfiture, out from the foothills burst their old acquaintance, the sorrel troop, "Laughing Lightning," as once the Cheyennes had named Ray, cheering in the lead. And the warriors broke for cover and kept in cover at respectful distance until Mainwaring himself, a whole day later, with his three comrade troops, came trotting up the valley, and then they disappeared entirely.

But meantime there had been a meeting and recognition little looked for. Four happier Englishmen were never seen than Lunemouth and the trio with him, for no other reason than that for a time their lives had been in mortal peril and they had enjoyed the unlooked for luxury of a square fight. That exultation over, they had had time to thank the American "Tommies" to whose daring they owed it that they were not massacred in their beds. Both troopers were wounded, the little fellow profanely voluble, the tall one strangely silent. Over this latter bent the younger of the first two Englishmen.

"You are not much hurt, I hope, my good fellow? You're— Good God! You—Gray? I vow I heard you were dead!"

A faint smile flitted about the bearded face, and the prostrate soldier winced as he answered, "And you, Rokeby, I heard you were married."

Even when Mainwaring came it was useless to resume trooper relations, for he found Hunter installed in the best cot the tourists owned, the Kid, too, in clover despite the pain of his wound. The doctor said Hunter's hurt would not soon heal, and Lord Lunemouth vowed that both were his guests until they could be safely moved and rather plainly intimated to the major that he considered one particular private at least of more account than the battalion commander, which was subversive of good order and military discipline. Then of course Mainwaring had to hear the truth, already known to Ray and rumored throughout the sorrels, that their swell comrade was even an older friend of these swells from abroad.

"Then where in thunder was it I met you before?" growled Mainwaring in distinct sense of personal injury as he looked down into the placidly smiling face of the wounded trooper, and Blake nearly exploded with delight over the cool response:

"At the armory of my old regiment, when the major was on recruiting service in New York city. I had the honor of being on the reception committee the night of our ball."

"Good God!" said Mainwaring, "and yet you look just like a fellow that deserted from the dragoons!"

• • • • • • •

No, Hunter didn't rise to a commission. There was talk about it, but he had acquired other views. He is said to have remarked that the "N. G. N. Y. would suffice in the future." His wounds proved painful. An honorable discharge was asked for and granted, and there was a big time at the agency when he and the Kid bade goodby to their comrades and were taken back to Ransom in an ambulance, the Kid "rich beyond the dreams of avarice" with the largesse of Lancaster, and Gray parted with only after his promise to spend a month at the ancestral seat that very year.

Later Hunter went east. The Blakes and Rays heard from him frequently for several weeks. He was once more under his uncle's roof, once more in daily company with the bereaved widower, now restored to partial health and unexpected fortune since the tragic death of his wife, but when the hope of the house of Lancaster went back to England, Lunemouth's lung in surprising working order, Gray, who might have gone, declined. The Langdons were still abroad somewhere, and Amy wore no coronet. It had somehow dawned on Rokeby that that coronet was an indispensable adjunct to the engagement, and the glorious climate of California had played havoc with Amy's expectations. There was some society talk of Gray's going in search of that lovely but disappointed damsel, and "No doubt," said he to a serious faced, beautiful eyed young woman with whom he was found limping along the sands one August evening at the seashore, "no doubt I should have gone and been refused again but for just one thing."

"And what was that, pray?" asked Miss Leroy, a quiver about her lips despite her nonchalance of manner, for he had been her shadow since he came.

"This," said he, taking from an inner pocket a worn little glove of undressed kid. "It was dropped by my bedside when I lay in hospital at Ransom. I have been looking, longing, for the hand that lost it ever since."

THE END.

BATH OF THE ORANGE.

The Fruit Needs Much Grooming Before It Is Ready For Market.

Fresh from the tree an orange is still very much alive, with the oil cells expanded and the mystery of growth not yet suspended. Cut off from the sap supply, a change takes place. The skin draws closer to the pulp and gives off moisture that would cause sweating if the fruit were packed at once. But first these dust stained travelers must have a bath.

By the bushel, if only this were the land of the good old bushel basket, the newcomers are dumped into a long, narrow tank of water at one end of which is a big wheel with a tire of soft bristles. The wheel revolves so that the lower edge works in connection with another set of brushes in a smaller tank below, and the oranges, after bobbing about in the big tank, pass between the wet brushes and come out bright and clean.

This washer is a neat machine and does away with the more primitive yet picturesque method of hand washing.

At some of the smaller packing houses may still be seen groups of women, sometimes white, sometimes brown skinned, each with a tub of water and brush, scrubbing busily away at the yellow piles that never seem to grow less till the last hour of the day.

After their bath the oranges are spread out in the sun to dry on long, slanting racks. At the lower end they roll off into boxes, to be carried away to the warehouse for their rest.

An orange needs a deal of grooming, it would seem, before it is ready for market. The washing was not enough. There must be a brushing too. And after the days of curing the oranges are fed into a hopper which drops them single file on to a belt that runs between revolving cylindrical brushes, this for a smooth, shiny look.—Los Angeles Herald

An Educational Mistake.

Whether or not a college education is advantageous depends entirely upon the ability of the recipient to absorb and utilize such an education. Unfortunately such a view of the case is seldom considered by parents and guardians who are inclined to send their children to college simply because it is considered the proper thing to do. Consequently we find throughout the country thousands of young men who have passed through college acting as cheap clerks, bookkeepers or even as car conductors and restaurant waiters. Having learned no mechanical trade for which they may be adapted and being unfitted by nature for a profession, they go through life discontented with their lot and vaguely believing that the world owes them better treatment because they have gone through college.—Los Angeles Times.

The Appeal to the Record.

Little Tommy returned sore and trembling from the torture room.

"Doesn't your papa ever thrash you?" he asked his chum, who is the son of a cabinet minister.

"I should say not!" replied the other loftily. "Every time he threatens to cane me I read him an extract from his great peace at any price speech in which he said: 'These barbarians are like wayward children, but have we on that account the right to take away their heaven sent privilege to do as they please? Let us treat them as we would our own wayward children—plead with them, beseech them, but never coerce them with either gun or rod.'"

"That's a good deal to remember," remarked Tommy.

"Yes, but now he's got so used to it that he drops the cane as soon as I start."—London Answers.

DR. LEE DUNLAP,

A Young Physician of Britton,

DIES IN EMERGENCY HOSPITAL, DETROIT.

An Operation was Performed in Britton, but was Unsuccessful.

Dr. Leland Dunlap, of Britton, died at Emergency hospital early Saturday morning of peritonitis after only a week's illness. On the Saturday before he had played ball at Lake Ridge and on his return was taken violently ill, so that an operation was thought necessary. This proved fruitless and he grew rapidly worse. Sunday he went to the hospital in Detroit and, in spite of all that could be done, death came to his relief Saturday morning.

Dr. Dunlap was a member of the graduating class of '97 of the Michigan College of Medicine and worked in the Emergency hospital as an assistant. Then he moved to Cone and afterward to Britton at both of which places he enjoyed a fine practice. He was only 24 years of age and leaves a wife who was formerly Miss Grace Driggs, of Palmyra, and who is now prostrated with grief. Dr. Dunlap was a very popular young man, not only in Britton, but all through this section.

The deceased was a Royal Arch Mason, a member of the Tecumseh lodge, and the funeral was conducted from the Britton Reformed church Sunday at 2 p. m. by that order. Over 100 Masons from Tecumseh, Adrian, Palmyra, Deerfield and Petersburg were in attendance. The remains were taken to Petersburg and laid at rest near his mother's home. The floral offerings were many and beautiful from many sorrowing relatives and friends.

CHAS. E. JESSUP,

Who Robbed Mrs. Ruth Ayres in Springville, Gets

TEN YEARS AT JACKSON.

The Two Grandsons of the Old Lady Were Before Justice Vandegrift Thursday.

Charles Jessup, who plead guilty to the charge of robbing Mrs. Ruth Ayers, of Springville, in the circuit court recently, after having twice denied the charge, was brought before Judge Chester Friday afternoon and sentenced to ten years at Jackson. Jessup and Sheriff Shepherd passed through here this morning on the Lake Shore, enroute for the former's home for the next ten years.

At the time Jessup pleaded guilty, it is said he implicated two other men in the job, and the Toledo officers, claiming Sheriff Shepherd and Prosecutor Sampson had given the deal away, gave a version of the incidents which led up to the confession and plea of guilty, to the Toledo papers, the detectives there evidently feeling sore because the facts had leaked out. As a matter of fact, the details of the affair were not made public by the Adrian officers, but by an outsider who understood the case, and who is supposed to have done it for revenge. The publication of the names of the men implicated has practically destroyed all hopes of their capture.

Ayers Miller and Fred Jessup, the young grandsons of Mrs. Ayers, who helped themselves to several hundred dollars of her money while she was in Adrian some weeks ago, were before Justice Vandegrift last Thursday, but were not arranged, being discharged after a lecture which they will remember some time to come.

The Great Northwest's First White Child.

One of the most remarkable proofs of the amazing growth of that vast region of our country commonly called the Northwest, with its numerous sisterhood of states and its population of more than seven million people, is the fact that it is only a little more than eighty years since the first white baby was born there. The child was a girl, the daughter of a regular army officer, and she is still living. A facinating account of her eventful life, the early years of which were spent among soldiers and savages, will appear in an early issue of The Ladies' Home Journal.

The Height of the Table.

There was a certain Major X. who had for some years enjoyed the reputation of being one of the wildest men in India. Making a call on one occasion on a mess, he found Captain Z., whom he wanted, out, but the mess waiter assured him that the latter would soon return, wherefore he waited in the anteroom.

A few minutes later the mess sergeant, happening to pass the window, noticed to his surprise that Major X. had passed into the messroom beyond and was applying a tape measure to the mess table. Naturally considering this an odd proceeding, he mentioned it later on in the day to Captain Z., who took counsel and then begged a favor of the colonel, which was to allow an inch to be sawed off the table legs. In due course Major X. was invited to dinner, and the mess was there to a man.

As was expected, during dessert he contrived to lead the conversation on to guessing heights, and from that to offering to bet on the present mahogany was but a step. They took him on, from colonel down to the youngest sub. Even the chaplain could not resist the temptation to chastise the unrighteous and ventured his mite. The challenger bet first, just an eighth of an inch beyond the old height, and then the mess, in rotation, guessed exactly the same, and all guessed exactly right. He was done completely.—London Free Lance.

Miss Caustic Caught.

The wit is more to be dreaded than your worst enemy. Witty people have a way of slapping a title on you which sticks for life. These things bubble up on their lips, and woe to the victim. He or she is ruined and made a public laughing stock. Even your best friend will giggle on the sly. One society girl here, a really nice girl, has the habit, however, of sitting in judgment on the family standing of other people. She will make some disparaging remark and conclude with, "Oh, well, you know and I know they are really not to the manner born."

Now this girl does not come of aristocratic blood on her maternal side. Her ancestors were simple, honest tradesmen who never pretended to style or had any ambition to pose as aristocrats. They were in the shoe business. One day the girl was talking much as usual. The wit, alas, was on deck loaded with back number facts. "Oh," said Miss Critic, with a toss of her head, as she mentioned a debutante, "of course she is not to the manner born. I always like to express myself in quotations."

"So do I," said the wit softly and wickedly. "My favorite is 'let not the shoemaker go beyond his last.'"—Louisville Times.

MARRIED 50 YEARS

Golden Wedding at Coldwater of

DR. AND MRS. FERGUSON,

For Fifteen Years They were Residents Here where They have Many Friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Ferguson, of Coldwater, celebrated their 50th marriage anniversary Saturday by a public reception at their home.

Mr. George Ferguson and Miss Harriet Hendryx were married in Franklin, this county, June 22, 1851. Mr. Ferguson then attended the U. of M., where he graduated in 1854, receiving the degree of M. D. They then settled in Ovid, Branch county, where he practiced medicine until 1854 when they removed to Kansas. In 1860 they returned to Coldwater and entered the drug business, continuing the same until 1870, when he resumed the practice of medicine.

This he continued until 1884 when he and his wife moved to Tecumseh to care for Mrs. Ferguson's aged parents. While here Dr. Ferguson conducted a drug store on East Chicago street and the good couple gained many friends in their fifteen years residence here. In the fall of 1899 they returned to Coldwater where they have since resided.

Three children have come to bless their union, Frank, of Detroit; Judson A., now labor commissioner of the state of Montana; and Mrs. J. S. Evans, of Adrian. Dr. and Mrs. Ferguson are enjoying good health and bid fair to celebrate many anniversaries.

Fred Steinegeweg, a prosperous farmer of Freedom, accidently shot himself yesterday morning from the effects of which he died in a few minutes. He was getting ready to come to town and discovered his shot gun in the buggy where he had placed it the day before. He picked it up by the muzzle and drew it toward him when it caught by the hammer and was discharged, the load striking him just below the heart. He was 58 years old.

John Wisner, the house mover, may some day find that one of his assistants has climbed the golden stair. On Tuesday he notified the electric light plant that he wanted a wire cut on N. State street. The company sent its men to do so. They pulled out the plugs, but before they got around to the place where the wire was to be cut, one of Mr. Wisner's men had cut the wire. If he had done this three minutes sooner a current of 1,000 volts would have passed through his body as soon as his pliers struck the wire. It was a very narrow escape for the man.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Miss Elizabeth Knight Tompkins, the author of "Her Majesty" and other successful stories, writes at length in the July number of The Critic on the Love Letters of Bismark and Victor Hugo. Miss Tompkins has made a special study of love letters, and what she has to say about these particularly famous ones is well worth reading.

Modern Culture Magazine was in advance of all its contemporaries when it presented in its June number a critical paper on "Notable Paintings at the Pan-American Exposition." Following this signal success it gives its readers in July a trilogy of articles of especial interest to Pan-American visitors. "The Pan-American by Day and Night" is contributed by C. Y. Turner, the celebrated New York artist whose fine color sense made him the choice of his brothers of the brush for director of color at the Exposition.

TOOK HIS ADVICE.

A Veterinary Surgeon of Battle Creek Tells About It.

How many times in life a few words of good advice, coming from a friend one can depend upon, will save us hours perhaps months of misery. The following which coming from Battle Creek will interest our readers. Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, veterinary surgeon of that city, a well known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conqueror and the result of a few timely words of advice, he says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of kidney pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, 'You have made a mistake in buying those.' His reply was 'How is that?' I said Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all the others put together. As he wanted my reasons for thinking so I told him that my kidneys had bothered me for years, that I suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are affected, that I had used remedy after remedy including box after box of the one he had just purchased, and that until I used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street when he said: 'Doc, Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. After using the box about which we had a conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment cured me.'"

Time to Leave.

The late D'Oyly Carte always safeguarded himself by refusing to see any one who had not an appointment or stated his or her business on a printed form supplied at his office. Alfred Cellier used to tell a delightful story in this respect. He had a manservant, a Swiss Italian, and one day, having been invited to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Carte on Adelphia terrace and forgotten the time, he sent down his henchman to learn the hour of the repast. This was about 10 in the morning. The day went on, and no emissary appeared till past 5 in the evening, when the henchman crept wearily in.

"Where have you been, you rascal?" asked Cellier indignantly.

"Ah, sare," replied the poor fellow, "I go Mistare Carte. I go in room. A gentleman 'e come and say, 'Vhat name?' I tell him and say, 'I vant see Mistare Carte.' He say, 'All in good time; vait for your name; sit down.' I sit down. Lots gentlemen and ladies. I vait, I vait, I vait. I get ongri and doorsti, but still I vait, I vait, I vait. Den at last I 'ear my name. I go in leetel room. Gentleman 'e say, 'Vat voce?' I say, 'I not know.' 'E say, 'Den vhat come here for?' I say, 'I vant know vhat time Mistare Carte 'ave dinner?' Den 'e svare, and I come 'ome."

MRS. MARY SMITH.

Mary Ann Muir was born in St. Lawrence county, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1821, and died at her home in this village June 17, 1901. She was a daughter of Edward and Louise Muir and came to Michigan with her parents when nine years old.

She was married to Walter Hubbel Smith, of Bridgewater, Mich., Dec. 15, 1847. They came to Clinton the following spring and opened the Smith hotel on Chicago street, which has since been their residence. Three children came to their home, one, Miss Ella, being the only survivor.

Mrs. Smith has for many years been an intense sufferer with consumption from which she was able to obtain only temporary relief. She was a member of St. John's Episcopal church and was a lady of refined character, possessing a practical good judgment which made her more than an ordinary helper to her husband.

Since his death some years ago, she and her daughter have quietly lived alone. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. C. Kemp at her late home June 19th. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

"Henry IX."

It is interesting to recall that, just as Edward VII of England chose his second baptismal name as the one by which he wished to be designated when he mounted the throne, so likewise his great-uncle, William Henry, would have preferred to be known as Henry IX. One of the reasons for this preference was the desire to establish lawful right to a title which had already been arrogated by the cardinal of York, the last of the Stuart pretenders. When the question, however, came up for discussion in the privy council, the latter decided in favor of King William IV. This story was told by the king himself to Miss Helen Lloyd, the governess of his children. He added that the privy council was moved to this choice partly by fear of exciting the superstitious fears of the populace, who still bore in their memory a prophecy dating from the seventeenth century, which runs as follows:

Henry the Eighth pulled down monks and their cells;
Henry the Ninth shall pull down bishops and bells.

One on the Tenant.

Landlord—I just came over to tell you that I've decided to raise your—

Tenant (interrupting) — Well, you needn't bother about it. I've decided to move.

Landlord—Oh, I merely desired to say that I had decided to raise your porch where it seems to sag there at the corner, and also to paper the bedrooms; but, of course, you will not, since you have decided to move, care to hear anything further about my plans. Good day. I hope you'll like it where you're going.—Chicago Herald.

Cycling has its ups and downs. After the downs, use Banner Salve if you're cut or bruised. It heals the hurt quickly. Take no substitutes. J. J. Orr.

Ira D. Rechard, Duncombe, Ia., writes: "My little boy scalded his leg from the knee to the ankle. I used Banner Salve immediately and in three weeks' time it was almost entirely healed. I want to recommend it to every family and advise them to keep Banner Salve on hand, as it is a sure remedy for scalds or any sores." J. J. Orr.

WITHOUT TURNING A HAIR.

A Londoner Calmly Returned Money Given to Him by Mistake.

A gentleman of my acquaintance had a curious experience of manners and customs of modern England a few nights ago at the theater. He had taken four stalls, but at the last moment found two of his party unable to come. On his arrival at the theater he left the two spare tickets at the box office, the clerk promising to sell them if he could and send the cash to him when they were sold. He took his place and soon afterward was gratified to see his two surplus seats occupied. The individuals who took them were attired in evening dress and bore the outward semblance of gentlemen. My friend began to look out for the money which was to come from the box office. Presently a concessionnaire entered, passed down the row of seats and addressed one of the two newcomers. My friend noticed that the commissionnaire passed something to one of the gentlemen, who put it into his pocket without a word.

A sense of uneasiness stole over my friend with regard to the 15 shillings that was due to him, and as the evening was getting on he thought he would go and make an inquiry at the box office. His suspicions were verified. The clerk had sent in the money by a commissionnaire. The commissionnaire was called from the door and on seeing my friend at once realized that he had given the money to the wrong man. He promptly went back to the theater, my friend following to see the fun. The commissionnaire went straight to the party to whom he had handed the money and said, "'Ere, you've got 15 shillings that don't belong to you." The other replied in an unconcerned way, "Oh, yes!" took the money out of his pocket and returned it to the commissionnaire. "He showed no trace of embarrassment," says my friend. "He handed back the money, as he had pocketed it, without turning a hair."

I always like to think the best of people, and possibly this individual, being a stranger to music halls, was under the impression that it is the practice of the proprietors of such establishments to send a commissionnaire around from time to time to distribute cash bonuses among the audience.—London Truth.

PECULIAR NAMES.

The Queer Way Ten Million Children Were Designated.

"In a long experience in the treasury department I have come across a very large number of names, many of which are rather peculiar," explained an old official, "but I think the list of names in connection with the subscription to the 3 per cent bonds surpasses anything in the way of peculiarity that I have ever observed. Of these the one that struck me most was a man who signed himself Ten Million and who resides out in Oregon. We thought the name was an imaginative one and wrote the man that it was desired that the bonds should be registered in real names only, and that no further attention would be paid to his subscription until he was heard from. He replied that his name was Ten Million. His letter was written on the printed letterhead of the firm of Million & Million, two brothers.

"Then followed an explanation that his father and mother were unable to select names for their children that were mutually satisfactory and that as a result, though they had had ten children, none of them was ever christened formally. The first child was a girl, and she was known only as One Million. The second child, also a girl, was known as Two Million. Thus they ran along until Ten Million was reached, and he was the writer of the letter, the other member of the firm being a brother whose only name, as far as the family was concerned, was Seven Million, the seventh child. He added that One Million had afterward called herself Una Million, that the third girl was known after she had grown up as Trio Million. The others had taken on additions to their names, and he had adopted the name of Tenis Million, but his real name was Ten Million and nothing else. The bonds were issued to him and on the books of the department were registered in the name of Ten Million."—Washington Star.

When Matches Were Introduced.

The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan. 10, 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light: "Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker, chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with prepared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, nor does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spoiling the match. But when one is pinched between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood."—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

Her Version of It.

A young girl in a class preparing for admission into the church was asked by the pastor how she ought to obey the fifth commandment, to honor her father and mother. She answered promptly, "I ought to take them out for walks on Sundays, and I ought not to let them see how much more I know than they do." She expressed an opinion probably quite current among young people concerning the preponderance of knowledge in the rising generation.—Congregationalist.

A Happy Foot.

The custom of wishing a friend "a happy foot" is to be found in all parts of Europe, and it goes to show how much superstition is connected with our footgear. It is to be assumed that the well fitting boot or shoe, which enables a person to walk in comfort, is symbolical of happiness.

The accidental placing of the right shoe on the left foot, putting a shoe on awry or the breaking of a lace is a bad sign from the popular point of view. To tie the shoe of another individual is indicative of humility and lowly position, yet the Chinese worship the shoes of an upright judge.

There is a curious superstition in some parts of England which advises that when the youngest daughter marries before her sisters the latter should dance at her wedding without shoes in order to insure husbands for themselves. On St. Valentine's eve, according to a similar custom, girls should hang their shoes outside the window if they wish to secure lovers.

Some actresses carefully preserve the boots they wore when they scored their first success and wear them on all important occasions.

A JOSSHOUSE.

Pen Picture of the One In San Francisco's Chinese Quarter.

In one corner is a miniature wooden warrior, frantically riding a fiery steed toward a joss who stands in his doorway awaiting the rider's coming. A teapot of unique design, filled with fresh tea every day, and a very small cup and saucer are always ready for the warrior. This represents a man killed in battle, whose noble steed, missing his master, refused to eat and so pined away and died. A welcome is assured to them in the better land if the work of man can accomplish it. The horse and rider are to them (the Chinese) what the images of saints are to Christians. In another corner is a tiny bowl of water. The gods occasionally come down and wash. At certain times of the year direct questions are written on slips of paper and put into the hands of one of the greatest josses. These disappear, and then the joss either nods or shakes his head in answer.

On the altar or altars are several brass and copper vessels, in which the worshiper leaves a sandalwood punk burning in such a position that the ashes will fall on the fine sand in the vessel. When one of these is full, it is emptied into an immense bronze vase on the balcony, and this, in turn, is emptied into the ocean. The Chinese take good care of their living and never forget their dead. Once a year, the fourteenth day of the seventh month, they have a solemn ceremony by which they send gold and silver and cloth to the great army of the departed.

A furnace is a necessity in a josshouse. It is lighted on ceremonial days, and paper representing cloth, gold and silver is burned, the ashes of the materials being, in their minds, useful in spirit land. Private families send to their relatives and friends whatever they want by throwing the gold, the silver and the cloth paper, also fruits, into a fire built in the street in front of their houses. The days of worship come on the 1st and 15th of each month.—Modern Culture.

THE TALE OF A TACK.

How an Italian Tenor Was Enabled to Reach High C.

"There was once an Italian tenor at Covent Garden of the name of Tasca, who, I am sorry to say, sang his own praises better than the score," says Mr. William Parry, the stage director at the Metropolitan Opera House.

"For this and other reasons he was strongly disliked by all the workmen. One day he came to me and said, with great show of mystery:

"'Tell me the exact spot.'

"I could not for the life of me understand what he wanted.

"'You know well enough what I mean,' he persisted. 'Show me the spot where Tamberlik sang the high C. There is always one spot on the stage that is better than all the others to stand on when you sing. Where is it?'

"'I'll show you later,' I replied. 'But, remember, never a word. It would cost me my place if it should leak out.'

"Then I drove a brass tack into one of the stage boards, and he was overjoyed when I solemnly pointed out 'the exact spot,' and so were the workmen at the prospect of a joke at his expense. That night he carefully stood on the tack and sang the high C. Rushing into the wings, he exclaimed: 'Beautiful! Wonderful!' Ever afterward, no matter what part of the stage demanded his presence, he would rush to the tack when the time for the high C came and there deliver it."—Saturday Evening Post.

The Doctor's Indiscretion.

"There is no profession which calls for the use of more discretion than the profession of medicine," remarked a well known physician of this city. "Just to give you an instance:

"I came home late one evening after a very busy day and was told by the office boy that a certain Mrs. S. had called me up three times on the telephone. As her young hopeful had scarlet fever and I was afraid he had taken a sudden turn for the worse, I got 'central' to connect me with her house without delay.

"'The missus has gone to bed, sir,' said the voice of a maid in reply, 'but she was so anxious to know if she could wash Tommy's face.'

"I called back that she had better ask the nurse if it was dirty. Now they have another doctor."—New York Mail and Express.

A Sensible Query.

Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett once told a good story about his going to Ireland for the first time. "As soon as I landed in Ireland I attempted to look for traces of some of my ancestors, who came from the extreme north of Ireland. Meeting an intelligent looking Irishman, I informed him of my mission, saying that my ancestors emigrated from about that spot 100 years ago, and I was there trying to look them up. He answered: "Ye say your ancestors emigrated from our town about 100 years ago? Thin why are ye looking for them here?"—London Tit-Bits.

Feelings and Fingers.

A boy was asked which was the greater evil, hurting another's feelings or his finger.

"The feelings," he said.

"Right, my dear child," said the gratified questioner. "But why is it worse to hurt the feelings?"

"Because you can't tie a rag round them."

Stale Candy.

Stale candy can generally be worked over by reboiling it. In the case of acid candies, such as lemon drops, the candy is boiled, the acid is withdrawn by the use of lime or chalk, and the sirup may then be used in the manufacture of that or any other species of candy.

Advice From the Box.

On one occasion in the fifties an amateur dramatic performance was given in San Francisco for the benefit of some deserving charity. Among the performers was the late Hugh Farrar McDermott, the poet, and in a box was Mr. Mills. The play was some classic piece, and the acting was so bad that what should have been a tragedy became a farce. In the last act McDermott dropped his sword and, stooping awkwardly, picked it up. There was a titter in the audience, which increased as the luckless performer asked, "What shall I do with this envenomed blade?" From the banker's box came in a queer stage whisper, "Stab yourself, Hugh, and be done with it!"—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

THE CIRCUS HABIT.

INDIANS HAVE THE WILDEST CRAZE FOR THE TENTED SHOWS.

After the Red Men the Negroes Will Go to the Greatest Lengths to See the Performance, and Third Place Is Held by Chinamen.

"You may talk about your city circus goers," said the old circus man, "but the Indian, the wild, untutored red man of the plains, has got them all beaten to death. There's no circus goer in the world like the North American aborigine. He will travel farther, endure more privations and skimp himself harder to get the price of admission than any other human being in the world. What's more, I believe he really enjoys the circus better than the negro, though he doesn't make any fuss over it.

"The negro, as every circus man knows, will sell the family cook stove to get money to see the elephant, but the Indian will barter off his papoose, his squaw or even his most cherished possession, his horse, to get a ticket. After the negro comes the Chinaman. The Mexicans, too, are not slow in responding to the toot of the calliope. The laziest greaser on the Texas border, who never paid a debt in his life, bobs up promptly on circus day with his 50 cents, though nobody knows where he got it. But the Indian is the greatest circus fiend of all.

"In the west our circus is known among the Indians as 'the heap big brothers' show.' It is the only circus that attracts the red man, and he waits for its yearly appearance as confidently as he awaits the return of spring. In Missoula, Mon., one of our regular stands, fully one-half of the audience is made up of Indians. They come from as far as 200 miles on horseback and even on foot, starting on their long journey days before the circus date and arriving promptly on the morning of the day of exhibition.

"On circus day it is a case of every man for himself with the Indians. The lord of the tepee brings enough trinkets in the shape of moccasins and bows and arrows to peddle around town and in this way gets money for his own admission ticket. His squaw brings willow baskets and has to hustle for her own ticket. They generally come in couples astride of a pony, and if the market is overcrowded with Indian relics they will sell the nag.

"When the show trains arrive in these western towns early in the morning 200 and 300 tents have already been pitched by the Indians, some of which have arrived the night before. Their little colony is almost as interesting as the circus itself. It is a veritable bazaar of relics and papoose exhibitions. While the old squaws are getting breakfast the children are playing games and the chiefs are taking their knickknacks to the market. They are the first ones after the doors of the big tents are opened to land on the blue planks. They fill a good part of the arena, and they never move during the entire performance. Applause is unknown to them. They make as little show of enthusiasm as their brothers in wood in front of the white man's cigar stores. If the trick elephant were to climb the center pole, they would no doubt enjoy the performance, but they would make no more show of surprise than if they were molded from clay. If the performing mule were to walk out on the hippodrome track and make a concert announcement in the Indian tongue, they would only grunt.

"After the show is over the chiefs proceed to fill their skins with the white man's firewater, and the squaws with the papooses wait on the lumber piles till the gray streaks begin to sprout over the hills, when the unsteady train winds out of town over the trail.

"Along the Pacific coast the Chinamen are among the firm friends of the circus people. Like the Indians, they are good patrons of this particular show. In San Francisco at least 50,000 Chinamen saw the circus one season. Some of them came in coaches drawn by handsome horses, and they sat in boxes. Mongolian merchants worth their millions gave matinee parties, the men wearing richly embroidered gowns and the women clad in costly silk cut not in the form of dresses, but as a man wears his broadcloth. At one matinee given in the California city 8,000 Chinese and fully 2,000 Japs attended. The remaining few of the spectators were Americans. The Chinaman is as undemonstrative as the Indian. He expresses his appreciation of the performance by attending time after time.

"Probably the strangest mixture of people that ever attended a circus was found beneath the tent of our show one day at Tucson, A. T., when Indians, Mexicans, greasers, Japs, negroes, Chinamen and a few American cowboys fairly packed the big canvas arena and sat promiscuously mixed over the blue seats. Though the Chinamen and Indians are undemonstrative, the cow punchers, Mexicans and negroes made as much noise that day as was ever made at a frontier massacre. The cowboys yelped like a pack of coyotes when Mme. Noble rode the bucking horse, the Mexicans yelped at every act, and the negroes laughed at the clowns till the earth shook. That night the cowboys and greasers turned the town into a shooting gallery, emptying their revolvers at the stars and manifesting their sorrow at the departure of the circus by licking up all the refreshments in the town.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SPRINKLING WAGONS.

The Modern Ones a Big Improvement on the Old Style.

The modern sprinkling wagon is very different from the old timer. The chief improvement is in the spray head, which enables the driver to control the flow of water much better than the old style. Thus, whether it is a dirt or a macadam road or a stone paved or asphalted street, there can be supplied from the modern street sprinkler just the amount of water required to lay the dust in it without waste.

The spray head on each side has its own valve rod running to the driver's seat, with a step there for the foot. The driver can operate both heads at once, or he can run only one head. He can shut off one or open either one at pleasure. With this sort of wagon the expert driver leaves behind him dry crosswalks with perfectly defined limits, and when he comes to a carriage or a street car upon which he doesn't want to throw water he shuts off the flow on that side and keeps the other going. Sprinkling wagons are made in various sizes, ranging from 150 gallons to 1,000 gallons capacity. There are 20 sprinkling wagons sold in this country nowadays where there were was one sold only a few years ago. This great increase in their use is due in large measure to sanitary reasons, to the great extension of good roads and to the common desire for comfort.

Sprinkling wagons are used nowadays commonly in many smaller towns and villages where they were never thought of some years ago. And American sprinkling wagons are now found all over the world wherever sprinkling wagons are used.

They are exported to Australia, Cuba, Porto Rico, South America, South Africa and Europe. The modern sprinkling wagon that the traveler chances to see in Paris or Berlin or Hamburg came very likely from the same factory as the one he saw here before he left home going through his own home street.—New York Sun.

ANOTHER WASHOUT

LUCKILY NO MORE LIVES LOST

Complete List of Dead Thus Far Foots Up Thirty-Five, and It Is Believed That Many More Bodies Are in the Debris.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 28.—The railroad and wire situation is in good condition considering the second washout of Wednesday night. The laborers, numbering 3,000, repaired all washouts for temporary use as far as Vivian, the point reached Wednesday. The relief train reached Elkhorn and supplies are being furnished the needy. Railroad officials at Bluefields say the road will be opened for traffic on Saturday night. Many destitute families are leaving the field.

The complete list of dead thus far totals up 35, and it is believed that as many more bodies are still in the debris and driftwood.

Roanoke, Va., June 28.—The flood of Wednesday night at Pocahontas did not cause any loss of life so far as is known. Water was three feet deep in some sections of the town. The greatest damage was to railroad tracks.

The storm in Tazewell county seems to have been worse than at first thought. Each day brings meager details of the calamity which has befallen that community. Dry Fork, which has been entirely cut off from outside communication since Saturday, up to this time has added three more victims to the death list. Their names are: Booth, Beavers and Blankenship.

These unfortunate men were at the home of young Booth, a son of one of the drowned men, and were trying to save the household effects when the house was torn suddenly from its foundation and carried down the maddened stream.

The body of Mrs. Hoopes, the section foreman's wife who, with her two children, was drowned at Pounding Mill, was found two miles from her room, lodged in a tree. The body of a Mr. Tate was also recovered.

The Fugate lumber mill and lumber yard, situated on Dismal creek, were swept away.

Numerous estimates have been made as to the amount of damage in Tazewell county to farm hands, mill property, woolen mills, residences, loss of crops and stock, but nothing definite can be determined, as the list of losses is growing. It is estimated at from $125,000 to $700,000.

News reached Tazewell last night of the finding of two unknown dead persons in an enormous drift below Richlands. They are believed to be father and son. When they were found the man was clinging to his dead horse and the boy's arms were twined around the man's body.

Searching parties are at work dragging the river, and other victims may yet be found.

Hoodlumism and Lawlessness.

Washington, June 28.—The attention of the navy department has been formally called to what appears to be an unsatisfactory condition of affairs in Guam. The incoming mail has brought a copy of an order issued by the naval commandant of the island, Commander Seaton Schroeder, denouncing "hoodlumism and lawlessness," which, he says, are rampant at the station. The order refers to "terrorism, theft, gambling and drunkenness, which have brought the United States forces into disrepute." The order closes with the imposition of restrictions on the liberty of the marines.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

Eldorado, Kan., June 28.—Jessie Morrison was found guilty of manslaughter in the second degree for the murder of Mrs. Olin Castle. The penalty is not more than five years or less than three years in the penitentiary.

Miss Morrison's lawyers immediately filed a notice of appeal. Jessie Morrison was taken to her old cell and locked up. There her father, who had been with her, left her. The jury wrangled for nearly 30 hours over the verdict. It is said that one juror held out obstinately for acquittal.

Assessment Authorized.

Washington, June 28.—The executive council of the Federation of Labor has authorized an assessment on affiliated organizations for the purpose of aiding the striking machinists in their contest for a nine-hour day.

A circular letter will be sent out immediately and it is estimated that $50,000 will be secured in response to the first call.

Investigation Asked.

Havana, June 28.—The secretary of the Cardenas Jucaro railroad has asked the courts to investigate an alleged shortage of $103,120 in the company's accounts.

The directors and employes of the road will be summoned before the court and an examination of the company's accounts will be made.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE.

Blackmailers Burn a House and Kill a Woman.

Topeka, Kan., June 28.—Blackmailers, who demanded $5,000 from W. C. Carson, a wealthy Cowley county farmer, and were ignored, fired the Carson homestead while Carson was en route to Oxford for his mail. The house was destroyed and Mrs. Carson was fatally burned.

Carson received an anonymous letter several weeks ago, demanding that he deposit $5,000 at a certain point. He ignored the missive. Later another letter was received stating that should he not comply with the demand his house would be burned and his life taken. This also was ignored. While he was absent from home flames suddenly broke out of the house. Mrs. Carson escaped, but returned to the house for a highly prized violin. While Mrs. Carson searched for the instrument the flames spread rapidly, and when she again reached the open air she was enveloped in flames. Neighbors rushed to her assistance, but she died after several hours' suffering.

No clue has been obtained to the incendiaries.

YALE WON

The 'Varsity Race With Harvard by Less Than a Length.

New London, Conn., June 28.—Yale won the 'varsity race with Harvard by less than a length in the last 100 yards of the four-mile struggle. It was one of the most beautiful contests between the crews of the two universities ever seen on the river. From the sound of the referee's pistol until the finish it was anybody's race. Harvard got the best of the start and were slightly ahead in the first mile, then Yale pulled to the front. Harvard spurted and the boats were even. Then the crimson shell was a bit ahead and at the three-mile mark it seemed as if Harvard would be victorious, but the awful pace was telling on the Cambridge boat. Yale came up alongside again and down the long line, between rows of yachts that flanked the line, it was absolutely an even thing. In the last quarter of a mile Yale hit up the stroke again and 100 yards from the finish the nose of the New Haven shell was poked perceptibly to the front. Harvard was unable to respond again to the frantic call of her coaxwain, and the blue was a winner.

The official time: Yale, 23:37; Harvard, 23:45.

Unusual Action.

Cincinnati, June 28.—The striking machinists are taking a novel course by preparing an application to be presented to Judge Smith of the common pleas court, for an injunction to restrain the manufacturers from interfering with their pickets stationed in the vicinity of shops to persuade workmen from going to work. The position they wish to establish is not their right to enter the premises of the manufacturers, but to hold conversation with whomsoever they choose on the public streets or on property not belonging to the manufacturers. This movement is said to forestall an application by the manufacturers to enjoin the pickets of the strikers.

Union Men Objected.

Newcastle, Pa., June 28.—The city councils of Newcastle have rejected Andrew Carnegie's offer to donate money for a free library. The offer was made by Mr. Carnegie after a request for it. To accept the gift the council was bound to donate $4,000 annually to maintain the library provided $40,000 was received. The union men here objected to taking the money. Councils have from time to time deferred action on the matter, and it now goes by default.

Three Young Men Drowned.

Bowling Green, O., June 28.—Don Harned, Joseph La Farree and Grover Gamphor, three young men living in this vicinity, were drowned Wednesday in the Maumee river near Perrysburg. They were in bathing and stepped into a hole 15 feet deep and perished before aid could be given them by a number of companions.

VERDICT OF MURDER

Coroner's Jury Says Mrs Cooper was Murdered

HUSBAND'S ACTS AT INQUEST

Farmers From Miles Around Attended the Inquest at Perrinsville—Verdict Rendered by the Coroner's Jury Last Night.

Wayne, Mich., June 28.—Wife murder is the charge that George Cooper is likely to have to face. The prosecution declare that Cooper will be taken into custody at the conclusion of the inquest on Amanda Cooper's death. Yesterday morning Justice of the Peace Coates commenced the investigation.

Mrs. Cooper was found dead Sunday morning last, at the foot of her cellar stairs. The neighbors and Mrs. Cooper's relatives utter unhesitating charges against Cooper. He is said to have made threats upon his wife's life. George himself is loud in protesting his innocence.

Startling developments will be brought out by the prosecution. From miles around, farmers left their work to attend the inquest; some came singly, others brought their whole families and turned it into a picnic.

Perrinsville has a population of 100. Several hundred people are gathered there. In the little frame town hall, a mere shed 50 feet long and 30 feet wide, the inquest is being held. On a raised platform at the front side sits the justice, a plain iron-gray man, who feels that he is going through a most momentuous event. Assistant Prosecutor Mandell is conducting the case, and with him are Sheriff Dickson, with deputies Henry Fisher and Fred Hovey of Detroit.

The jury and doctors who made the postmortem and 200 curious country people fill the hall, swelter, flap fans and hats nervously, but in the deepest silence. To admit of a breath of air all the windows have been taken out. Through the openings peer scores of faces.

George Cooper, the suspected husband, was called to the stand first. All the morning he had been blustering about "fools who were trying to ruin me." When Justice Coates called him a farmer went out to find him. He was in Tyle's general store drinking pop. He came swaggering into the hall, smoking a bad cigar. No coat or collar was on him, only a boiled shirt and his best black vest and breeches. He staggered as he stood up to take the oath.

Farmer York, who was the second outsider to reach the scene, declares that the body was stiff and cold and that it must have lain there a long time; yet he arrived within 15 minutes of the time Cooper claims Amanda fell down stairs.

The keg theory of Cooper is said to be impossible. All Mrs. Cooper's bruises and injuries are on her left side. The cellar stairway is very small and a beam runs across overhead, so that one could not fall down without hitting against it. The head has to be ducked to avoid it; another thing, the keg stood on the right-hand side of the landing at the foot of the stairs.

The coroner's jury rendered the following verdict: "Mrs. Amanda Cooper came to her death at the hands of some person unknown to the jury."

Firebug Confessed.

St. Louis, Mich., June 28.—Allen Barton, 19, claiming to hail from Grand Rapids, was arrested on the charge of arson, preferred by Night Watchman Perry. Of late there has been several fires here, supposed to be of incendiary origin. Barton confessed to Officer Perry of setting two of them. After setting the last one in the rear of the feed barn, which is directly across the street from the firemen's hall, he went over and liberated the fire team, but Driver Williams came down the pole in time to catch them before they left the building.

Fatally Burned.

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—Mrs. Anthony Kittle, living on the State road, one mile north of Norris, was badly burned and died Wednesday night. Her clothing caught fire from an explosion of an oil can in the kitchen. Her husband stripped the burning clothes from her and was badly burned in doing so. Mrs. Kittle was 34 years of age and was the mother of five children. The house was set on fire by the burning kerosene and with its contents was destroyed.

By Carbolic Acid.

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—Herman Bauer, a molder, living at 488 Lovett street, drank carbolic acid yesterday afternoon and died shortly after, medical assistance arriving too late to save the man's life.

The deceased had worked for 19 years for the American Car & Foundry Co., but within the past month or six weeks trouble arose with his foreman. Bauer was shifted about in the shop and because of this he brooded.

Last One May Get Out.

Flint, Mich., June 28.—Doc White, the only one of the six alleged blackmailers who is now in jail, has fair prospects of securing temporary liberty. His attorney says $300 has been deposited in a bank at Gibsonburg, O., by White's brother to indemnify a Flint party for signing a bail bond in that sum. He expects to have details completed and White released today.

"Parson" Joe Pope Dead.

Ishpeming, Mich., June 28.—"Parson" Joe Pope, aged 35, one of the best known sports and promoters of wrestling and fighting tournaments in the northwest, died at his home here yesterday of kidney trouble, after two weeks' illness. He is survived by his widow and three children.

"Mysterious Bill" Judson.

Lansing, Mich., June 28.—"Mysterious Bill" Judson has won out in the oil inspectorship fight, a commission reappointing him for the full term of two years from July 1 having been ordered issued by Gov. Bliss last evening. It is understood that in accepting the appointment Judson conceded the right of the governor to name all of the deputies.

Thirty Days in Jail.

Coldwater, Mich., June 28.—Orsemus Bates, a well-known Bethel township farmer, was ordered to pay his wife alimony pending the decision of a divorce case begun by his wife. Bates neglected to carry out the order of the court and he was cited to appear for contempt. Judge Yaple sent him to the county jail for 30 days.

UPRISING IN PHILADELPHIA.

City Administration and State Official Arraigned.

Philadelphia, June 28.—What promises to be a fierce local political war was inaugurated at the Academy of Music last night when 5,000 citizens in town meeting, nominated District Attorney P. F. Rothermell, Jr., to be a candidate for the office of district attorney against the candidacy of John Weaver, who was nominated for that office last week by the republican organization of this city. The speakers of the evening severely arraigned the present city administration and the state officials.

A telegram from Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith was read and was enthusiastically cheered. It was as follows: "Can you use my name as a vice-president? It is time for a new declaration of independence. Philadelphia ought to rise in her might against jobbers in her public rights and the ravishing of her secred safeguards of law."

The principal speech of the evening was that of Col. A. K. McClure, the retired editor of the Philadelphia Times. Mr. McClure did not mince words, and his arraignment of the whole republican organization, both city and state, was extremely severe. District Attorney Rothermel, he said, was nominated by the republican organization three years ago and elected. Now this same organization, controlled by the same men, refuse him another term. They have named a man, he continued, who is untried and an unknown quantity. Mr. Rothermel sent to prison ballot-box thieves, the masters of whom are the political leaders of the city today. He had also made it so uncomfortable for others of the same stripe that they are living in distant lands and cannot come home until Mr. Rothermel was out of office. That is the reason, he said, why Mr. Rothermel was not named.

FIRE AT BUFFALO.

Several Persons Missing and Supposed to be Drowned.

Buffalo, June 28.—Fire broke out yesterday afternoon at the Lehigh Valley freight house, on Buffalo creek, and the building was soon destroyed. It is reported that several men were forced by the flames into the creek and drowned. The only person known to be injured is Louis Cassin, a Canadian.

The steamers Hennepin and Saranac were moored at the freight house. The former was burned and the latter damaged. The men missing and reported drowned were part of the crew of the Hennepin.

Later—One life was lost, several men were more or less seriously burned and property valued at $100,000 was destroyed by fire which totally consumed the west-bound freight house of the Lehigh railroad at Tifft farm. Some of the 270 laborers who were at work tarried in the building too long and were forced to jump from windows into the Blackwell canal. All were rescued excepting Piero Zaizo, an Italian laborer. His body has not been recovered. The steamer Hennepin caught fire and was badly damaged. The damage to the Hennepin will amount to $25,000. The Lehigh Valley freight sheds and contents were valued at about $75,000. The loss is total.

Another Body Found.

Peru, Ind., June 28.—In removing the wreckage at Cass, the scene of the wreck on the Wabash railroad Tuesday night, another body was found yesterday under one of the demolished cars. It was identified as Pascene Manteno, aged 10, daughter of Tense Manteno, who was also killed. Stephen A. Marlato, representative of the Italian consul at Chicago, was here assisting in the identification of the bodies. The dead were buried here in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Kick Against a Boycott.

San Francisco, June 28.—The Restaurant Proprietors' association filed an application for an injunction in the United States circuit court restraining the further boycott of the present San Francisco labor council and others. The restaurant keepers seek the removal of the union pickets of the Cooks and Waiters' union who daily patrol the sidewalks in front of their places of business.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Six persons were badly hurt in the wreck of a street car in Norwalk, O.

Three men are probably suffocated in a fire in a coal mine in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Marquis De Lur Saluces has been convicted of treason and sentenced to five years' exile from France.

Ed. Tibbett, fireman, was fatally hurt, and George Clark, guest, was roasted to death in fire which wiped out Central hotel, Kern, Cal.

Gen. Maximo Gomez is en route from Havana to New York to discuss the Cuban presidency with Thomas E. Palma.

Mark Hanna gives $50,000 to Kenyon college, Cambier, O., to build a dormitory to be known as "Politicians' Barracks."

Heavy seas will make a total wreck of the steamer Lusitania, on a reef off Newfoundland coast. The 500 passengers were mostly Polish and Russian Jews.

Kansans are indignant at the proposal of New York to dump 5,000 of the great city's unemployed into the state. They say they don't need a lot of paupers, having enough of their own.

Milner says that while Cubans in reconcentrado camps in Cuba were allowed to starve and made to go without medical assistance, Boers are housed and fed and doctored in South Africa with only rare exceptions. Milner thinks the struggle is nearly over.

Commissioner Evans says he isn't going to resign from the pension bureau and doesn't know what Dan Sickles means by saying that McKinley promised Sickles last year to appoint somebody else, since Sickles in 1899 warmly indorsed Evans's doings in the pension office.

Metaphor.

The Minneapolis (Kan.) Messenger says: "We once heard Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt eulogize Mrs. Stanton, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Susan B. Anthony as follows: 'These are the women who laid themselves down in the dust, as it were, to form a bridge over which you and I might go dry shod.'

"Once we heard the president of Brown university describe the old charter oak, first as a safety vault, then as a hearthstone, and at last he made a lightning change and brought out the old tree as the rudder to the ship of state. That beat anything we ever heard and the greater surprise, too, coming as it did from such a profound scholar."

ELECTIONS IN CUBA

Laws Being Framed on the Australian Ballot System

COMMENTS ON ANNEXATION

Cubans Will Find Many Obstacles in Their Way When It Comes to Ask for Annexation to the United States —Advised to Go Slow.

Havana, June 28.—The electoral commission appointed by the Cuban constitutional convention to frame laws for the conduct of Cuban elections has completed its work and will probably present its project of electoral law to the convention today. The electoral project provides for universal suffrage and the use of Australian ballot system. One article specifies that the ballots shall be divided into columns corresponding to the number of political parties in the field and that each column shall be distinguished by the mark of party, in order to prevent the deception of voters who can neither read nor write. The project further provides that the electoral boards shall be in the hands of representatives elected by the political parties and presided over by judicial functionaries; it also prohibits the governmental power from intruding in the elections. Sailors and soldiers of the Cuban republic, as well as all men who by virtue of their office bear arms, are prohibited from voting. Of the five members of the electoral commission Senors Silva and Aleman are the only ones who have taken part in the drawing up of the projected electoral law. As these two members of the commission are of the radical element it is probable that the conservatives will attack many features of their project.

La Luca, referring editorially to the annexation movement, warns its agitators to proceed slowly, saying premature action will prove harmful to themselves and that their efforts should be saved for that time in the future when the problem of annexation comes up.

La Lucha says that as a natural outcome of the existing conditions, the United States is determined to establish a republic in Cuba whose only limits shall be the Platt amendment. When Cuba is in possession of its own government, Cuban people will then be able to see whether it is to their advantage to continue as a republic or be annexed to the United States. La Lucha says the United States will make no move in this matter, and if Cuba takes no action concerning annexation until the country is free and independent and decides on its own account to ask for the solution of the problem, annexation will neither be hastened nor delayed thereby. The editorial concludes, saying the matter is more a Cuban than an American problem, as the United States would gain nothing by annexation, and that the Cubans will probably find many obstacles are thrown in their way when it comes to ask that Cuba be annexed to the United States.

FOUR MEN KILLED.

Fell a Distance of Eighty Feet—Two Others May Die.

Buffalo, June 28.—As a result of the breaking of a temporary platform built on a scaffolding inside and bridging the top of a monstrous tank in the eastern elevator yesterday afternoon, six men fell a distance of 80 feet. Four were killed, one instantly, and the others died within a few hours. Another is at the Emergency hospital. He is not expected to live.

The men were structural iron workers and tank builders. They were engaged in building the top of the huge iron tank. The exact cause of the accident in all probability will never be known, as the scaffold and platform lie wrecked and broken into small fragments.

Seventh National Bank Closed.

New York, June 28.—The Seventh National bank of New York closed its doors shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The comptroller of the currency appointed a national bank examiner a temporary receiver and the directors immediately took steps to reorganize the institution.

The failure of the bank was precipitated by the inability of its management, after refusal of the clearing house to come to its aid, to comply with the conditions imposed upon it by the government officials in the comptroller of the currency's department in Washington; also by the enormous withdrawal of funds by country banks which kept their accounts with the Seventh National.

Founder of Dawson City.

Plattsburg, N. Y., June 28.—Joseph Ladue, the founder of Dawson City, in the Klondike, died last evening at his home in Schuyler Falls. Mr. Ladue had not been well since his return from Alaska and spent last winter at Colorado Springs in a vain search for health. He finally fell a victim to consumption. He is survived by a widow and one son.

Deaths from the Heat.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 28.—The extreme heat continued here, the thermometer registering 92. Four deaths resulted and 15 prostrations are reported, two of whom will die. They are Herman Derhart and John Kane. The dead are: Mrs. Elizabeth C. Nebrank, Grovanni Grandinetti, James Sullivan and an unidentified workman.

The Pope Very Ill.

Paris, June 28.—A dispatch to the Petit Bleu from Rome announces the pope to be seriously ill, and says that Dr. Lapponi, his attending physician, does not leave the pontiff's bedside.

Vatican officials are anxious concerning the pope's health.

Seven Years in Bed.

"Will wonders ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but, "three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Rev. Lawrence Sterne Stevens of Pontiac Made Happy.

Pontiac, Mich., June 28.—The June meeting of the ministers of the Detroit diocese, held at Zion Episcopal church in this city, was made the occasion of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Rev. Lawrence Sterne Stevens's ordination. In addition to routine business, the time of the regular diocesan meetings was changed to January, April and September.

Dr. Stevens came to Pontiac in 1881, since which time the parish has grown in strength and influence. Congratulatory resolutions upon the anniversary were reported by a committee of which Rev. W. O. Waters of Detroit was chairman.

SIXTY-MILE STORM

Passed Over Marquette, Killing Chet Michaljohn.

Marquette, Mich., June 28.—A wind storm, blowing at the rate of 60 miles an hour, passed over this city yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, tearing up trees and blowing down fences.

The old rolling mill furnace located at South Marquette was blown down and Chet Michaljohn of New London, Wis., was instantly killed. Six horses housed in the building were also killed. Michaljohn was with a party of gypsy horse traders who were camping south of the city.

It is said that he is the son of a wealthy lumberman and mill owner located at New London. The dead man was about 35 years of age. One thousand dollars will cover the damage done by the storm.

Ex-Governor's Funeral.

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—The board of supervisors yesterday, after receiving a communication from the county auditors stating that they would not stand for the expense to the taxpayers of sending the entire board to New York to meet the remains of ex-Gov. Pingree, decided to send a committee of nine.

Col. Goebel, who has been placed in charge of the military division of the Pingree funeral parade, says that no invitations will be issued to military organizations to participate, but requests that all willing to march apply to him to be assigned a place.

Opening Salute.

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—The national salute, fired from the Fessenden, and 200 taps on the city hall bell, will usher in the bicentenary of Detroit, July 24 at 6 o'clock in the morning.

The committee last night decided upon these little features as the signal for the formal opening of the long anticipated celebration. The Fessenden has been placed at the disposal of the bicentenary committee by Secretary Long of the navy and this will be the first of her duties.

Killed by the Heat.

Dexter, Mich., June 28.—James Shannahan, aged 38, single, a farm hand employed by Lew Boyden, yesterday put out his team, and not coming to dinner search was made and he was found dead on the barn floor. Excessive heat the cause.

Big Mills Burned.

Prescott, Mich., June 28.—McDonald & McLennan's big mills at Shearer were destroyed during the electric storm, together with 800,000 feet of lumber. The mills were formerly owned by Wm. Martin of Benton Harbor. No insurance.

A Thrifty Couple.

Prescott, Mich., June 28.—Smith G. Reid, a colored barber of Logan, aged 60, was married to Miss Edith Emma Daly, a school teacher of Reno, whose aged is about 35. The bride has saved $1,800 from her labors, and the groom is worth about [illegible] in real estate.

Disorder in the Commons.

London, June 28.—After a prolonged debate and considerable disorder, the house of commons in committee, at 2 o'clock this morning, adopted the coal tax by a majority of 86. An unseemly scene occurred when the Irish members accused the chairman of the committee of partisanship in failing to secure a proper hearing for the opponents of the tax.

A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, informed a deputation of unionist members that the government had decided to drop the education bill owing to the congested state of public business and that he would introduce the bill early next year.

Out of His Latitude.

He understood all about the sun and the moon and the stars and something about the weather. Indeed, he was popularly supposed to regulate this last, and his indication of probabilities was received as gospel by his admiring fellow citizens in a certain southern colony of Australia. He went to England for a well earned holiday.

He was shown over a celebrated fruit garden there. He was observed to be sniffing about as if something were wrong. They asked him what was the matter. "Well," he replied, "these funny fellows have trained their peach trees against the south side of the wall to get the midday sun instead of against the north."—London Truth.

A Terrible Explosion

"Of a gasoline stove burned a lady here frightfully," writes N. E. Palmer, of Kirkman, Ia. "The best doctors couldn't heal the running sore that followed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve entirely cured her." Infallible for cuts, corns, sores, boils, bruises, skin diseases and piles. 25c at C. A. Wright's.

Prompt Justice.

In the "History of Beverly," Mass., the following anecdote is related of a good justice of the peace in the old colonial times. On a cold night in winter a traveler called at his house for lodging. The ready hospitality of the justice was about being displayed, when the traveler unluckily uttered a word which his host considered profane.

Upon this he informed his guest that he was a magistrate, pointed out the nature of the offense and explained the necessity of its being expiated by sitting an hour in the stocks.

Remonstrance was unavailing, for custom at that time allowed the magistrate to convict and punish at once, and in this case he acted as accuser, witness, jury, judge and sheriff, all in one.

Cold as it was our worthy justice, aided by his son, conducted the traveler to the place of punishment, an open place near the meeting house where the stocks were placed. Here the traveler was confined in the usual manner, the benevolent executor of the law remaining with him to beguile the time of its tedium by edifying conversation.

At the expiration of the hour he was reconducted to the house and hospitably entertained till the next morning, when the traveler departed with, let us hope, a determination to consider his words more carefully before giving them utterance in the hearing of a conscientious magistrate.

The Professor's Wooing.

The experience known as "popping the question" is the bugbear of every man, however confident of his charms or fluent of speech. Many original ways of asking young women to marry them have been resorted to by bashful men, but perhaps the most brilliant suggestion came to a learned German professor, who, having remained a bachelor till middle life, at last tumbled head over ears in love with a little flaxen haired maiden many years his junior.

One day, after vainly endeavoring to screw his courage to the sticking point, the learned man came upon his Gretchen as she sat alone, darning a stocking, with a huge pile of the family hosiery on the table. The professor aimlessly talked on general topics, wondering how he could lead up to the subject nearest his heart, when all at once a happy thought came to him.

Leaning forward, he put his big hand on the little fist doubled up inside the stocking and said hesitatingly:

"You darn very beautifully, fraulein. Would you like to darn my stockings only?"

Fortunately the fraulein was not so simple as she appeared. She grasped the significance of the question immediately and lost no time in answering, "Yes."—Youth's Companion.

Why Girls Cannot Throw.

A great deal of fun is poked at girls because they cannot throw a stone or a snowball and hit the person or thing they are aiming at. The general idea as to why girls cannot throw as well as boys is that they have not acquired the knack by practice as their brothers have. Another explanation is given by a medical man which tends to show that girls could never learn the knack, however much they tried.

When a boy throws a stone, he crooks his elbow and reaches back with his forearm, and in the act of throwing he works every joint from shoulder to wrist. The girl throws with her whole arm rigid, whereas the boy's arm is relaxed.

The reason of this difference is one of anatomy. The feminine collar bone is longer and is set lower than in the case of a male. The long, crooked, awkward bone interferes with the free use of the arm. This is the reason that girls cannot throw well.

Such Stuff as Dreams Are Made Of.

The materials of dreams may be enumerated as memories of waking sensations, memories of waking thoughts and new sensations received in sleep, whether from without or within. Dr. Gregory mentions of himself that having on one occasion gone to bed with a bottle of hot water at his feet he dreamed of walking up the crater of Mount Etna and feeling the ground warm under him. He had at an early period of his life visited Mount Vesuvius and actually felt a strong sensation of warmth in his feet when walking up the side of the crater, and he had more recently read Brydone's description of Mount Etna.

On another occasion, having thrown off the bedclothes in his sleep, he dreamed of spending a winter at Hudson's bay and of suffering distress from the intense frost. He had been reading a few days before a very particular account of the state of the colonies during winter.—Cassell's Magazine.

Fish and the Alphabet.

Perhaps the funniest thing to be told respecting the antiquity of fishing relates to the holy wars which were waged in ancient Egypt over the finny denizens of the water, the conflicts arising from the circumstance that, as often happened, one tribe would insist with the utmost irreverence upon eating up the fishes which the inhabitants of an adjoining territory held in divine adoration.

The child of today, in learning his alphabet, calls the letters by their names simply because the ancient Phœnicians were pleased to make similar figures the symbols of certain sounds, and it is thought very likely that the Phœnicians have been driven to invent that alphabet by the necessity of corresponding with peoples of various tongues incidentally to the great commerce which grew out of the fishery.

The letter "p" is like a selfish friend, the first in pity, but the last in help.—Chicago News.

"One thousand South — ten hundred South. Get it now?"

"Oh, you mean South one ought, double ought. All right."—Chicago Tribune.

AN OFFICIAL MIX UP.

THE STORY OF AN APPOINTMENT TO A JUDGESHIP.

How the Man Slated For Associate Justice of New Mexico's Supreme Court First Got a Surprise and Afterward the Office.

Late in the year 1900 it was decided by the powers in Washington that Mr. Daniel H. McMillan, ex-state senator of New York and for many years general counsel in the city of Buffalo for the Vanderbilt system of railroads, was to be appointed associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico.

This appointment had been urged not only by those who knew Mr. McMillan in the state of New York, but by lawyers of Santa Fe and of other cities in New Mexico who knew of him and desired to see him obtain the place.

Toward the close of 1900, with Governor Otero of the territory, Mr. McMillan was on a Lake Shore train speeding toward Washington. When the train stopped at Painesville, O., newsboys boarded it, and one of them called out: "All about the new supreme court judge of New Mexico. Silas Alexander appointed." The governor of the territory and Mr. McMillan looked at each other, and they bought a paper, and in that paper they read in glaring headlines that Silas Alexander of Santa Fe had received the appointment to the vacant judgeship.

Mr. McMillan the morning of his arrival in the capital went at once to the office of the secretary of war.

"How did it happen I was not appointed?" he asked.

"Why," said Mr. Root, "you are appointed!"

"Why," said Mr. McMillan, "you are mistaken." And he drew from his pocket the Cleveland newspaper of the day before. Secretary Root turned all colors. "This is a mistake," he said; "an absurd, strange mistake, for I have it from the president's own lips, corroborated by Mr. Griggs, attorney general, that your name was sent yesterday to the senate for action and that the recommendation was duly signed by President McKinley."

Then the men went to the state, war and navy building and found Attorney General Griggs.

"But you have been given the appointment," said Mr. Griggs.

"Then what does this newspaper report mean?" was the reply.

The attorney general was dumfounded. "I cannot conceive what it means," he said. He tapped his bell, and when a messenger came in response he requested the attendance of the clerk in confidential relations with him, whose duty it is to fill in upon appointment blanks the names of those who are designed for appointments by the executive.

The clerk appeared. "Mr. Blank," said the attorney general, "find out at once whose name was sent yesterday to the senate with the recommendation by the president that he be appointed associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico."

"I will look," said the clerk. He soon returned with a memorandum slip in his hand.

"Mr. Alexander," he said—"the man from Buffalo."

Then a glimmering of the truth dawned upon the group. "Are you sure," said Attorney General Griggs, "that the name was not McMillan?"

"Certainly," was the reply. "The name was Silas Alexander."

The situation was remarkable, and time was important.

The president of the United States had inadvertently, by the error of a subordinate, been made to set aside the man whom he had intended to name.

There came a pause. Mr. Griggs broke the silence.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "the fat is in the fire, but we must get it out. My subordinate has made this mistake, and I must do my best to get it rectified, and perhaps the fault is partly mine, for I told him to fill in the name of 'the Buffalo man,' and he, probably, seeing the name Alexander and identifying it with the congressman of the same name prominently known in Washington as coming from Buffalo, thought that he was to be the appointee."

And so the three men went to the president and explained matters, and as a consequence a messenger, preceded by a telephone message, sped rapidly toward the capitol with instructions to seek immediately the leader of the senate and prevent any action on the mistaken nomination and to make the statement to that leader that it was withdrawn.

The messenger arrived just as the senate was about to take action, and if the telephone had been relied upon the nomination of Silas Alexander would have been confirmed by the United States senate, and the will of the president of the republic would have been defeated.—Saturday Evening Post.

"Sure not. I'm lookin fur work fur me wife."—Philadelphia Record.

Old Gooseberry For New Ships.

It may be ungenerous to dispel a popular delusion, but there is no one among the thousands who witness a ship launch who does not believe that the beautifully garlanded bottle of wine broken against the stem of a ship is anything but the choicest brand of champagne drawn from the admiral's cellar. Whenever a ship is launched in a dockyard, the admiralty generously allow £40 as the cost of the jubilation, and included in this sum of £40 is the item of 3 shillings for wine. Hence it follows that not only is the wine not drawn from the admiral's cellar, but it certainly is not champagne of foreign vintage.—English Navy and Military Record.

TIRED OF THE TRIP.

SO HE GOT OUT OF THE BALLOON BY THE JUMP ROUTE.

And Then When He Told the Englishmen He Met What He Had Done They Considerately Carried Him Off to an Insane Asylum.

"I went up in a balloon once, and I never want to make such a trip again," said Colonel A. Noel Blakeman. "My experience as an aeronaut was in London," he continued, "and it would never have occurred but for a friend I chanced to meet there. He was going to make an ascent, and he persuaded me to accompany him.

"The balloon was a feature of some big exhibition, and every day it was inflated and made an ascent, with four or five passengers, in charge of an experienced aeronaut. There were about five in the party the day I took the trip. We got into the basket, which was boxed in quite high, then let the rope go, and we shot up about 3,000 feet. It was interesting to look down on the world and hear the noises of London streets coming from so far below. The balloon sailed along smoothly, and we drifted for about eight miles.

"It was when we tried to descend that the trouble began. The method was to throw out anchors as the balloon settled toward the earth. The aeronaut said that when one of these anchors caught firmly he would haul the balloon down to the tree in which the anchor was expected to become fastened. This would be done by winding in the rope on a winch in the car. We would be expected to climb out of the balloon into the tree, he said, and he would then take hold of the valve rope and, standing a safe distance away, open the valve, let the gas escape, and the big affair would collapse and sink. He informed us that we must get clear of the sinking folds, as they would come down fast, and if they caught and covered us we would be in an atmosphere of most poisonous gas.

"All this was very interesting, but we did not seem to be making very much progress toward the point where we would have to look out for the descending folds of the collapsing balloon. The anchors caught in a whole lot of trees, but they did not hold. One would get tangled in a tree, and then the balloon would sway far over, tilting the basket in which we were until it seemed that we would be spilled out. Then the anchor would break loose, and we would shoot up again.

"I became very tired of this and told the aeronaut that I thought it was time to bring the voyage to a conclusion. He told me if I did not like it I could jump out. At first I thought he was simply resentful of my remark, but he said he meant what he said.

"'When the car tilts over again, you climb out on the edge,' he said, 'and let go. It will probably be a plowed field underneath us, and you won't get hurt.'

"Well, I did as he suggested. When the anchor caught again, I climbed out and hung to the edge of the car. When I saw that the car was as low as it was likely to get, I let go. I dropped about 12 feet, and, as he expected, a plowed field was below us.

"As soon as I dropped out the balloon, relieved of my weight, shot up in the air again and soared off. I walked to the nearest road and continued along it until I came to an inn.

"I asked the landlord how far it was to London, and he told me it was eight miles. I ordered a carriage to take me there, and while I was waiting the landlord asked me where I had come from.

"I took him to the door of the inn, and, pointing to the balloon, which was then sailing along about a quarter of a mile above the ground, I said, 'I jumped out of that.'

"The man looked at me in alarmed fashion, and after I had returned to the sitting room I noticed that several people peered through the window at me.

"Finally my four wheeler was ready, and I set off for London. After we had driven along for half an hour or so the coachman suddenly turned the horse in through a gate, and we drove into a big courtyard. I yelled to him and asked him what he meant, that I wanted to go straight to London, but he paid no attention and slowly circled the court. When he stopped on the other side, a man wearing glasses stuck his head in the carriage, scrutinizing me closely, pulled back, said something to the coachman, and we drove on to London.

"Finally we reached my lodgings, and when we did so the coachman jumped off the box, ran up the steps and as soon as his knock was answered asked if Mr. Blakeman lived there. The maid was just answering that I did when I reached the top of the steps and collared the fellow.

"'What was that place you drove me into on our way to London?' I asked him.

"'It was a hinsane hasylum, sir,' he replied. 'When you said you had jumped out o' that balloon, we thought you was crazy and maybe you was a escaped patient from the hasylum.'"—Washington Post.

Realized His Own Madness.

"Now you are tired of me and abuse me," sobbed the young wife whose husband refused to hire another maid to take care of her pet dog. "Yet," she continued, "not two years ago you were just crazy to marry me."

"Yes," answered the complacent man brute; "my friends told me so at the time, but I didn't realize it until after we were married."—Kansas City Star.

How They Broke Up.

An amusing story is related in "Canadian Savage Folk" of the manner in which an adjournment was taken by a mass meeting. A missionary who had started a school among the Indians met with opposition, and the meeting had been called in support of the rival scheme.

There were several speakers who denounced the school in existence. We replied vigorously, showing the efficiency of the school and denouncing in turn the methods adopted by the opposition. An Indian chief produced some specimens of work done at the school, and several speakers supported the work as it was being done. The climax was reached when a gentleman rose and said:

"I move the whole thing bust!"

The chairman put the motion.

"It is moved and seconded that the whole thing bust!"

The audience sprang to their feet and, waving hats, yelled "Busted!" and made for the door. Thus ended the first and last opposition in that matter.

What Might Have Happened.

A sporty young gentleman of the city who drives a dainty runabout which is the envy of the other young men of his set was driving down Main street the other day when he nearly ran over a six foot countryman. The countryman caught the bit and sat the horse upon its haunches without apparent effort and then complacently remarked to the driver:

"Sonny, you had better be careful how you drive that doll buggy of your'n. If I hadn't collared this here horse, you would 'a' run that thing into me and smashed it all to kindling."

PULVER-RUTHRUFF.

The Marriage of One of Our Popular Young Ladies,

MISS LULU PULVER AND MR. CHARLES RUTHRUFF,

Of Willis, Mich., Solemnized at High Noon Wednesday.

One of the most important weddings of the summer occurred at the home of Mrs. S. E. Pulver Wednesday at high noon when her daughter, Miss Lulu Pulver, became the wife of Charles Ruthruff. The house was tastfully decorated with roses, both pink and white, for the occasion.

To the strains of the pretty wedding march, rendered by Mrs. Ella Hodges, the bridal couple went into the parlor, preceded by Rev. Bower, who performed the ceremony, using the ring service. The bride was handsomely gowned in white organdie with white applique and white satin ribbon, carrying white roses.

After the ceremony, the wedding luncheon was served by the Misses Edith Cotton, Ella and Florence Primrose, Louie Walker, Anna Gambell and Katherine Dryden.

The bride is one of Tecumseh's most popular young ladies and highly respected by all who knew her. She has been a teacher in our schools since she has resided here. The groom is a respected citizen of Willis and is the proprietor of a large creamery establishment.

The bride and groom received many presents, among them being a check for $25.00 from the former's brother Ben.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruthruff left for their home at Willis that afternoon, taking the train at Holloway, where they were followed by a number of the guests who showered them with rice.

Among the guests from out of town were: The Misses Vera Cochrane and Gertrude Bangs, Mr. and Mrs. James Cochrane, Mr. and Mrs. Worden, Mrs. Bartlett, of Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ruthruff and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Jewett Ammerman, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ammerman, Misses Ola and Hattie Ruthruff, of Ypsilanti; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Stearns, two daughters Helen and Caroline, of Somerset; Mrs. Payne, of Napoleon; Misses Minnie Wiggins, Katherine Dryden, of Adrian, and Miss Russ, of Adrian college.

Meeting of the Supervisors.

The board of supervisor met in Adrian, Wednesday. According to reports Lenawee county has 464,425 acres of land and the value of the farm realty is $16,116,570 while the value of the city and village realty is $5,831,090, while the personal amounts to $6,633-681.

The bill of Fish Warden Wilson for $95.98 was presented and after considerable discussion was allowed. A portion of this bill was presented to the board at its last session and reported out.

They adopted a resolution, that in the future no bills of the fish warden or deputy will be paid by the county, unless there is enough fines turned into the treasury to meet the same. The action practically means that Lenawee county will be left without a warden, as there will be no inducement to do the work, as there is no prospects of getting any remuneration.

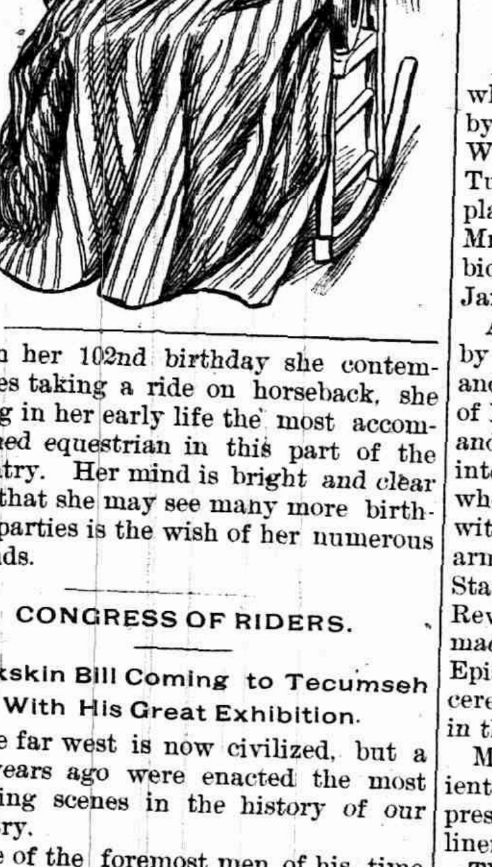
With a Crowd of Relatives and Friends She Celebrated Her

101st BIRTHDAY

In Clinton Wednesday.

On Wednesday last, June 26th, occurred the 101st birthday of Mrs. Mariah Hixon, of Clinton, Mich. The Tecumseh friends and relatives attended as usual and a pleasant afternoon and evening was passed. "Aunt Mariah" has always been noted for her wonderful memory and kept up her reputation on this occasion by recounting scenes and incidents which happened, many of them, before the major portion of her company were born.

After supper three cheers were given for "Aunt Mariah," who, not to be outdone in the matter of entertainment, responded by singing "Auld Lang Syne" in most approved and up-to-date style.



On her 102nd birthday she contemplates taking a ride on horseback, she being in her early life the most accomplished equestrian in this part of the country. Her mind is bright and clear and that she may see many more birthday parties is the wish of her numerous friends.

The Song of the Grouse.

Certain birds when the period of courtship comes round repair to particular trysting places and announce their presence there by well known calls or signals.

The ruffed grouse, as every one knows, seeks an old log or other convenient perch and drums with his wings, a hint to any lady grouse within hearing that "Barkis is willin."

The performance of the grouse is one frequently heard, but comparatively seldom seen, and for many years there were numerous conflicting theories concerning the means by which the drumming was produced. Some said that the sound was vocal, and others declared that the grouse struck the log with its wings. Even today the precise cause of the sound is not known, for, although the bird has been closely watched, its wing movements are so rapid that it is next to impossible to tell exactly what takes place. This much, however, is known: During the performance the grouse stands upon the leg or other perch and strikes the air in front of his body somewhat after the manner of an elated barnyard cock. The first few strokes are measured, but they become faster and faster until the individual thumps are lost, as in the rolling of a drum. Whether the sound is due entirely to beating of the air or whether it is increased by the striking together of the wing tips is a question yet to be settled.—Hartford Times.

JUNE WEDDING.

A Pretty Wedding at the Bride's Home in Which

HARRY J. PATTISON, OF THIS PLACE,

Marries Miss Fanny M. White, of Albion.

Amid beautiful palms and flowers which decorated her home, surrounded by relatives and friends, Miss Fanny M. White was married to Harry J. Pattison Tuesday evening. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton White, in Albion. Rev. F. E. Arnold, of the St. James' Episcopal church, officiating.

At 5:30 the bridal procession, headed by the ring bearer, little Olive Kelsey, and followed by Miss Edna Robinson, of Kalamazoo, who acted as bridesmaid, and Chas. Wichman as best man came into the parlor. Then came the bride, who was lovely in a cream brilliantine with cream applique, leaning on the arm of her father who gave her away. Standing in front of a bank of palms, Rev. Arnold spoke the words which made them man and wife, using the Episcopal service in full. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served in the dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Pattison were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents, silverware, furniture and linen being among them.

The bride is one of Albion's most pleasant and most handsome young ladies. She was a member of the choir in St. James' Episcopal church and was one of the leading ladies in that city.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pattison of this place. He served in the late Spanish war as a member of the signal corps attached to the 31st Regiment. Harry has many friends here who wish him and his bride much joy in their wedded life.

The bridal couple are at present visiting Mr. Pattison's parents, but will leave for their future home in Jackson Monday, the groom holding a good position in that city.

Playing For Keeps.

I have observed in the larger game of marbles which we call "making a living" that most of the boys are "playing for keeps" and only a few for fun and that those who are playing for keeps are the boys with the most influence and standing in the community. I know a whole lot of boys, some of them living in Massachusetts today, who are playing for keeps, but instead of marbles they are using wheat or corn or railroad stocks. No one of them knows just whom he is playing against, but each knows that for each dollar he wins a dollar is lost by some one else.

Nevertheless I am old fogy enough to say that for myself I do not regret my early training, nor am I ready to leave behind its principles, but as long as the majority of parents wish their boys to be successful it seems to me you ought to make it clear that playing marbles for keeps is an excellent way of drilling boys in that acquisitiveness which will make it possible for them in after years to provide their wives and daughters with silk dresses, opera cloaks and automobiles.—Springfield Republican.

Land Crabs.

One of the commonest and the largest of the Christmas island land crabs is the well known robber crab, which is found in most of the tropical islands of the Indian and Pacific oceans. It sometimes reaches a length of two feet and may measure seven inches across the back. Its colors are of a very gaudy description, the ground color being a bright red, upon which there are stripes of yellow, but in some cases a purplish blue is the prevailing tint.

The eyes are fixed on stalks which can be moved independently of one another, and there are two pairs of feelers, one long, the other short. The latter pair are continually jerked up and down. There is a pair of powerful claws, then several walking legs. In general appearance these animals are much more like rather stout lobsters than crabs, and one's first encounter with one of these creatures in the middle of a forest far from the sea is productive of much astonishment on both sides.

Another species of land crab common in Christmas island is a little bright red animal which in general shape is much like the common shore crab. This variety makes burrows in the ground, and in some places the soil is honeycombed with hundreds of holes. The crabs spend most of their time collecting dead leaves, which they carry in their claws, holding them up over their heads, and drag down into their burrows, into which they scuttle at the least alarm.—Pearson's Magazine.

Crabs In Disguise.

Human beings are not the only creatures that have discovered the appetizing, though indigestible, qualities of crabs, and some of these animals have been compelled to resort to various defensive measures. Disguise is one of these and is practiced with great effect by spider crabs.

These deliberately bite up seaweeds and plant them on their backs, very soon establishing a growth which harmonizes perfectly with the surroundings and deceives many an enemy. Should the weeds grow too vigorously, the crab industriously prunes them with his claws and every now and then scrapes the whole lot off and starts a fresh garden on his roof, so to speak.

The sponge crab behaves in a similar manner, nipping off little bits of living sponge and sticking them on his back, where they grow vigorously. The same end is served as in the other case. It is very amusing to keep crabs of one or other of these kinds in an aquarium and deprive them of the usual means of concealment.

They get very nervous and agitated and try to cover themselves with bits of paper or anything else that may be provided. One such captive is said to have had a little greatcoat made for him, which he put on in a hurry as soon as it was banded to him.

The Earl and the Highwayman.

One night when the Earl of Stanhope was walking alone in the Kentish lanes a man jumped out of the hedge, leveled a pistol and demanded his purse.

"My good man, I have no money with me," said Lord Stanhope in his remarkably slow tones. The robber laid hands on his watch.

"No," Lord Stanhope went on, "that watch you must not have. It was given to me by one I love. It is worth £100. If you will trust me, I will go back to Chevening and bring a £100 note and place it in the hollow of that tree. I cannot lose my watch."

The man did trust him. The earl did bring the note. Years after Lord Stanhope was at a city dinner, and next to him sat a London alderman of great wealth, a man widely respected. He and the earl talked of many things and found each other mutually entertaining. Next day Lord Stanhope received a letter, out of which dropped a £100 note. "It was your lordship's kind loan of this sum," said the note, "that started me in life and enabled me to have the honor of sitting next to your lordship at dinner." A strange story; but the Stanhopes are a strange race, and things happen to them that never did or could occur to other people.

TOOK HIS ADVICE.

A Veterinary Surgeon of Battle Creek Tells About It.

How many times in life a few words of good advice, coming from a friend one can depend upon, will save us hours perhaps months of misery. The following which coming from Battle Creek will interest our readers. Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, veterinary surgeon of that city, a well known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conqueror and the result of a few timely words of advice, he says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of kidney pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, 'You have made a mistake in buying those.' His reply was 'How is that?' I said Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all the others put together. As he wanted my reasons for thinking so I told him that my kidneys had bothered me for years, that I suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are affected, that I had used remedy after remedy including box after box of the one he had just purchased, and that until I used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street when he said: 'Doc, Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. After using the box about which we had a conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment cured me.'"

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

Too Classic For Them.

A resident in a small suburban town had a visit from a German friend who knew little English, but played the violin well. One of this resident's neighbors gave a "musicale," and of course he and his visitor were invited. The German took his violin, and when his turn came he played one of his best pieces from one of the great masters.

When he had finished, there was an awkward silence and no applause. The people were still looking expectantly at the German, who looked disappointed and flustered. The silence grew painful.

Finally the hostess, quite red in the face, edged over to the side of the German's friend.

"Can't you get him to?" she whispered.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, now that he's got tuned up, isn't he going to play something?"—London Tit-Bits.

DR. L. V. DUNLAP.

The news of the death of Dr. Dunlap, at Emergency hospital in Detroit, on the morning of the 22nd, cast a gloom over this village and surrounding country unprecedented in its history. Business was practically suspended and, as the hour for the arrival of the Wabash train bearing his remains approached, hundreds of people gathered at the station to receive them. The casket, lifted from the train and carried to his late home by his loving friends, was followed by a large proportion of villagers, being only one of the many evidences of the place the doctor had occupied in the hearts of the people.

The funeral at the Reformed church Sunday, Rev. Kooiker making the address, was the largest gathering ever seen in our community upon an occasion of this kind. The burial took place at Petersburg under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, Dr. Dunlap having taken the degrees in the Tecumseh lodge little more than a year ago. The services at the grave were beautifully conducted by R. A. Heesen, Master. As the words of the service were impressively spoken and the rites of the order carried out, few dry eyes remained.

Dr. Dunlap, scarcely more than a boy in years, only 24, yet carrying the responsibilities of a large medical practice had endeared himself to the people of this section during his three years with us. Always kind alike to old and young, generous to a fault, a friend in the highest and best sense to all with whom he came in contact. The doctor was an only child and the sorrow of his parents is very great. The home thus broken up by the unsparing hand of death was one of the most interesting in the village, where every guest, old and young, rich or poor, met a hearty welcome from both Dr. Dunlap and his estimable and accomplished wife.

Beside the Masons, the doctor was identified with several societies, Grange, Maccabees, Woodmen, etc., as well as with the Gun and Ball clubs, each of which gave beautiful and costly flowers for the decorations at the funeral. Thus has passed from among us a bright young man whom we all loved

His Late Hours.

"You never think of staying out late," said the convivial and ill bred person.

"Sometimes I think of it," answered Mr. Meekton distantly.

"But you don't care for that sort of thing."

"Not in the least."

"Perhaps you never had any experience?"

"Oh, yes, I have. It was only last night that I was out at half past 2 a. m. Henrietta sent me out to see if I couldn't keep the back gate from slamming."—Washington Star.

A GENTLE HINT.
In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. dark, and I could no more discern any object at a distance of 25 yards than I could take to myself wings and fly over the pine tops.

"Edging the open space around my ambush was the usual cover, chiefly pine trees, with an occasional clump of low bush. I made up my mind that my companion was ensconced behind a certain dense patch of scrub which I had noticed while there had been light from the fire. This patch lay at a distance of about 30 yards from my own position, and if the other lynx should be so unkind and suspicious as to refuse to cross the open in search of me I resolved that as soon as I could see so far I would hazard a shot, trusting that at least one or two of the slugs which went to make up the charge in my smoothbore might find a billet.

"The duet continued meanwhile. He would address an amorous but gently reproachful remark to me, and I would reply with soft answers, designed to turn away wrath. Perhaps I told him I had a game leg and could not walk or that I was busy over a delicious meal of hare which I dare not leave on account of the known dishonesty of the denizens of this part of the forest. I don't know what I said, but whatever it may have been he would not move, but only repeated the arguments which, even though I could not understand them, were, I felt, growing exceedingly stale. He was a very unimaginative lynx and scarcely varied the monotony of his remarks from beginning to end of our long conversation. Neither did I, of course, but then I had at least the grace to be heartily ashamed of the sameness of my observations.

"This sort of thing continued till presently the light had increased sufficiently to afford an indistinct view of the surroundings. I now carefully weighed the chances. I could take the risky course of hazarding a blind shot into the bush on the offchance of killing the animal supposed to be lurking behind it, or I could creep along until I reached his ambuscade, then jump up and perhaps secure a running shot at my friend, though, being a lynx, it was exceedingly unlikely that he would wait for me there.

"After much meditation I at last decided upon a plan of action. I resolved to make a movement of a portion of the small bush behind which I lay, in the hope of so exciting the ardor of my friend opposite by this sign of life that he would be unable to resist the impulse to rush across the open and fly, as it were, to my arms.

"No sooner thought of than carried out. Stretching out one foot, I stirred the branches in such a way as to give the impression that an animal was moving behind them, caterwauling lustily the while.

"Then of a sudden a most awful thing happened. A deafening report rang out from the direction of the scrub opposite, while at the same instant I distinctly heard and almost felt the whistle and rush of a charge of slugs which, though they did not actually touch me, passed within an inch or two of my ears. I sprang to my feet with a yell, while a dusky form, which was not that of a lynx, rose from behind the patch of bush opposite and came running across toward me. Will you believe me," old Stepan ended, "when I assure you that it was that confounded poaching blackguard Simeon, not yet a keeper at that time? And the most annoying part of the whole business was that I had taught him all his lynx calling myself.

"I went off after the capercailzies a few minutes later and missed three of them, one after the other—sitting shots too. The disappointment had been too much for me. Just fancy my caterwauling all night for a fellow like Simeon to have a cockshot at me at the end of it! Bah!

"Since that day I have called up several lynxes, but Simeon then and there gave up the practice, because I vowed that very morning that if he ever tried it again I should stalk him and shoot him."—Fred Whishaw in Longman's Magazine.

Roses and Turks.

"It would give a genuine and religious Turk a fit if he saw how little appreciation Americans show for the rose and what little reverence they have for it," spoke a florist as he wrapped the foil about the stems of a boutonniere.

"The rose is beyond question the prettiest flower that blooms, and it was so considered by the Turks many years before the conquest of Granada. There is a religious legend generally believed in throughout Turkey that the red rose sprang from a drop of the great prophet Mohammed's blood. Everything beautiful in nature is ascribed to him. The Turks, therefore, have great reverence for the flower and allow it to bloom and die untouched, except on state occasions and for the purpose of making rosewater.

"After the conquest by the Turks they would not worship in any church until the walls were cleansed and washed with rosewater and thus purified by the blood of the prophet. It is used on the body for the same purpose. A Turk whose conscience is stung by some act or deed he has committed will caress and pay reverence to the rose to appease the wrath of the prophet and Allah.

"With these ideas inculcated in him from youth it would shock him severely to see the pretty flower strewn in the path of a bridal couple, thrown on the public stage or banked up in hundreds at a swell reception or party to be crushed and spoiled in an evening."—Exchange.

WHAT SAID THE WIND?

[Her thought.]
The wind is waving all the trees;
They whisper in the sun,
And ever through the sweet, warm grass
The wayward shadows run.
Oh, turn you here or turn you there,
The thought will not away
That love comes as the wind comes,
And none may say it nay.

[His thought.]
The wind is scattering the leaves,
The clouds rush up the sky,
The vagrant snowflakes find no rest,
But whirl and toss and fly,
And still thought wanders with the wind,
Returning but to say,
"Oh, love goes as the wind blows,
And none may bid it stay!"

Mother's Friend
Those who do know about it wonder how they ever got along without it. It has robbed childbirth of its terrors for many a young wife. It has preserved her girlish figure and saved her much suffering. It is an external liniment and carries with it therefore, absolutely no danger of upsetting the system as drugs taken internally are apt to do. It is to be rubbed into the abdomen to soften and strengthen the muscles which are to bear the strain. This means much less pain. It also prevents morning sickness and all of the other discomforts of pregnancy.
A druggist of Macon, Ga., says: "I have sold a large quantity of Mother's Friend and have never known an instance where it has failed to produce the good results claimed for it."
A prominent lady of Lamberton, Ark., writes: "With my first six children I was in labor from 24 to 30 hours. After using Mother's Friend, my seventh was born in 4 hours."

KILLED TWELVE

LIGHTNINGS FEARFUL WORK IN CHICAGO.

THE VICTIMS WERE FISHING IN LAKE MICHIGAN.

FATAL BOLT STRUCK AND DEMOLISHED A PIER.

Chicago, July 2.—Eleven boys were killed and one probably fatally injured yesterday afternoon by a single bolt of lightning.

The victims were fishing in Lake Michigan at the foot of Montrose boulevard, on the north side. The fatal bolt struck the pier where they were seated and all were thrown into the lake.

A policeman, attracted to the pier by crashing timbers, found it impossible to rescue any of the victims. The heavy timbers of the pier had been shattered, and the whole structure toppled into the water. He hurried to a patrol box and called for assistance.

Nearly half an hour elapsed before aid arrived. The work of recovering the bodies was extremely difficult, but finally all were carried ashore.

The storm broke the hot wave.

Owing to the terrific thunderstorm prevalent the work of identification was extremely slow.

Oppressed by the extreme heat the boys had gone in bathing. When the rain began to fall and it became evident a severe electrical storm was coming, they rushed to a shelter they had built on the pier. Willie Anderson, 12 years of age, was the only survivor of the shock which followed a moment later. To the policeman he gave a bare idea of the horrible ending to an hour's sport, and then fainted. He was carried to a nearby house where medical assistance was rendered.

The fatal stroke was the most powerful seen here in years. The pier was demolished in a trice, giving the boys not the slightest chance to escape.

In age the victims ranged from 12 to 25 years.

BOERS AT BERMUDA.

Nine Hundred Landed and Seem to be Well Pleased.

Hamilton, Bermuda, July 2.—The 930 Boer prisoners who arrived here June 28 on the British transport Armenian were yesterday moved into the camps prepared for them on Darrell's and Tucker's islands. These Boers are part of the force of Gen. Cronje and were captured at Paardeberg; they include several boys of 8 and 10 years, who carried ammunition to their fathers when the latter were in the trenches; among the prisoners were also two Boers so old that the crawled on all fours down the transport's gangway. These two old men aver they never saw salt water before reaching Cape Town.

The prisoners are pleased with Bermuda and in the afternoon they enjoyed the sea bathing. They say they are sorry they were led into the war and that they long for its termination.

Gold Galore.

Seattle, Wash., July 2.—The steamship Victorian arrived here from Skagway with 75 Dawsonites and between $800,000 and $1,000,000 in gold, part of the spring cleanup in the Klondike district. Of the gold, $510,000 was consigned to the Canadian Bank of Commerce. H. I. Miller, a well-known cattleman of this city, is reported to have brought back $100,000.

Were Slightly Injured.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 2.—Eastbound Atlantic express No. 6 on the Union Pacific ran into the rear end of a freight train at Rock Springs last night. Between 15 and 20 persons, all but two of the passengers on the eastbound train, were slightly injured. Traffic was delayed for nearly 14 hours.

A Dastardly Act.

Toledo, July 2.—The city chemist reported that he had discovered a large quantity of arsenic in the mutton soup which caused the illness of Arthur Miller, his wife and five children several weeks ago. The police claim that it was a dastardly attempt to murder the family. The police are investigating the case.

Trial of Earl Russell.

London, July 1.—The earl of Morley, chairman of the committee in the house of lords, announced that the trial of Earl Russell by the house of lords on the charge of bigamy will begin July 18 in the royal gallery, under the presidency of the lord high steward, the earl of Pembroke.

No Authority of Law.

Washington, July 2.—Secretary Hitchcock has decided that there is no authority of law permitting a delay until Oct. 1 in the opening of the Wichita Indian reservation in Oklahoma, as desired by certain cattle interests.

SENATOR KYLE DEAD.

Noted South Dakotan Passes Away at His Home.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 2.—Senator Kyle died at 6:05 o'clock last evening.

St. Paul, July 2.—Senator Kyle was taken at his home at Aberdeen about 10 days ago. His trouble was of malarial origin and resulted in a functional affection of the heart, which caused the greatest alarm. A consultation of physicians was held and his case soon took a turn for the better, the heart action growing stronger and the general condition much more encouraging. One of the latest bulletius from his bedside last week was to the effect that he had passed the danger point and that his recovery would be certain, though slow.

The senator had a similar attack in the east some time ago, and was liable to a recurrence of the trouble. His health has been robust for a year or so. His relapse was not expected, however.

STEEL WORKERS.

Both Sides Confident of Success in the Conflict.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 2.—The end of the first day of the strike troubles between the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers on one side and the American Sheet Steel Co. and American Steel Hoop Co., constituent companies of the United States Steel Corporation, on the other, finds all of the union plants idle and many workers from open mills who are members of the Amalgamated association on strike. The association officials say they are satisfied with the situation and claim they will be able to control between 35,000 and 40,000 men in the two companies. No move was made on the part of either side to the controversy, and it is doubtful if anything decisive will be done for at least a week. Both men and manufacturers agree that a shut down for about two weeks is necessary whether a settlement is reached or not. In the meantime the association officials will make every preparation to be fully equipped for a prolonged struggle should it become necessary.

While officials of neither side will venture a prediction, much quiet talk is being indulged in, the trend of which leads to the belief that before the usual summer shut down of the mills has expired, a settlement will have been reached and the men who are now nominally on strike return to work.

The Amalgamated officials do not consider the negotiations with the steel hoop company broken off, but still pending, and may be renewed at any time. I. W. Jenks, manager of the company, is of the same mind, and intimated that the matter might be taken up another day and gave the inference that a settlement would be arrived at.

Reports received at the general office of the Amalgamated association show that nearly all the independent mills have signed the new wage scale.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Machinists and Employes Holding Conferences in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, July 2.—A conference was held here yesterday between representatives of the Laidlaw-Dunn-Gordon Co. and the striking machinists, in an endeavor to reach a settlement of the trouble at that plant. President August Herrman of the board of new waterworks commissioners was a party to the conference as an arbitrator. A proposition was submitted by the manufacturers and after several hours' session it was so amended that the representatives of the strikers agreed to submit it to their executive board for approval. The nature of the proposition was not made public. About 350 machinists are employed at this plant. It is expected that should the trouble at this plant be satisfactorily settled, other settlements will speedily follow.

Lacrosse Contests.

Buffalo, July 2.—The first of the series of lacrosse contests for the Canadian-American championship was played in the stadium at the Pan-American exposition grounds yesterday. The first game was between the Seneca Indian team of Akron and the Pagan Indians of Cattaragus, the former winning by a score of 4 to 2. Today's game will be between the Crescents of Brooklyn and the Rangers of Rochester.

DETROIT RIGHT IN IT.

Carnegie Will Give Detroit $750,000 for Libraries.

Skibo Castle, Ardgay, N. B.
20th June, 1901.

Geo. W. Radford, Esq., Detroit, Mich.

Yours of March 28th comes before me this morning. If the city of Detroit will furnish proper sites for libraries and agree to expend $75,000 a year in their maintenance I shall be very glad to provide $750,000 as needed for the buildings. About half—not more, I think not so much—of this sum should be expended on the central library, and the remainder on branch libraries. The site for the central library, however, should be amply sufficient to provide for probable new additions in the future, judging from Detroit's horoscope.

Yours very truly,
ANDREW CARNEGIE.

This is a copy of a letter addressed to Geo. W. Radford of Detroit, who received the letter yesterday morning. Mr. Radford, as representative of the board of library commissioners, has been engaged in securing a gift from the steel magnate for Detroit since the middle of last March, and his efforts have proved successful.

According to Mr. Carnegie's conditions, about half of this money will be used for a central library building, about $350,000, while the remainder will be used for five branch library buildings at $80,000 each.

It is understood that the library commissioners are unanimous on the question of accepting Mr. Carnegie's gift.

INSANE HOBO

Captured by a Sheriff's Posse in Berrien County.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 2.—The sheriff's posse succeeded yesterday in capturing Fred Koch, an insane hobo, who has for several days terrorized the farmers' wives south of this city. He has been sought for by the sheriff for a month. He came here from Kansas to pick berries and was driven insane by the excessive heat. He has remained hidden, and was only captured after a running fight through the woods. He is very vicious and dangerous.

This makes the sixth insane person within a month captured by the sheriff within a radius of 12 miles from this city. The supervisors have ordered a padded cell to be built in the jail to accommodate the large increase of violent persons.

TUG FERN LOST.

Foundered In Lake Superior and All Hands Lost.

Houghton, Mich., July 2.—The wrecking tug Fern of Algonac sank at her moorings over the wreck of the old Colorado on Eagle river reef in the big blow Friday night. She was discovered Sunday afternoon. It is supposed that her crew of five were drowned while asleep in their berths. A diver will examine the wreck.

The lost are: Capt. Arthur Hemenger of Algonac; Engineer Frank Johnson, aged 35, of Eagle River, leaves a widow and three children; Fireman Wm. Smith, aged 19, son of Lightkeeper Norman Smith of the Manitou islands; Diver Charles Bradley of the Soo, and a cook whose name is unknown, also of the Soo.

Died from His Injuries.

St. Johns, Mich., July 2.—Franklin Weller, a well-known business man and member of the firm of Weller & Daggett, owners of the St. Johns Iron works, is dead from the effects of injuries received some days ago at the works. He was oiling a shaft and, becoming dizzy, fell some distance and the stem of the oil can he had in his hand ran through his face. He also sustained serious injuries to his spine and the back of his head.

Looking for Oil.

Romulus, Mich., July 2.—J. Yoke of Adrian has leased over 4,100 acres of land between here and Taylor Center, coming within one mile of this village, for the purpose of boring for oil and gas, agreeing to pay the farmers for all damages done to crops, and if successful the farmers are to receive one-eighth of the oil or gas that is found.

Perfectly Reliable.

Charlevoix, Mich., July 2.—Jay C. Jones of the firm of Luke & Jones, and thoroughly reliable, saw a serpent 30 feet long at Big Rock Point, two miles east of Charlevoix. His wife and two other ladies were with him and saw the "critter," which was 50 rods away and had a head the size of an iron kettle.

Cut His Own Throat.

Jackson, Mich., July 2.—Dr. C. A. Littler was found dead near Clark's lake. He had cut his throat with a razor while temporarily deranged. The doctor started for Napoleon to assist in an operation. Some years ago his child took poison accidentally, dying from the effects. The father had not been the same since.

Accidents at Muskegon.

Muskegon, Mich., July 2.—Martin Hensen of Chicago, a deck hand on a Goodrich line boat, was drowned at the dock.

John Carlsen slipped off an embankment under a car. One leg was so badly crushed that it had to be amputated.

Young Man Drowned.

West Branch, Mich., July 2.—John Lobsinger, 19 years old, was drowned in a lake near South Branch, while swimming. The body was sent to the home of his parents, in Hamacher settlement.

Sudden Death.

Howell, Mich., July 2.—Ed. Raymour died suddenly from the effects of the heat. He was digging a cellar and drank too much cold water.

Reprimanded and Discharged.

Denver, July 2.—Judge Palmer, in the district court, severely reprimanded Rev. M. A. Rader and Rev. W. H. Talmage, who were accused of contempt of court, and discharged them.

Not Peculiar.

Tess—I see a notice in the paper of the wedding of Mrs. Nubride.

Jess—Yes; I know her very well.

Tess—Do you? What was her maiden name?

Jess—I suppose her maiden aim was to get married.—Philadelphia Press.

GREAT IS CANADA

Some Great Things Said by Her Representatives

AT A BANQUET IN LONDON

Minister Choate Expressed His Regrets at Being Unable to Attend, But Sent a Sentiment of Friendship.

London, July 2.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal presided last night at the Dominion day dinner given at the Hotel Cecil, London, and attended by 300, the company including Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Aberdeen and other former Canadian governors general, Sir Louis Davies, David Mills and Sydney Fisher and the other Canadian ministers now in London, Gen. Ian Hamilton, Rear Admiral Douglas, Gilbert Parker and other well-known men.

Mr. Parker paid a tribute to the French Canadians in the South African war. Admiral Douglas and Gen. Hamilton responded for the navy and army, the latter characterizing the fighting of the Canadians as "the triumph of individual intelligence." The work of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal was highly eulogized.

Mr. Choate, in the course of a letter expressing his regret at being unable to be present, uttered sentiments of hearty good will, adding "we are neighbors and we must always be good friends."

Mr. Chamberlain, speaking of Canada's material progress, said:

"Thirty years ago your thoughts might have turned to the question of absorption with your powerful but friendly neighbor to the south."

This was received with cries of "No" "No" from Mr. Dobell and the other Canadian ministers.

Mr. Chamberlain: "Yes, you may say 'no, no,' but you would not have said it 30 years ago. Of one thing I am convinced. If our colonies desire closer connection and will assist us with their counsel and advices, in addition to their arms, there is nothing this country would more readily welcome."

Referring to Great Britain's isolation, the colonial secretary said:

"I do not think the opinion of civilized Europe today is likely to be the verdict of posterity. Of much more value is the opinion of our colonies than the uninstructed opinion of Europe which is based upon lies foisted upon Europe by our enemies abroad and traitors among us at home. We may be isolated among the nations of the world, but so long as our children rally around us we are not alone."

Sir Louis Davies spoke of the work the Dominion government had done in maintaining order in the Klondike and the Kooteney country, "where others are anxious to displace our flag. Reciprocity of action is such that there is no distrust, fear or danger between the colonies and the empire today. Our tie may only be silken but it is stronger than an iron chain. The empire's king is our king; the empire's flag is our flag, and we are as proud of both as you are. The Canada of today is not the Canada of 15 years ago. Emigration is now flowing from the United States into Canada instead of from Canada to the United States. We have so improved trade relations that we find we have a better market in Great Britain than in the United States. There was a time when certain people thought Canada could be forced into relations with the United States; that time, thank God, has gone by and the time to talk annexation has gone by. Today our faith is pinned in the flag and our material prosperity lies that way also. We recognized that the cause in South Africa was a righteous cause."

After the speech of Mr. Chamberlain that of Sir Louis Davies was quite the speech of the evening. Sir Louis was loudly applauded.

The earls of Derby and Aberdeen also spoke.

More Machinists Out.

Pittsburg, July 2.—The machinists, blacksmiths and helpers of both the big local plants of the American Tin Plate Co. went out on strike for a nine hour day. About 100 men are concerned at present, but the trouble may extend to all departments. The men demand the pay for 10 hours for the work of nine.

All Work Stopped.

St. Louis, July 2.—Between 350 and 400 freight handlers employed in and about the warehouses of the different railroads entering East St. Louis are on strike for an advance in wages to 15 cents an nour. Practically all the work of transferring freight from one road to another is at a standstill.

Rabelais, being out of money, once tricked the police into taking him from Marseilles to Paris on a charge of treason. He made up some packages of brick dust and labeled them "Poison for the royal family." The officers took Rabelais 700 miles, only to be told at the end of their journey that it was April 1 and the affair was a hoax. Of course, as Rabelais was the privileged wit of the royal family, he was forgiven.

HOTTEST WEATHER

Ever Experienced in Many Parts of the Country

DEATHS AND PROSTRATIONS

In Philadelphia the Heat Broke All Previous Records for the Past Thirty Years for July—Five People Dropped Dead in Chicago.

New York, July 2.—Yesterday was the hottest July 1 on record. At 3 o'clock the thermometer at the weather office registered 98, one degree hotter than Sunday. The percentage of humidity was only 48. After 3:10 p. m. a decline began until 9 p. m. the thermometer registered 92.

In the early morning hours there was what might be termed a light breeze blowing, but during the early part of the afternoon the breeze died away and the city was baking in torrid heat. The suffering in the city, particularly in the crowded tenement house districts, was most intense. Up to 10 o'clock last night there were reported 58 deaths and 106 prostrations from heat, and the number was being swelled hourly. This covers a period from 2 o'clock a. m. and only for the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

Although the weather bureau said that the maximum was 98, this does not indicate the heat on the streets. Many thermometers registered 108 at 3:10, and all of them over 100 on the street level.

Washington, July 2.—The hot weather continued here yesterday with unabated fierceness, the climax coming in the afternoon, when the local record for this early in the summer was broken, the weather bureau thermometer recording a temperature of 102 degrees. Fortunately there was not much humidity in the atmosphere.

There seems to be no prospect for any relief for the next 48 hours for this vicinity. Beyond tnat length of time the weather bureau officials made no predictions.

The present hot wave started in the west June 20 and the weather bureau officials report that high temperatures are recorded in most sections east of the Rocky mountains and many places west of them. Rains, most of them moderate in amount, have fallen in many places. In New York city the probabilities seem to favor a continuation of existing conditions with no immediate prospect of relief. In the latter city the temperature yesterday was again 98, the highest previous records for that city in July for 30 years being 99. In Philadelphia the heat broke all records for the past 30 years for July, reaching a maximum of 102. Some of the other high temperatures recorded during the day by the weather bureau were:

Atlanta, Ga., 90 degrees; Atlantic City, 90; Boston, 92; Chicago, 92; Cincinnati, 96; Davenport, Ia., 96; Des Moines, Ia., 92; Indianapolis, 92; Jacksonville, Fla., 94; Kansas City, Mo., 100; Little Rock, 90; Memphis, 92; New Orleans, 90; New York, 98; Omaha, 94; Pittsburg, 98; Salt Lake, 92; St. Louis, 100; St. Paul, 90; Springfield, Ill., 96; Vicksburg, 90.

At 2 o'clock this morning the death record for the 24 hours ending at that time in Greater New York was 87; the prostrations 183. For the last five days, covering the present heated term, the total deaths in the same territory were 136.

St. Louis, July 2.—The mercury reached 100 Monday according to the weather bureau record. Six deaths from heat were reported. There were numerous prostrations.

Cincinnati, July 2.—The maximum official temperature yesterday was 96. There were five deaths from heat. Many prostrations occurred.

Chicago, July 2.—Five persons dropped dead on the streets in Chicago yesterday from excessive heat and 15 others were so badly overcome that they had to be removed to the hospital. A number of the prostrated are in a serious condition and may die.

Cleveland, July 2.—The highest temperature recorded by the weather bureau yesterday was 92. About 9 o'clock last night a heavy wind came from the west and cooled the atmosphere considerably. Three deaths occurred from the heat and 18 prostrations.

CIVIL GOVERNOR.

William H. Taft of Ohio Gets His Commission.

Washington, July 2.—The president signed the commission of William H. Taft of Ohio as civil governor of the Philippine islands.

Manila, July 2.—Thursday next, July 4, will be inauguration day for the civil government and moving day for the military headquarters, which will be transferred to the former Spanish headquarters, outside the walled city, while the palace will be occupied exclusively by the civil government. Gen. Chaffee, who assumes command then, will occupy Judge Taft's residence, and Judge Taft will remove to the Malcanan palace.

Gen. Chaffee is preparing to push Malvar, the insurgent chief, in southern Luzon. He has ordered the transfer of the Fifth infantry from northern Luzon to Batangas province. The general has been informed that Malvar's principal headquarters are in a mountain town in northern Tayabas, whose inhabitants are contributing to his support.

Cordially Received.

Copenhagen, July 2.—The Danish papers comment cordially on the visit here of the United States training ship Hartford. The American officers and crew have been invited to participate in a 4th of July celebration at the famous Tivoli gardens. Commander J. M. Hawley of the Hartford officially visited the Danish authorities yesterday. The nautical school ship Enterprise, Lieut.-Commander E. M. Hughes, which left Boston May 31, is expected here July 9.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

Ex-Gov. Pingree's Body Arrived at New York

FUNERAL SET FOR SATURDAY

The Early Arrival of the Body at New York Will Effect No Change in the Funeral Arrangements in Detroit on Saturday.

Detroit, July 2.—The information that the steamer Zeeland had arrived in New York with the body of ex-Gov. Pingree on board caused a stir among the various committees which the making preparations for the reception of the body in Detroit, and for a time arrangements were at a standstill.

The committee composed of aldermen, county and state officials, which was to leave for New York yesterday afternoon, was in quandary until it was learned from the east that the body would be kept in New York until they arrived. They will now leave at the time appointed.

Although the Zeeland arrived in port earlier than was expected, members of the citizens' committee believe that there will be no material change in the arrangements that have already been made for the funeral. Gen. Duffield said that Saturday was the best possible time for the services, because so many business houses and factories would be able to close for the afternoon then, where it would be much more inconvenient for them an another day.

Gen. H. M. Duffield arrived in town Monday after several days' absence in the east. He met the members of his committee at his office in the Union Trust building and arrangements were made to handle the enormous crowds that will participate in the funeral procession and look on from points along the line of march. Col. W. G. Latimer was appointed chief of staff and Capt. J. G. Dickinson chief of aides. Ten gentlemen have been selected to act as marshals of divisions, and their names will be announced after a meeting which will be held in the mayor's office today.

Col. Harrah and Gen. Duffield are planning on between 10,000 and 12,000 ununiformed men in the line. These with the 8,000 or more uniformed men will form a procession, which it is thought will reach almost from the Pingree home on Woodward avenue to the cemetery. Gen. Duffield has already received word from many organizations signifying their intention to take part, and many more are expected to report today or tomorrow.

New York, July 2.—Mayor Maybury was unable to get the Gresham for the trip down the bay, but arranged to go on the inspector's boat, the permission including Frank C. Pingree, R. G. Solomon of the Leather Dealers' association, and newspaper correspondents.

The body will not be taken from the Zeeland until 12 o'clock today, that arrangement having been suggested by the surveyor of the port. This will enable the Detroit escort and the committee from the Leather Dealers' association to be present. There will be no ceremonies. The early arrival of the body will effect no change in the funeral arrangements at Detroit.

Changes in Clerical Force.

Percy Fall of Albion was assigned to a clerkship in the office of superintendent of public instruction. Jesse E. Tarbell of Muir has been appointed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Fall to a position as teacher in the Philippines at an annual salary of $1,200. Supt. Fall is acting at the request of Supt. Atkinson of Manila, and will make several more appointments of Michigan teachers.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General
Charles King

CHAPTER I.

The sunshine of a glorious autumn morning was slanting along the valley of the Pawnee, throwing bold shadows into the flats and lighting the landscape for miles with crimson and gold. The dew sparkling on the wild "bull" berry bushes, on tufted buffalo grass and tiny flowerets mantled the bluffs with diamonds and was still so strong as to defy its one enemy, the sun god. The frost had smitten the scant foliage on the banks of the winding stream, and the leaves had donned their glorious hues, setting forth their richest color—as the swan reserves its song—to meet the universal conqueror. The mist rose slowly from the silent, shallow pools, and from distant village and from the neighboring heights the smoke of chimney or campfire soared straight to the skies. It was a morning to send the blood leaping through young veins and to brighten the eye of age, a morning in which all nature seemed to rejoice and all mankind to thank God for the joy of living. Yet in the midst of a scene of such peace and health and hope there stood alone a man, still young, from whose face hope, peace, even health, apparently, had fled and whose attitude was one of utter grief and dejection. He was leaning against a branching willow, gazing into the depths of the broad pool of the Pawnee just above the rapids with God alone knows what thoughts seething through his brain, when the silence of the morning was broken by sudden, stirring sound. Close at hand from the willows across the stream there rang out loud and clear the call of a cavalry trumpet, followed almost instantly by the appearance of half a dozen horsemen moving at steady walk from a break in the timber and descending the gentle slope to the ford. Foremost rode a powerfully built soldier in the field uniform of the United States horse. Behind, side by side, came two young soldiers, all three evidently officers. Then followed a brace of troopers—orderlies or grooms—and a jaunty lad with the yellow braid and glistening trumpet slung from the shoulder. Straight through the ford the leader splashed, looking neither to right nor left, the sunlight peering under his hat brim and cresting with gold his bushy eyebrows and bristling mustache. Straight at his heels followed his little party, and then from the same opening in the willows there burst into view the head of a column of cavalry, moving at the same measured pace and with the same erect and martial bearing.

At the first sound of the trumpet the lonely figure at the edge of the pool darted back out of view and, bending low, stood where by peering through the bushes the column could be kept in sight, but when a moment later the fluttering guidon of the foremost troop came suddenly flaunting into the sunshine, all its brilliant color instantly enhanced, some intense emotion seemed to seize upon the lonely watcher. Rising to his full height, with his clinched hands thrown above his head, he whirled about and, with an inarticulate cry, sank like a stricken bull to earth and lay face downward and buried in his arms, his whole form shaken with sobs.

Troop after troop, until the fourth had passed, the squadron crossed the ford and moved steadily up the southward slope, following a winding road that led to the group of buildings crowning the height, and still the young man lay there. Over beyond the low line of bluff to the west a cloud of dust began to rise, and there was sound of martial music. A tall flagstaff, looking like a slim white arrow, pierced the sky line from that westward crest, and the little bit of bunting fluttering at its summit was suddenly lowered, only to be replaced a moment later by a symbol that told it was some unusual occasion at the post, the arrival perhaps of some dignitary of superior or rank, and in confirmation of this view, as the great garrison flag swung up to the head of the staff, the earth trembled and the boom of a battery salute throbbed on the ear. Even then there was no change in the attitude of the sufferer unless it were that he buried his face still deeper in his arms, but all of a sudden he started, half raised his head and listened.

Somewhere up stream a clear, powerful voice was shouting:

"Langdon! Eric, old chap! For God's sake, where are you?"

Hurriedly the listener drew his handkerchief hard across his eyes, shaking his head in the effort to pull himself together. But he gave no answer.

Presently the call was repeated, louder, nearer, and now bounding hoof beats could be heard.

"Eric, I say! Eric!"

There was something almost commanding in the cry, and still no answer came from the man, who evidently recognized both voice and name, to whom indeed the former seemed to bring a bit of hope or help or comfort, for the utter despond in his pale, sad face was lightened the veriest trifle. Yet he turned again toward the river, as though resolute to ignore the summons.

The next instant, glad and winsome in the sunshine at the edge of the timber, there galloped into sight a young officer whose brave blue eyes and ruddy cheeks and fair, crisply curling hair would have invited more than a single glance, while the grace of his strong yet slender form and his capital seat in saddle would have made him marked even among a score of his fellows. He rode with utter abandon, leaping his mettlesome, excited horse over the few obstacles along the fringe of willows as though he and his steed had wings and this was easy as flying.

"Eric! Eric Langdon, I say!" rang out the brave young voice once more, and then, as a gleam of the sunshine shot through the willows, his eagerly searching eyes caught sight of the lone figure, the object of his morning scout.

In an instant he had sprung from saddle.

"Eric—you—you"— he began in almost boyish eagerness. "Stand where you are, Ronald!" he commandingly spoke to his beautiful horse and then, unhesitatingly leaving him without fastening of any kind, fairly leaped into the timber and to the side of his friend. Whipping off his gauntlet, he held forth his bared hand.

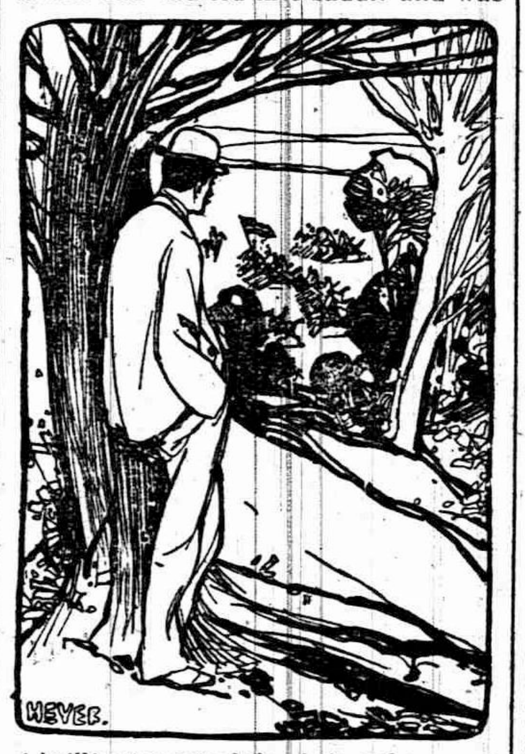
"Remember Old Spot's story, Eric; what we used to hear from those cavalry fellows—never give a gloved hand if you want to talk business with Indian or friend? Old man, you—you," and for a moment he paused partly for breath, partly for words, and the bright blue eyes seemed suspiciously near brimming. "you've given me a bad night and a woeful morning. If it hadn't been for Melville, God bless him, I don't know what I'd done. He saw I was just all upset. He said, 'You may find him down by the river.' He said there'd be half an hour before review and for me to tell you for him—for him, by heaven!"—and here the young soldier's emotion was too much for his eyes—"that you mustn't think of going until he had had a chance to say a word of friendship. Eric, what more do you need to keep you from giving us all the slip?"

Almost impulsively the elder turned, tears starting into his own haggard eyes.

"Did Melville say that, Rodney? Do you—you're not making it better than he did—God bless him anyhow—in your loyal effort to—comfort me."

"Swear to it, Eric, if need be, and I know it's what you deserve to hear." Then, with rueful smile: "Even if you did try to pull out without giving any fellow a chance. I missed you just after 1—just after the Brocktons' function broke up. Woodrow and I scooted over to your room the moment we could get away, and there was your luggage all packed, but no sign of you. Couldn't find Hurricane either—wish you could have seen that old nigger sitting on the back steps crying this morning—so I started through the post, scouting everywhere I thought you might be except—except"— And here an honest blush went up to the young fellow's brows. "Well, it was 3 o'clock when I left a note for you in the old roost and 5 when I got in there again and found my note there, but not you, only old Hurricane boohooing at the back. Listen! Yes, there goes adjutant's call. Eric, I may tell Melville you'll come? Steady there, Ronald!" he interjected, for the spirited charger, well knowing the call, had whirled about and was pawing and snorting in manifest impatience. His owner moved to his side, but his eyes never left the form of his friend.

It was a moment before the latter could speak. Meantime the young lieutenant had vaulted into saddle and was at once caressing and controlling his pet, who was fretting and plunging in his eagerness to gallop to his place "in battery."



A brilliant spectacle lay before the eyes of Eric Langdon.

"May, tell the major I thank him with all my heart. I shall be there."

And now Ronald sprang away like a deer, shooting up the slope toward the west as though life had no higher joy than a hand gallop. Lieutenant May turned in the saddle to wave a friendly hand to the figure standing at the edge of the willows. Then horse and rider in long, easy curve rounded the shoulder of the bluff and skimmed out of sight.

Half an hour later a brilliant spectacle lay before the eyes of Eric Langdon. It was one to thrill and delight even an unprofessional eye, but this was the eye of a practiced soldier, to whom every detail was familiar, a soldier who many a time had taken active and up to within three months prominent part in similar pageants. Now it was the will of the law that he should be cut off from further participation in scenes of the kind. By the stern edict of a court martial duly confirmed by the order of the president himself Langdon stood summarily dismissed from the military service of the United States.

It was a sad, sad story. It has had its parallels; it may have more. There was no finer young soldier in the battalion of cadets, and great were the prophecies of class mates—indeed of instructors—when Langdon's name came up for discussion. The corps rose up and cheered him on graduation day when a great public official in handing the handsome cadet captain his diploma took occasion to say that a young gentleman who could ride and drill as he could ought to be most welcome to the finest regiment in creation, and a very pretty girl sitting close to Senator Spotts, a ponderous member of the board of visitors, whispered to that veteran beau:

"Now, there's a man I should like to know."

And so it happened that before the graduating class were fairly out of cadet uniform and into their first "cits" a messenger in the shape of the official orderly of the commandant of cadets came to Eric Langdon to "invite" his presence at the quarters of that high official, and there he was presented anew to the distinguished senator to whom he, in company with his classmates, had already made the orthodox and conventional homage required of the graduating cadet to the board of visitors, and now the senator, all suavity, led forward an extremely pretty and vivacious damsel. "Mr. Langdon," said he, "this young lady has fallen in love with the corps in general and your—horsemanship in particular, and I know you will be delighted to reciprocate."

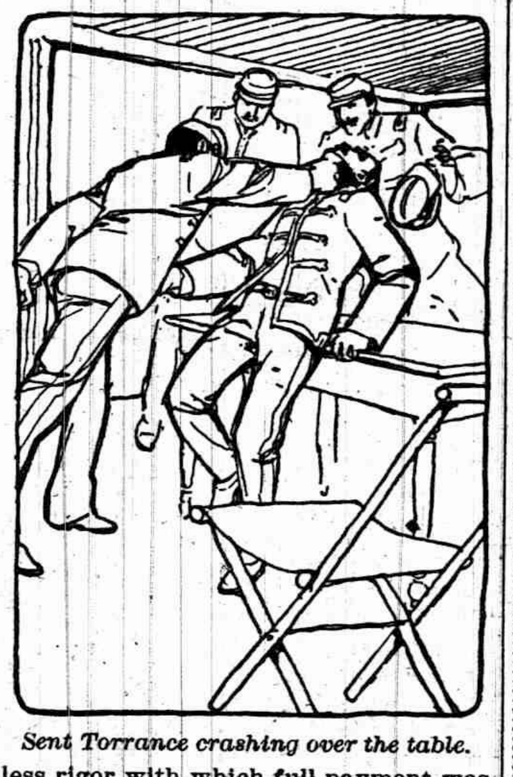
It was an odd moment for Langdon. He would have been at a loss to know what to do or say had not the girl herself, with merry words and laughter, relieved the situation of its embarrassment.

That was the beginning. They met frequently that summer. They parted in the fall, when he went to his regiment, he utterly infatuated, she half delighted, half regretful. She couldn't think of marrying in the army, she said. She admired it and him of all things, but that was all. Twice in that first year he managed to get leave and to go to her and plead again. He had some little money beyond his pay. He felt that he could support her in comfort, but he little dreamed of the scope of her desires. He was kept blind to the fact that she had hopes and ambitions far beyond his. Then one day the sudden death of a senator shocked the community, and Langdon, reading the news, never imagined the influence it was to have on his life. His letter of condolence to her brought an answer that was more than kind. Their marriage was sudden, but immensely "swell." She came with him to the regiment a few months, "stunning" everybody by the elegance of her toilet and the extravagance of her ideas. Then she declared she could not bear garrison life and pined for Washington. She got him a detail on staff duty, and he would not go. His place, he said, for a few years at least must be with the regiment. She went without him, and presently he was bombarded with bills the payment of which swamped him—took his last cent. It mattered little, she said. Senator Spotts' only sister, his elder by several years, was to leave her every penny, and indeed in the hard times for him that followed more than once that he knew of and more than twice that he knew not of that sorely tried maiden came to his rescue with checks of startling size. Then there came rumors that the lovely if volatile Mrs. Langdon was flirting desperately at the capital, and one of the very best young "duty" officers in the regiment was beginning to look haggard and shabby. She got him to sign notes far beyond his pay to meet her needs, promising that "Cousin Spotts" would meet the notes. They began to fall due just as that amiable lady was taken to her grave, and then the will was contested, the legal heirs won, and Mrs. Langdon had to begin parting with jewelry, not to meet these notes, but her own cravings. Then came more bills, more debts, morphine.

Such were three years of Eric Langdon's married life. The next and last was the worst. Striving all the time to stick to his duty and keep up appearances, he was wearing himself out in the vain hope that his military record for efficiency might offset the terrible stigma of these pressing debts. Now the creditors were becoming importunate and raining their complaints upon his colonel and the war department. No matter how or by whom contracted, the debts were held to be his, that he was accountable for all. By the time he was 27 and finishing his fourth year of service with the regiment Eric Langdon looked like the patriarch of the subalterns, with his lining face and sad dark eyes, and when during the next year the news came that his wretched helpmate—save the mark—had breathed her last in a "retreat" everybody said, "Blessed relief."

And yet, poor lad, he mourned her and went and wept over her grave.

Then he came back to the regiment to face curious glances and those thousands of debt. Among the junior officers there were a few brave boys like Woodrow and Rodney May who strove to cheer and sustain him. But Torrance, who had "struck it rich" at Fortress Monroe and married an inane young woman of much wealth, was intolerant of a fellow at his wits' end for money, and there was a captain in the garrison who developed into one of Langdon's persecutors. This was Felix Nathan. Nobody in 1870 could have traced Nathan's antecedents. He shunned the topic himself and left to others the comforting theory that they were in some way connected with the pawnshop. He had been commissioned in the infantry at the instance of the Hon. Mr. Steinmeyer, who represented in congress a wealthy if inconspicuous district in New York. He found a few months' sojourn in a fighting regiment on the far frontier so utterly to his distaste—the mere mention of Indians would turn him livid long years after—that when the army was reorganized he literally bought a transfer into the artillery, where the splendor of his attire and a certain Germanic cast of feature won him the title of "the Baron" or sometimes Herr von Fertigen Kleidern. Certain pecuniary loans with which he favored some of his new found comrades gave him at first a glamour as of generosity. The remorseless rigor with which full payment was later exacted—at most inconvenient times and conspicuous places—removed the glamour.



Sent Torrance crashing over the table.

But the artillery works and polishes. Nathan had to work, drill and study. He was no fool. He labored with his dancing master and speedily shone in both the ballroom and in ballistics. They had sent him to Fortress Monroe in hopes of damping his desire to remain in the artillery, and he mastered the course with comparative ease. They "put up jobs" at his expense at mess by the introduction of sausage and spareribs in undue proportion, and Nathan said he feared they didn't know the good from the bad, sent "home," he said, for dainties and amazed them with the quality and quantity of sausages shipped to him.

Runaway Horse Killed.

John Maus, employed at Grinnell Bros.' music house, was driving along Locust street about 2 o'clock this afternoon when the horse became frightened at a street car and started to run. Maus turned the animal down Church street and in a moment lost control of it. In front of the Central school Maus turned the animal to the left to avoid a buggy driven by Ed. Bassett, and in doing so reined directly in front of a double team belonging to Joe Moore, which was hitched in front of the building.

The pole of Moore's wagon struck Maus' horse squarely in the chest, penetrating several inches. The pole was removed, but the horse bled to death before it could be unhitched. Maus escaped with a good shaking up. J. F. Miller, manager for Grinnel Bros., valued the horse at $125.

Maus has only been in the employ of the firm this week and feels the accident deeply. — Saturday's Adrian Times.

Last Evening at the Car Shops,

A. S. TITUS,

Fireman on the Detroit Southern, Was Badly Scalded by Steam.

Last night at 10:30 as A. S. Titus was working on an engine in the car shops, he tried to tighten a bolt on the steam gauge. His wrench slipped and opened it, the steam pouring over his body from his shoulders to his knees. Dr. North was telephoned for immediately, Tansley's ambulance sent for and he was taken home, after being made as comfortable as possible. Mr. Titus will be laid up for sometime, but will undoubtedly get along all right now.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Monroe, Mich., June 24.—Footsteps on a porch early yesterday morning awakened the family of J. W. Foster. Jay Foster, aged 18, picked up a shotgun and went to the front door to investigate. He fired both barrels into a tree that overhung the porch to scare away the supposed burgulars, and the body of William Breckenridge came crashing through the branches. Breckenridge was instantly killed by the heavy charge of shot.

Jacob Wilcox who was stricken with paralysis while at work a few weeks ago, died Sunday at 9 o'clock. Has lived at Dundee since a boy, and served as soldier in the war of the rebellion, a member of the 1st Mich. cavalry. Was aged 67 years. Leaves family of three sons and three daughters. Funeral was attended at his residence Tuesday afternoon Rev. Lowry officiating, and remains taken to Azalia cemetery for burial.—Dundee Reporter.

Hudson Gazette:—The Lake View hotel at Devil's lake had a narrow escape from being consumed by flames last Saturday night: and as it was, got a good hard scorching. Some one threw a lighted match into a box of waste, in the lamp room, which immediately broke into a gush of flames, and made things lively for a few minutes. The lamp room was badly damaged, but the water supply system in the hotel was put into active service as soon as the fire started, and had the flames under control in a short time. It took a lot of hard work to save the building, and Mr. Hampton says he isn't looking for any more trouble with fires.

LINCOLN ADOPTED IT.

His Famous Phrase, "Of the People," Originated by Theodore Parker.

William H. Herndon, Lincoln's law partner, knew Theodore Parker well and had much correspondence with him, and after the Lincoln-Douglas debate he came on to Boston and saw Parker and other antislavery men with an eye to Lincoln's political prospects. Going back to Springfield, he took with him some of Parker's newer sermons and addresses. "One of them," he says in his "Abraham Lincoln," "was a lecture on 'The Effect of Slavery on the American People,' which was delivered in the Music hall, Boston, and which I gave to Lincoln, who read and returned it. He liked especially the following expression, which he marked with a pencil and which he in substance afterward used in his Gettysburg address: 'Democracy is direct self government, over all the people, by all the people, for all the people.'" The address referred to (Parker's last great antislavery address) was delivered July 4, 1858.

Here, I submit, was the probable origin of Lincoln's phrase. In one variant or another it was a great favorite with Parker, often taking the exact form that Lincoln gave it, with his sure intuition of the best where there was any choice of words. In a speech delivered by Parker in 1850 we find it imbedded in a passage which might have been the inspiration of Seward's famous "irrepressible conflict" or Lincoln's "house divided against itself," a view to which Parker continually recurred. In two other speeches it stands "government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people." Its earliest appearance that I have discovered in his writings is in a letter to Rev Samuel J. May in 1848, where it is simply "government of all, by all, for all."—Review of Reviews.

DOGS ON THE STAGE.

Leaping For the Villain's Neck—A Very Sensitive Animal.

Four legged animals in drama are of course a very common sight today. Although they are often of far more importance than the mere super, they have an affinity to that class, for theirs is no speaking part, unless one counts the bark of a dog as such.

A little time ago the writer met an actor who was taking the part of a villain in a play wherein a big mastiff seizes him at the back of the neck just as he (the villain) was about to murder the heroine. "Nasty part, that of yours. How do you manage to escape nightly being bitten by that big brute of a dog?" "Not a nice part, it is true," he answered, "but the dog is well trained. He is kept without food for a few hours before the show. A piece of cooked liver is tied to my neck. He is held in the wings till the cue comes, then he rushes on to me for his supper, and the curtain goes down on a very effective tableau. I don't object to the dog. It's the liver."

The mention of stage dogs brings to mind an amusing incident that occurred in a well known theatrical agent's office last summer. In came a rough looking little man wearing a check suit that once used to speak out for itself, but was now silenced by the heavy hand of time. The man was followed by a dog of attractive appearance. The visitor said he did a "tramp act," assisted by the animal. Then they gave an exhibition of themselves and were certainly above the average. "What are your terms?" the agent queried. "Ten pounds a week." "I'll give you two." The imitation tramp—but he was not far from the real thing—looked with a sad, reproachful eye at the agent and silently backed out of the office, the dog meekly following. However, within a few seconds the man returned, quickly closing the door to exclude his partner, who clamored to get in. "I'll take it," he said in a hurried whisper. "Where's the contract? I'm real broke, so it's a clear case of push; but, for heaven's sake, don't mention the price where the dog can hear you."—Chambers' Journal.

MOST PEOPLE LOPSIDED.

Differences Between the Legs, Eyes and Ears of Men and Women.

The two sides of a person's face are never alike. The eyes are out of line in two cases out of five, and one eye is stronger than the other in seven persons out of ten. The right ear is also, as a rule, higher than the left.

Only one person in 15 has perfect eyes, the largest percentage of defects prevailing among fair haired people. Short sight is more common in town than among country folk, and of all people the Germans have the largest proportion of shortsighted persons.

The crystalline lens of the eye is the one portion of the human body which continues to increase with the attainment of maturity.

The smallest interval of sound can be better distinguished with one ear than with both. The nails of two fingers never grow with the same rapidity, that of the middle finger growing the fastest, while that of the thumb grows the slowest.

In 54 cases out of 100 the left leg is shorter than the right. The bones of an average human male skeleton weigh 20 pounds, those of a woman are six pounds lighter.

That unruly member, the tongue of a woman, is also smaller than that of a man, given a man and a woman of equal size and weight. It may be appalling to reflect, but it is nevertheless true, that the muscles of the human jaw exert a force of over 500 pounds.

The symmetry which is the sole intelligible ground for our idea of beauty, the proportion between the upper and lower half of the human body, exists in nearly all males, but is never found in the female. American limbs are more symmetrical than those of any other people. The rocking chair, according to an English scientist, is responsible for the exercise which increases the beauty of the lower limbs. The push which the toes give to keep the chair in motion, repeated and repeated, makes the instep high, the calf round and full, and it makes the ankle delicate and slender.—Exchange.

When Irving Forgot Himself.

Ben Webster, an English actor, told a good story of how he held his own when Sir Henry Irving happened to be absentminded. In the "Lyons Mail" there is a touching scene between Lesurques (played by Irving) and his daughter Julie, of which Didier (Mr. Ben Webster) is a perfectly silent witness.

One night Sir Henry, instead of making his long speech, appealed in trembling tones to Mr. Webster: "Speak to her, Didier; speak to her!" Didier was dumfounded. There was an awful pause. Irving, quite unconscious of his own mistake, frowned wrathfully at the young actor, but Mr. Webster, equal to the occasion, gave way to a burst of tears and exclaimed, "I cannot; you know I cannot speak!" and turned his back on the audience.

Then Sir Henry picked up his lines with a start, and it was observed that Didier's shoulders shook with emotion! —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Consideration.

"My wife is very considerate," said the newly married man. "She is always buying me neckties and colored shirts."

"And I suppose you are considerate and generous in your turn."

"Yes. I wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world. I wear 'em."—Washington Star.

The Telephone Situation

The Independent Companies Have Unquestionably the Best of it.

THEIR CLAIMS FULLY ADMITTED BY PRESIDENT JOHN I. SABIN, OF THE CENTRAL UNION (BELL) COMPANY.

Two remarkable statements, made on the same day, in localities wide apart, by two leading exponents of the rival interests.

Hon. S. P. Sheerin, of Indianapolis, Ind., reads a paper in Buffalo, at the convention of the Independent Telephone Association of the United States, and Mr. John I. Sabin issues a circular in Chicago, on the same day, strongly corroborating Mr. Sheerin.

Extract from Mr. Sheerin's paper:

"I feel that you will pardon me for talking a little about my own state of Indiana, by way of illustration:

"We have had a most desperate fight in Indiana for the past five years—notably for the past two years.

"When the first independent telephone exchange was constructed in Indiana, the Central Union Telephone Co. had been paying, for 12 years, on a capital of $6,300,000 (three-fifths of which was pure water), annual dividends ranging from 4 to 6 per cent. They had no bonded indebtedness, and no floating indebtedness that was reported.

"When the fight with the independents began they ceased paying dividends—the last one being paid in 1895. In 1897 they borrowed two and a half millions of dollars; in 1899, they borrowed six millions of dollars, two and a half millions of which was set aside to pay the holders of the first mortgage of two and a half millions.

"They now have, in addition to this $6,000,000 mortgage (according to recent publications), a floating indebtedness of $1,250,000.

"Now let me tell you what all this has resulted in: The Central Union now have (as shown by their own figures) 22,000 telephones in the state. (The real number is smaller than this, but we can afford to be generous, and I propose to give them all they claim.)

"The Independent Telephone interests have in the state of Indiana, by actual count, 52,469 telephones. I know you will excuse me if I repeat those figures:

"After a 'war expenditure' of seven and a quarter million dollars, begun upon the Independent movement when there were less than 3,000 independent telephones in the state, the Central Union now has, for its expenditure, 22,000 telephones and the Independent movement has 52,469.

"The total population of Indiana (according to the census of 1900) was 2,516,000. There are 92 counties in the state, and there are 27 of these in which the Central Union (or any other Bell company) has no exchange—large or small.

"The population of these 27 counties aggregates 491,000, and the aggregate number of Independent telephones in these 27 counties is 14,262. The total number of Central Union and other Bell company telephones, used at toll stations only, in these 27 counties is 197.

"I submit this Indiana statement more especially for the benefit of our friends in different parts of the country, who are just beginning their fight with the great monopoly. If you ask how they fought us, I can simply say—every way.

"Of the millions invested in the Independent Telephone business in Indiana, less than $100,000 has come from outside of the state. More than that, the business is practically out of debt. The total indebtedness upon the Indiana Independent Telephone property is less than 10 per cent of its total value.

"In this great success the farmers and villagers of the state have been of incalculable help. They realized (as all sensible men similarly situated must have realized) that their only hope was in becoming a part and parcel of the great independent movement."

Interesting Comparison.

To the Editor:

In explanation of the above, the Central Union Telephone Co. is the Bell organization in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, except in the counties in which are located Cleveland, Cincinnati and Chicago.

The Independents in the territory occupied by the Central Union have subscribers' "stations" or telephones as follows:

Ohio	60,752
Indiana	52,469
Illinois	51,000
Iowa	41,000
Total	205,221
Central Union (Bell)	70,000
Excess Independents	135,221

Trusting the above will give you the desired information, I am yours truly,

J. B. WARE,
Pres't State Association.

Extract from Mr. Sabin's circular:

NEEDS 5,000,000 AT ONCE

Central Union Telephone Stockholders Astounded.

(Chicago Tribune.)

John I. Sabin, the new president of the Central Union Telephone Company, stirred up his stockholders yesterday by issuing a letter saying that they must furnish $5,000,000 if they want to save the company.

So extreme a step is almost without a precedent in La Salle street, and President Sabin's letter created much interest. Its receipt was followed by an immediate decline of 9 points in the stock of the company from the closing price on Saturday. Singularly enough the 9 points represent a gain in the stock which was made upon the announcement recently that Mr. Sabin would become president of the company. After a two months' examination he finds liberal expenditures "imperatively necessary."

Mr. Sabin says that the net revenues will not allow extensions rapidly enough, and that in his opinion the most practical way of getting the money is one of the following three:

"1. For you to agree to a voluntary assessment of $20 a share immediately, $20 a share before Dec. 31, 1901, and $20 a share during 1902.

"2. For you to agree to loan the company the same funds, at the same time, at 4 per cent interest.

"3. For you to agree to purchase your share of the unissued capital stock of this company at par. The amount is $3,000,000."

Mr. Sabin says in effect that the measures he proposes are necessary in order to preserve the company from "dry rot." He does not gloss over facts in the least, and goes as near saying that the company is in extremely bad shape as anyone could without saying it in so many words.

Money Needed Without Delay.

His letter says:

"After two months' investigation—the last month in charge as president—I find it is imperatively necessary that at least $3,000,000 be provided without delay, that is, one-half immediately and one-half before the close of the present year, 1901; with a call for another $1,000,000 during the first half of the year 1902, and one more for the same amount during the last half of 1902, making a total of $5,000,000.

"(This sum in addition to the net income during the period named.)

"The issue of bonds under present mortgages has reached its limit. If the great majority, practically all of the shareholders, will not agree to one of these three propositions, nearly all new work must stop and that simply means going backward instead of forward.

"There is no use crying over spilled milk, or abusing one another for things not accomplished. The people of the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Iowa want telephone service. Will you supply it or must someone else?

"Are you doing it with fewer than 70,000 stations? No. When you have 100,000 exchange stations then you have a good start, not before.

"When you have 150,000 exchange stations, at proper rates, you will have a plant upon which you can earn something, with which to build up the second 150,000. (Your territory needs 300,000 stations.)

"With your present 70,000 stations, the great majority of them at insufficient rates, thousands of them absolutely without charge, you cannot build up anything except opposition.

"You are not satisfying the public, because your system does not reach far enough. There are scores of villages and small towns, taken as a whole, that should have 50,000 telephones, and in which the Central Union Telephone Co. has not a single instrument.

"The opposition is not satisfying the public. The property is yours, not mine. Do you want to build it up to the proper standard? Time is the very essence of value to your property.

"What you want done must be done now. Later on, and a little later at that, it will be too late.

"Will you agree to No. 1? Will you agree to No. 2? Will you agree to No. 3? I am sure 70 per cent of our stockholders will agree to either 1, 2 or 3. What will you do about it?"

An Abbreviation.

A colonel of a British regiment in South Africa who was repairing a railroad after one of General De Wet's many breakages discovered a fine empty house, which he proceeded to occupy as headquarters.

When the news of the colonel's comfortable quarters reached Bloemfontein, he received a telegram which read:

"G. T. M. wants house."

The colonel was unable to make out what "G. T. M." meant and inquired of officers, who translated it "general traffic manager."

"All right," said the colonel. "If he can use hieroglyphics, so can I."

So he wired back:

"G. T. M. can G. T. H."

Two days later he received a dispatch from Bloemfontein ordering him to attend a board of inquiry. On appearing in due course he was asked what he meant by sending such an insulting message to a superior officer.

"Insulting?" repeated the colonel innocently. "It was nothing of the kind."

"But what do you mean," demanded his superior, "by telling me I can 'G. T. H.?'"

"It was simply an abbreviation," replied the colonel—"G. T. M. (general traffic manager) can G. T. H. (get the house)."

The Tobacco Taste.

"Even the best judges of tobacco can't always be depended on," remarked a dealer to a reporter recently. "Sometimes their taste goes back on them, so to speak, and remains blunted for a week at a stretch. One of my customers, for instance, is a well to do merchant, who is very particular about his cigars and one of the few real connoisseurs in town. When he is in good form, he can tell more about tobacco on a superficial examination than anybody I know, with the single exception of a dealer who has a big reputation as an expert. About a month ago this gentleman began to complain about a favorite brand of very high class cigars. I knew the goods were all right and advised him to buy something else for awhile. He finally began smoking a pipe and used a cheap cut plug that he declared was the best smoke he ever tried. One day, all of a sudden, his taste returned, and he went back to the cigars. At present the bare smell of cut plug will make him sick. Strange, isn't it? They tell me that the professional samplers of tobacco take a week off every few months and never look at the weed until they return to duty. In that way they keep in condition."—Washington Star.

The Deer's Eyes.

A Canadian hunter tells this incident of how he once came face to face with his quarry and hadn't the heart to fire: "It wasn't a case of 'buck fever,' such as a novice might experience, for I had been a hunter for many years, and had killed a good many deer. This was a particularly fine buck that I had followed for three days. A strong man can run any deer to earth in time, and at last I had my prey tired out. From the top of a hill I sighted him a few miles away. He had given up the fight, and had stretched himself out on the snow. As I stalked him, he changed his position and took shelter behind a bowlder, and, using the same bowlder for a shelter, I came suddenly face to face with him. He didn't attempt to run away, but stood there looking at me with the most piteous pair of eyes I ever saw.

"Shoot? I could have no more shot him than I could have shot a child. Had the chance come from a distance of 100 yards, I would have shot him down and carried his antlers home in triumph, but once having looked into those eyes it would have been nothing less than murder. I have hunted deer since then, but I find the sport affords me little pleasure. Whenever I draw a bead, the picture of those mute, appealing eyes comes before me, and, though it has not prevented me from pulling the trigger, I have always felt glad somehow when my bullet failed to find its mark."—Washington Post.

How Lithuanians Play Dice.

A peculiar dice game is indulged in by the gambling element of Lithuanians in Baltimore.

Gathering about the dice tables in the saloons kept by their fellow countrymen they quickly lose all interest in everything outside of that which is transpiring upon the cloth before them. As they sit or stand about the tables the careworn features of old men contrast strongly with the ruddy faces of the youths. The eagerness with which the players seek the numbers upon the falling pieces is wolfish in its intensity. Comparatively small sums are placed upon the game, and side bets run from 5 cents to $1.

Although resembling in the manner in which it is operated the high dice game as played by the Anglo-Saxon races, the dice of the Lithuanians, instead of numbering from 1 to 6, run from 1 to 10, the numbering of the six sides being 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 10. The game is played with four pieces, and a possible 40 is the point striven for instead of 24, which is high mark in the similar American game.—Baltimore Sun.

A Misplaced Letter.

The transposition of letters in the same word sometimes produces the most ludicrous results. In "The Still Hour," which was written by Professor Phelps, is the fine line, "The stillness of the hour is the stillness of a dead calm at sea." A large number was printed and disposed of before it was discovered that "clam" had been printed for "calm."

A Heavyweight.

"And then," she said in telling of the romantic episode, "she sprang to his arms."

"She did?"

"Of course. Do you doubt it?"

"Oh, no," he replied, "but after seeing her I can't help thinking that it must have jarred him quite a bit."—Chicago Post.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, Passenger Engineer on the M. C. Ry. residing at No. 214 Orange St. Jackson, Mich., says:—

"In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more presistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidneys secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than any expectation that they might help me. Now, I want this thoroughly understood, when I finished the box I went back to work without an pain or ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a secend box. Since that time, and that is three years ago, I have had neither ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder that at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Why Dinah Wept.

Not long ago a lieutenant in the navy was ordered away on a three years' cruise. The order had been dreaded for weeks, and when it came the young wife, who was to be left in a Brooklyn flat with a baby and a colored servant, was in despair.

She controlled her sorrow very well, however, until the actual moment of parting came, and then she wept as though her heart would break. The cruiser was to leave the navy yard early next morning, and the lieutenant had gone to report for duty.

In the midst of her lamentations the young wife heard a sniffing and sobbing in the dining room, and upon glancing through the door she saw Dinah, the colored maid, rocking her body to and fro in a chair and weeping violently.

"Why, D-D-Dinah, what's the m-matter?" cried the mistress. "You seem to t-t-take Mr. Blank's departure as much to heart as I d-do."

"'Deed I doesn't, Mis' Blank; 'deed I doesn't!" sobbed Dinah. "What am boderin dis chile am de fac' dat a cullud gemman friend o' mine am gwine sail hisse'f on dat same ole cruisah!"—New York Herald

Some Exploded Food Fallacies.

Fish as a food of the brain worker must be consigned to the limbo of vanities, though certain forms of fish are the cheapest of all foods, notably the bloater. Oysters and turtle soup are frauds. It would take 14 oysters to equal the nourishment of one egg and 223 to provide the same amount of nutriment contained in a pound of beef.

Salt fish, especially salt fat fish, is the most valuable food for the poorer classes, and whole races in the south of Europe live on the Newfoundland cod. Canned salmon we see at 18 pence a pound is no more expensive than cod at sixpence. Millions of people live on it, and the North American settler who is not well provided with cash finds it a good substitute and change from flesh meat at times.

Frogs' legs are not of high nutritive value, which need not surprise us. Turtle soup from the chemist's point of view is not worth a tenth of the price paid for it.—Exchange.

SOME CURIOUS CHURCHES.

Congregations Which Meet In Inns, Windmills and Boats.

A public house is one of the last places one would expect to be used as a place of worship. The inhabitants of Twyford, a village near Winchester, would not consider this at all a novelty, because for several years past the Phœnix inn has been used Sunday for religious purposes. The room in which the religious services are held will comfortably hold about 200 people and opens at the back on to a pretty tea garden. The most remarkable feature of the services is that they are often conducted while the public house is open for business purposes, and the customers can join in the singing if they are so disposed.

There are two or three instances of public houses which have been converted into churches, and there are also two or three theaters which are now places of worship. The Fen district possesses a canalboat church. There are a large number of people who live some distance away from any church, and the canalboat church travels from place to place for the benefit of such folk. The boat will seat a congregation of about 100.

The old chapel of ease at Tunbridge Wells has a unique situation. It stands in two counties and three parishes. When the clergyman leaves the vestry, he comes out of the parish of Frant of Sussex. If he is going to officiate at the altar, he walks into the parish of Tunbridge, in Kent. If, on the other hand, he is going to preach the sermon, he walks from the parish of Frant to the parish of Speldhurst on his way to the pulpit.

The chapel at Milton Bryant is situated in the village pond. The reason for the selection of this strange site was because no landowner would would grant any other position.

The "windmill" church near Reigate is familiar to London cyclists. Not so familiar is the underground church at Brighton. Owing to some "ancient lights" difficulty, the authorities could not "build up," and as the site was a good one they decided to "build down."—London Mail.

There is a patch of ground in Colorado, six miles by three, which yields $20,000,000 worth of gold a year and will not be worked out for a century.

KILLED BY HOBOES

Henry Lyinger Clubbed to Death in Berrien County

VICTIM OF TRAVELING PESTS

His Body Was Bruised as if He Had Been Beaten With a Heavy Club, and the Sheriff Is Looking Into the Matter.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 9.—News has reached here of the murder of Henry Lyinger. The body was found on the Three I tracks near Baroda, a small town south of this city. It is a result of the hobo situation in the southern section of the county, which is the worst in many years and which is becoming alarming.

A week ago Lyinger was walking into Baroda, when he was attacked by a band of hoboes and left for dead, being robbed of $19. He was terribly mutilated. One of his ears was all but severed from his head. He received medical treatment and returned to try to locate the robbers and get his money back. He was evidently surprised by a gang of hoboes. His body was bruised as if he had been beaten with a heavy club. The sheriff is investigating.

DOES ANYONE KNOW HIM?

Man Found Dead on the Lake Shore Railroad Track.

White Pigeon, Mich., July 9.—The body of a well-dressed laboring man was found lying beside the Lake Shore tracks, one mile southwest of this village, with the head crushed beyond recognition. Indications are that the stranger fell asleep on the track or death was the result of a deliberately planned suicide. A small amount of money was found in the pockets of the dead man's clothing.

Found Their Horses.

Ypsilanti, Mich., July 9.—A committee appointed by the farmers' vigilance association of this vicinity returned from Cleveland, and they announce that they found the horses stolen from Fountain Watling and Horace Laflin last year and also harnesses, stolen blankets, etc. J. L. Hunter and George Jarvis have recovered at Cleveland the two horses taken from them last March. The evidence so far is against Fred Shoemaker of Toledo, whose arrest led to the above discoveries.

Welcomed Home.

Hudson, Mich., July 9.—After serving two years with the Forty-seventh volunteer infantry in the Philippines, Samuel Darr and Ira Robinson reached this city yesterday afternoon, 40 days after leaving Manila. Both young men live in Medina township and enlisted at Adrian in 1899. Their return was the cause of a happy demonstration at their country homes, everybody turning out to welcome them.

SWEEPING INJUNCTION.

Judge Wing Issues One Against Striking Molders of Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., July 9.—Judge Wing of the United States circuit court issued a sweeping injunction against the striking molders on the application of the Otis Steel Co. of this city. It enjoins local No. 218 of the Iron-Molders' Union of North America from picketing the premises or interfering in any manner whatsoever with the business or the employes of the Otis company.

The court holds in effect that picketing is unlawful; that it consists of "organized espionage on the part of the union or others who are doing the picketing of the premises or the employes of the firm in question."

Commenting on the claim of the molders to the effect that their efforts had entirely been confined to persuasion, the court said:

"Persuasion of itself, long continued, may become a nuisance and unlawful."

PAUL NEUMANN DEAD.

Popular at Honolulu and Well Known in Washington.

Honolulu, July 3, via San Francisco, July 9.—Paul Neumann died early this morning of paralysis of the brain, aged 68. He was one of the best known and most liked citizens of the islands and his sudden death was a great shock to the community here. He was a very popular member of the bar and had been mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility since the reports of Dole's possible resignation.

Neumann represented the Hawaiian government at Washington and in various other capacities before annexation. In 1893 he represented Queen Liliuokalani at Washington during the troubles that followed the overthrow of the monarchy. Under King Kalakaua he held the post of attorney-general. Before coming to Hawaii he lived in California, where he served three terms as a state senator. Neumann was born in Prussia. One of his sons is a cadet at Annapolis.

THE BOER DEFI.

No Peace Without National Independence, Say They.

London, July 9.—The British government has issued further South African correspondence concerning the peace negotiations which concludes with the text of the proclamation of Messrs. Schalkbugher and Steyn, cabled by Lord Kitchener to the government July 2 and read by Mr. Brodrick in the house of commons the night of July 4.

Messrs. Schalkbugher and Steyn affirm in this proclamation that Mr. Kruger and the Boer depuation abroad make satisfactory representatives; that peace would be worthless without independence; that no peace should be accepted whose price was the national existence, and that in the interests of the colonial brothers, the war would be vigorously prosecuted.

Brought In the Crew.

Boston, July 9.—The Wilson & Furness-Leyland line steamer Cambrian, Capt. Lee, arrived yesterday from London, having on board the shipwrecked crew of the Norwegian bark Hanna, which was wrecked by collision with the Cambrian in a dense fog early on the morning of July 4. The vessel was too badly damaged to be towed and was abandoned off the eastern edge of the Newfoundland banks in about latitude 45 degrees north and longitude 48 degrees west. Capt. Dahl saved the ship's log book, but her papers were lost, together with other property belonging to the captain.

CAPITAL AND LAROR

Greatest Conference of the Times Will be Held Thursday

SO SAYS PRESIDENT SHAFFER

The Best Interests of Both Sides Demand That It Be Held as Soon as Possible so That There Might be an Early Settlement.

Pittsburg, July 9.—"That which I believe will prove the most important conference in the history of capital and labor will open in Hotel Lincoln, Pittsburg, next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, when the highest officials of the Amalgamated association, gathered from all parts of the country, will meet with high officials in the iron and steel industries to settle grave questions.

"Every vice-president of the Amalgamated association from Alabama north is hurrying toward Pittsburg on my telegraphic order. I have considered it best that they be called to confer at this time instead of the regular conferees who have usually met with us to adjust differences.

"As yet I am in ignorance as to who will constitute the committee representing the steel people, the employers. I have been informed that President Schwab of the United States Steel Corporation will be present in person, but do not know this to be a fact. The laboring man is now confronted with some peculiar conditions which I hope will be adjusted at the coming conference. I believe the strike will be speedily settled.

(Signed) "THEO. J. SHAFFER."

The above is the statement made by President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association late last evening as he emerged from the Carnegie building with a party of Amalgamated association officers and officers of the American Sheet Steel Co. It was at the close of one of the most eventful days in the history of organized labor, and was made so by the decided stand taken by President Shaffer in the Wellsville case.

The conference lasted for almost two hours, but what was said or done was not given out, save through the above statement made by President Shaffer. It was evidently decided that the best interests of both sides demanded that the wage conference be held at as early a date as possible in spite of the trouble at Wellsville. It is understood that on hearing the statement of Vice-President Chappell regarding the Ohio situation, assurance was given that it could easily be adjusted and would be. This being the case, the conference was quickly arranged.

President Shaffer desired to be set right before his people regarding his action in passing over the usual wage conferees and placed the matter higher. That the matter might be understood, he dictated the following statement:

"The committee selected by the advisory board is composed of all national officers, trustees and vice-presidents, because this, the general executive board, has greatest power in the Amalgamated association, and as the matter at issue is a general one, not affecting wages or mill conditions, and the last convention having abolished the general conference, this board can best take up a question affecting the general interests."

Mr. Shaffer said further:

"I did announce that I would not treat with the employers until matters were adjusted at Wellsville, and that I would declare a general strike on Thursday if matters were not fixed, but I later changed my mind. I am not at liberty to state what brought this about, but it will come out in good time."

Under the present arrangement, the Wellsville men will remain at work pending a settlement or disagreement on Thursday.

None of the combine representatives would talk on the strike troubles. It is known, however, that Vice-President Arms of the American Sheet Steel Co. received President Shaffer's telegram containing his ultimatum at Youngstown, where he was attending the funeral of his mother-in-law and that immediately after the funeral he came to Pittsburg and the conference was held shortly after his arrival.

The Younger Brothers.

St. Paul, July 9.—The state pardon board has just considered a long list of applications for parole, the most important among them being those of Cole and James Younger, who are now serving life sentences for their connection with the Northfield bank raid in 1876. Their application is made under the provisions of a law enacted by the last state legislature, which gave the state board of pardons power to parole life prisoners who have served 25 years. The state board consists of Gov. S. R. Van Sant, Atty.-Gen. Douglass and Chief Justice Start. A unanimous vote is necessary to secure a parole under the law. The board considered the application but took the case under advisement and reserved its decision.

Rates to the G. A. R. Encampment.

Cleveland, O., July 9.—Information reached the Grand Army executive committee here that the Western Passenger association had made a rate of one fare for the round trip to the Central Passenger association gateway at St. Louis or Chicago to and from the Grand Army encampment in Cleveland in September. From such gateway the rate to Cleveland and return will be that fixed by the Central Passenger association—one cent a mile.

A Brave Little Girl.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 9.—At Griffithsville, W. Va., Minnie Waddell, 12 years old, shot a burglar as he was entering her home during the absence of her parents, and then stood watch through the night over him. The burglar, who will die, has been identified as Walter Morris.

Hot and Cold in the U. P.

Houghton, Mich., July 9.—For a variety of weather this region claims the pennant. The early part of last week it was hot enough to fry an egg on the pavement. Friday night it turned cold and on Saturday morning enough snow fell here and at Calumet to whiten the Quincy hills.

Recovery Doubtful.

Jackson, Mich., July 9.—It was thought that Newell Delamater, a popular Michigan Central switchman who was injured a few weeks ago in the Jackson yard, would escape amputation, but he became delirious on account of blood poisoning and his left leg was amputated. His recovery is doubtful.

MIXUPS AT HONOLULU.

The Senate and House at Loggerheads Over Appropriations.

Honolulu, July 3, via San Francisco, July 9.—The senate and house seem to be at loggerheads in the matter of appropriations. The house has cut down salaries and other expenses and the senate is increasing expenses. The senate laid the first bill for salaries on the table without ceremony. The house has now finished its bills and is waiting for action on the part of the senate, in which there is much doubt and delay.

The new income tax went into effect yesterday assessing a tax of 2 per cent on all incomes exceeding $1,000 per annum. It is expected that suits will be brought to test the law in the courts.

The Marconi company of London has brought suit against F. J. Cross, manager of the Inter-Island Telegraph Co. of Honolulu, for $5,500, alleged to be due for the franchise granted to the company to use the system in Hawaii and £500 for the first year's rental of the system.

SOMETHING WARM.

Mayor Rose of Milwaukee Roasts Cheap Injunctions.

Milwaukee, July 9.—The feature of yesterday's session of the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of the United States and Canada, was the denunciation by Mayor Rose of the injunction against the striking machinists, and his other pro-labor utterances. Before he left the hall the mayor was made an honorary member of the association. In the address the mayor stated that "the mere fact that a cheap injunction had been issued by a cheaper court commissioner will not justify the world in condemning Milwaukee as being in sympathy with the movement against the striking machinists."

President Hayes of the association, in his response, said the object of the glass blowers' association was to make it possible for the workmen to enjoy some of the pleasures of life, but that "in pursuing this object and trying to remain within their rights they were often, as in Milwaukee, hampered by injunctions."

Following these addresses the session was devoted to organization and appointment of committees.

Another Beautiful Day.

Cincinnati, O., July 9.—Another beautiful day greeted the thousands of Christian Endeavorers who are assembled here in their twentieth annual convention. The sudden change in the weather Sunday brought several thousand more visitors to the city yesterday, and the clerks were kept busy until late at night registering the new arrivals. Many meetings were held and all were large and enthusiastic. The music hall auditoriums were in use during the morning, noon and evening.

To Protect Her Interests.

New York, July 9.—A sheriff's jury in the supreme court, Brooklyn, declared Miss Anna King Gilman, half sister of the late millionaire tea merchant, George E. Gilman, insane. The proceedings have been taken in order that her interest in the estate of her half brother might be protected. Miss Gilman, who is now 63 years old, is confined in a private sanitarium in England. She disappeared from Brooklyn in 1887 and was not found until 10 years later in England. It is thought her mind became unbalanced because of many lawsuits in which she was involved at the time.

Considerably Improved.

Warsaw, Ind., July 9.—Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman of New York whose life has been hanging in the balance since last Thursday, has seemingly improved and a considerable change for the better is noticeable in his condition. Dr. Schoonover, who has constantly attended Dr. Chapman, is more encouraged than at any previous period.

Returned to Work.

Waterbury, Conn., July 9.—Most of the 550 machinists who went out on strike May 20 returned to work and the rest are expected to return during the week, the strike having been declared at an end without concessions on the part of the manufacturers.

SHOT HIMSELF DEAD

Son of Ambassador White Commits Suicide

COULDN'T STAND SICKNESS

Young White Was Booked to Sail on the Steamer Deutschland Wednesday on a Visit to His Father and in Search of Health.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 9.—Attorney Frederick D. White, son of Ambassador to Germany Andrew D. White, committed suicide last evening. He had been suffering from neuresthenia. He went to a bath room at his home and shot himself in the head with a rifle.

New York, July 9.—The first intimation that the son of Ambassador White had committed suicide was conveyed by Rev. W. P. Northrup, who was an uncle of Mr. White's wife. Dr. Northrup stated that he had his information from Postmaster D. H. Bruce of Syracuse, who was Mr. White's father-in-law. He stated that the cause for the suicide was ill health, following typhoid fever, nervous prostration as a result to the hot weather which, the doctor says, brought on melancholia.

Dr. Northrup says that young Mr. White was booked to sail on the steamer Deutschland Wednesday on a visit to his father and in search of health.

THE MACHINISTS' STRIKE.

Propositions Submitted for Settlement of the Trouble.

New York, July 9.—Members of the National Metal Trades' association in this city announced that they had received the following proposition from James O'Connell, president of the machinists, for a settlement of the strike:

"1. The question of wages to be arbitrated by districts.

"2. All machinists on strike to be reinstated without prejudice to their former positions, pending settlement by arbitration.

"3. The hours of labor shall be 54 hours a week, which is not submitted to arbitration, the award of the arbitration board to date back to the time the men return to work.

"4. Articles of agreement shall be signed by both sides agreeing to the above basis of arbitration.

"5. The above basis for a settlement of the present strike shall not apply to firms, members of the National Metal Trades' association and others with which we have made settlements."

It is believed than an agreement will be reached within a few days.

A Vigorous Denial.

Milwaukee, July 9.—Business Agent Holmes of the striking machinists vigorously denies the published statement that the machinists' strike in this city was about to collapse. Mr. Holmes stated that the beginning of the eighth week of the strike finds only two men returned to work. Mr. Holmes said that President O'Connell has been under the impression that the local unions were affording the strikers ample support and that President O'Connell would now assist them with large additional sums of money to continue the struggle.

Caused Excitement.

Oklahoma City, O. T., July 9.—Notwithstanding the fact that the provisions of the president's proclamation opening the Kiowa-Comanche country to settlement were generally known beforehand by reason of published reports, there was much interest and some excitement among the large number of homesteaders here. When the first news of the proclamation appeared hundreds of persons grouped about the streets reading the papers and discussing its provisions. The fact that registration cannot be made at the public land office here causes much dissatisfaction. There are 5,000 people here who will register.

Banker Arrested.

Leipsig, July 9.—Town Councillor Bodel, president of the board of supervisions of the Leipziger bank and who was absent in the United States when the bank failed, has arrived here from New York. He was at once arrested by the public prosecutor.

A Lucky Discovery.

New York, July 9.—Raymond Cassonava, Thomas and Robert Ross, three boys, were arrested in Paterson, N. J., and held without bail for attempting to wreck an express train on the Erie railroad. They placed big stones on the track just before an express train was due. A policeman happened to see the obstruction and removed it.

Threatening Fire.

Glasgow, July 9.—A fire which broke out in the exhibition grounds for a time threatened the exhibition buildings and caused much excitement. The flames, however, were confined to a block of tea rooms, which was destroyed.

British Steamer Ashore.

St. Johns, July 9.—The British steamer Delmar, Capt. Williams, from Dundee, June 29, is ashore at Renews, on the east coast of Newfoundland, and a mile from the wrecked Orient Steam Navigation Co.'s steamer Lusitania.

New Turkish Minister.

Washington, July 9.—Chekit Bey, the new Turkish minister, arrived in the city last night from New York. He was met at the railroad station by Ali Ferrouh Bey, the retiring minister, and attaches of the legation, who accompanied him to the Shoreham hotel, where he will remain for a few days.

The members of his family will remain in New York until the minister is ready to take them to the legation residence here.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

MURDER TRIAL BEGAN.

Father and Son Charged With Murdering Lester Parker.

Lake City, Mich., July 9.—The trial of James and Frank Harrison, father and son, charged with the murder of Lester Parker on Christmas night, 1899, began here yesterday afternoon. The crime is alleged to have occurred at a small lumber camp run by James Harrison, six miles southeast of here. All are known to have been drinking heavily during the day and evening of Parker's death. He was found the next morning with his head crushed and body badly bruised. A coroner's jury found his death to be the result of foul play, but no evidence sufficient to warrant fixing the crime upon anyone could be secured until the arrest and conviction of one of the party for burglary during the past winter.

Gambler Badly Used.

Ysilanti, Mich., July 9.—As the result of disputes over the supposed value of the gambling privileges, the professional gamblers who accompany the Buckskin Bill wild west show quarreled with the show men last night, and one of the gamblers was badly used by a party of cowboys, who beat him with their pistols and shot at him as he attempted to run away. The ringleaders on both sides were arrested for assault on complaint of one another and were fined by Justice Childs.

Served Him Right.

Owosso, Mich., July 9.—Jockey George Brown was noticed beating his horse cruelly two miles east of the city limits. Harvey Thomas swore out a warrant and Marshal Rose arrested Brown. Justice McCaughna fined him $10, all within one hour. Anticipating arrest, Brown had filled his pockets with rocks, but was disarmed by the marshal. The jockey inquired what the fine would be for assault and battery on the court. At last reports he was looking for the man who swore out the warrant.

Elected Trustees.

Owosso, Mich., July 9.—At the annual school meeting last night, Chas. A. Byerly and H. Kirk White were elected trustees for the coming term. Byerly is secretary of the local labor union. The sum of $24,000 will be raised by tax to support the schools during the coming year. The board reported that the new central school building, recently completed, and one of the finest in the state, cost less than $75,000. The building is being used as a model by other cities.

He Didn't Get Out.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 9.—Fred Shoemaker, the Cleveland broommaker who is in jail here awaiting trial on a charge of horse stealing, made an attempt to break out of the bastile. He succeeded in digging half way through the brick wall with a piece of gas pipe, when his work was discovered and he was removed to a more secure cell.

Secured an Injunction.

Dowagiac, Mich., July 9.—N. N. Stewart of Kalamazco secured an injunction to prevent the city from issuing $12,000 bonds to the E. & N. W. Ry. Co. The bonds were voted a year ago by the city and are now with a trust company in Chicago. The petition for the injunction was signed by Messrs. Pardee, Rix, Harman, C. W. Vrooman and W. K. Palmer.

None Dangerously Hurt.

Columbus, O., July 9.—An open switch caused an accident in the yards east of the Union station yesterday afternoon which resulted in injuries to a score of passengers on the Pennsylvania's westbound express. None of the passengers was dangerously hurt, their injuries consisting mostly of bruises and cuts caused by broken glass.

Mrs. Armour's Generosity.

Cincinnati, O., July 9.—Mrs. Philip Armour of Chicago, through her attorney, declined to take one-half of the estate of her brother, Frank Ogden, who died recently in Cincinnati. Mr. Ogden left an estate which by his will was to be equally divided between his wife and sister, Mrs. Armour. By the latter's generosity the whole estate will go to the widow.

GONE TO THE VERGE.

He Thought He Had Reached Friendship's Limit.

This young man is not so confiding as he was, and his ideas of friendship are not so exalted. Yet he takes it philosophically and is willing to place a heavy credit in favor of experience.

"I started in a small way," he tells, "and I had an idea that my business would expand rapidly. But I find a good many leaks and drains. Of course you know Jones. He is my friend and knows about horses. So when my one horse went lame I consulted him as being the one friend I had who, I thought, could help me out.

"'Pretty bad shape,' he said as he looked the nag over. 'Need him on your delivery wagon, don't you?'

"I need him or some other horse and asked Jones what I could get for the lame one. He looked him over, felt his legs, examined his eyes and teeth and finally said that, being a friend of mine, he'd give me $40 for the horse. I took it. That same afternoon he sold the horse for $80, a fact I learned about a week later.

"'Now,' said Jones, 'I'm not the man to leave a friend in a scrape. I'll just rustle around and find you another horse.'

"'Thank you, but keep within a hundred. I can't afford to pay more.'

"Next morning my friend showed up with a horse he told me I could have for $98, though he was really worth more. He was sound, gentle, 7 years old, according to Jones.

"He had bought that horse for $60. He had spavin and ringbone, was knee sprung and 13 years old. So Jones had made $78 off me and left me with one of the worst old crowbaits you ever saw. I'm not saying much about it, for Jones is my friend, you know. But an old codger that buys groceries from me says friendship ceases in a horse dicker."—Detroit Free Press.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General
Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

And then in course of time he cut in and won the heiress of the season, and that marriage made him. His wife had most influential connections. They frequently spent summers at Bar Harbor or Newport. They had the most sumptuously furnished quarters in garrison and very "swell" visitors much of the time. They entertained lavishly, and so it came about that their social supremacy was established, not without protest, but it was no use "kicking against the pricks."

All the same, Nathan was mean. He lavished his cigars and champagne on certain of his callers and treated with cold courtesy the others. His wife's chums, if she had any, in the regiment were the two or three whose gowns sometimes nearly matched her own. They distinctly "put on airs" over their fellows, and for a time a weakling of a post commander permitted it, but that was before Melville's day, and Melville was a regimental adoration.

One thing Nathan hated Langdon for was the fact that the latter could "take the battery" and make it do anything. He was a consummate drillmaster and handler of men. Things never went so well as when the captain stepped aside and the lieutenant took command. Regimental critics twitted Nathan with the fact, and it made him furious. If anything could have helped Langdon, it would have been service under some other commander. There were three other captains who would have been glad of his services, but Nathan refused to allow the exchange. Time and again there were sharp disagreements between them, and thrice when Langdon had to appeal the decision went in his favor.

By this time the battery had been made a part of the great western garrison on the Pawnee, where two squadrons of cavalry and four "light" or mounted batteries formed the main features of the command. A veteran dragoon officer was at the head of affairs, a man with much conscience and little sympathy, and the way he "sailed in," as the boys said, to polish up the entire military establishment was a caution. The Nathans gave a sumptuous dinner in his honor about the first thing, and the colonel pitched into Nathan within 48 hours all along of the condition of his horses, to the intense joy of the uninvited, because this was the last thing that dinner was supposed to bring about. Nathan accepted the criticism and said he could not help himself, his lieutenants were so careless. It was at this time that renewed complaints came to headquarters concerning the nonpayment of those notes. Poor Langdon was setting aside a portion of his mortgaged stipend and sending it each month to "preferred" creditors, but the others kept up the growl, and it must be admitted that along about this stage of the game in his grief and despond Langdon had sought solace at times in whisky. All this Nathan reported to his chief when asked about the financial status of his subaltern. Had old "Cat o' Nine Tails," the post commander, consulted the veteran major, who had but recently arrived and assumed command of the batteries, he would have heard a different tale, for Melville knew a soldier and a gentleman when he saw one, and his sorrow for Langdon was expressed in something deeper than words. He made him come to his quarters and spend an evening or two. His wife, his children and a very interesting niece—all seemed to take a hand in Langdon's entertainment, but it lasted only a week or so, for matters were hastening to a climax. The colonel had sent for the young officer, roughly told him that the army was no place for men as deeply involved as he, went on about "neglected duties," frequent lapses over liquor, all of which was grievous exaggeration, yet honestly believed by him to be true, and poor Langdon came away stung, stunned and hopeless.

That night, very late, long after every one but the guard had retired, a fire broke out near the haystacks, and while the men were at work with bucket and hose and the entire command was on duty it was observed by more than one officer that Langdon was perceptibly under the influence of liquor. Sitting up all alone and brooding over his troubles, he had probably taken to the bottle.

Three nights later came a clash. Melville's pretty niece, a wholesome, pure minded girl, was devoted to riding. Melville asked Langdon to take her out, and Captain Nathan, Mr. Torrance and two or three of their set, viewing the performance from afar, made comments thereon in presence of young fellows like May, who liked Langdon more than a little, and it all got to Langdon's ears. He marched straight to the clubhouse. It was just before tattoo, and a number of officers were seated on the veranda chatting, smoking and sipping cooling drinks. Torrance had been chief offender, and him he hailed.

"Mr. Torrance," said Langdon, his eyes ablaze, his lips very white, "you are reported to have said thus and so this afternoon."

"I did," said Torrance, rising from his chair. "What have you to say about it?"

"This!" was the only reply as a stinging blow sent Torrance crashing over the table.

The instant action of officers present stopped further hostilities. Nathan sent Langdon to his quarters in arrest and his company clerk to work. Charges and specifications ten pages drawn out were preferred. No plea was listened to. A court was ordered in due season, and it had no alternative. On a still October evening the order that day received from Washington was formally read to the command, and next morning when the department inspector had them all out for an early review he, without whom reviews seemed hardly complete, looked sadly on from a far corner, a practically ruined man.

But there were friends to go with him to the station after his brief interview with Melville—noble hearted Melville that day—May and Woodrow and others of the boys, besides some scores of "boys in blue" who had slipped away and were bent on giving their pet lieutenant a parting cheer, and there was an incident that became historic.

The railway station was like all far western stations of those days, an ordinary brown frame building with projecting roof overhanging the platform and a broad open space at the gable end, and here it was, in the presence of half a dozen officers and quite a swarm of citizens and "boys in blue" off duty, the memorable rencontre occurred. The instant Captain Nathan stepped from his handsome carriage, with the whistle of the express already sounding far down the Pawnee, he found himself confronted by Langdon, whose dark features took on no flush of the wrath that consumed him, but whose erect and slender form, patent in its athletic proportions even through the simple civilian suit he wore, quivered from head to foot. It was vain for Nathan to dodge. The words came like the sting of a whiplash:

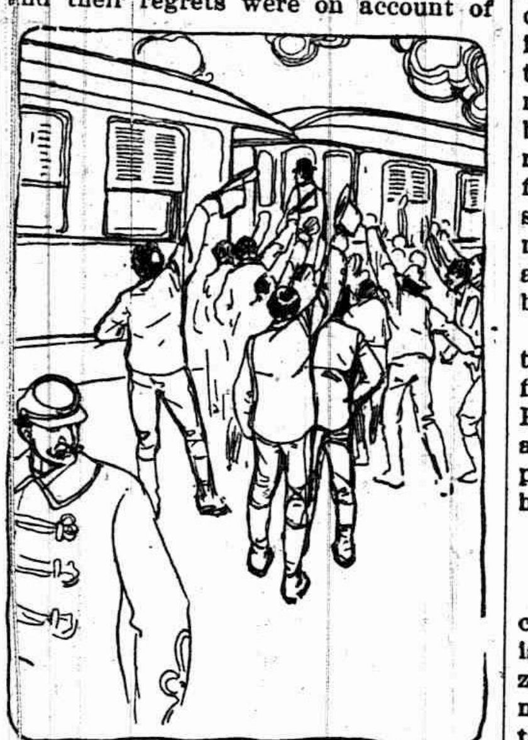
"You are no longer my superior officer, Nathan, and there's only a moment to say my say. Your language at the club this morning has been told me. Now hear my reply. Today we stand, you in the pride of your wealth and power, I with the world to begin again. More than to any man in the regiment I owe my troubles to you. Yet I wouldn't exchange my soldier record for yours if reinstatement were offered me this minute. No! I'm not to be intimidated by any gesture. All I have to say is that if God spares my life before ten years pass our places shall be reversed—you will be at the bottom, I at the top. Now you may go."

CHAPTER II.

Military matters at the great cavalry and artillery post on the Pawnee were not altogether harmonious during the fall and winter following Eric Langdon's departure. There were some things and many soldiers Captain Nathan's money could not buy, and a ruder shock and harsher awakening to his true position this plutocrat batteryman could not well have had than came to him in that scene at the station. He had gone thither to meet and escort to his quarters two prominent and wealthy railway officials from the distant east, one of them a relative of his wife. He had counted on their coming to make a profound impression in the big garrison, and his arrangements for their entertainment included two days of quail shooting, a riding party, some special drills and three or four elaborate dinners, with dancing to follow in the evening. His first impression on catching sight of the crowd at the station was one of complacency—the officers and men were gathered there to get an early glimpse of his distinguished guests. It never occurred to him that Langdon would be going away on that train, still less that any number of the garrison should go to bid him farewell and godspeed. He figured that Langdon would have to hang about the post a day or two settling up his affairs. He had made inquiries as to the amount in which Langdon was indebted to the mess and to the establishment still maintained at the edge of the reservation by the descendants of an old time post trader. When, therefore, he stepped from his stylish carriage as the footman sprang down and opened the door, he was startled and shocked by the apparition of Langdon himself and stunned speechless by that bitter denunciation. Glancing about him, he saw some half a hundred soldiers, with a sprinkling of civilians, and not one face that reflected anything but sympathy for Langdon and dislike for himself. The rush of the incoming train released him from the humiliation of his position, as the men swarmed about Langdon, eager to clasp his hand, while the captain, friendless and alone, hastened to the rear sleeper to meet the magnates. To lead them to his carriage he was compelled to return through a throng of his own men just as the train began to move, and a stentor of a sergeant shouted, "Three cheers for Lieutenant Langdon, the best officer of Battery D!" whereat, with lusty lungs and swinging caps, the soldiers shouted again and again until the train slipped away round the bend under the bluff, and not one of their number had so much as a look, much less a salute, for the captain. It was no time to resort to discipline then. "I'll fix 'em for this when I get 'em back to barracks," he swore to himself, but the sorest hearted, bitterest man to return that morning from the railway to the post was he who rolled homeward in his cushioned chariot, with liveried retainers on the box and untold wealth beside him.

It chafed him, too, that Woodrow, May and other young officers should gallop past him on the homeward way without so much as a peep at his imposing companions or a touch of the cap to him. The magnates were vastly interested in the dashing riding of the party and in May's beautiful thoroughbred and asked questions concerning them which only added to Nathan's keen sense of humiliation and defeat. He couldn't reach May, for that young gentleman was Melville's adjutant and kept his mount in his own little stable in rear of the bachelor quarters. But Woodrow was poor and rode a battery saddle horse, and that evening at stables the captain sent for him and, with cutting emphasis, informed him that the order permitting officers on temporary duty with the light batteries to use a public horse applied only to occasions of drill, parade or prescribed exercise. "No officer in my battery, sir," he concluded, "can be permitted to use my horses to scatter dirt in the faces of my guests and to race impudently past the battery commander without a salutation of any kind." Woodrow stood at attention, saluted, waited a moment and said, "Anything further, sir?" to which Nathan responded, "That's all, sir." And then as, with another punctilious salute, the subaltern was about to turn away the idea that had been uppermost, the sting and humiliation of the morning clamoring for expression, forced from Nathan the very words Woodrow was longing to hear and that he lost no time in rushing off delightedly to tell to his fellows at the club: "There is one matter you need to be warned about and one that, should it come to the ears of the commanding officer, may yet subject you to arrest and court martial, your prominence in that riotous, even mutinous, demonstration at the depot this morning. When officers and men conspire to cheer a person dismissed in disgrace from the army, they attack the administration and are guilty of gross insubordination. I shall not report the occurrence myself because of my known antagonism to such characters as Mr. Langdon, but you'll be most fortunate if the colonel does not hear

Now, Woodrow had taken no part in the cheer—that was a matter confined almost entirely to the enlisted men—but he had no objection whatever to Nathan's believing he did and would have openly rejoiced had Nathan preferred charges against him. It would have been bliss to disprove them. As for the captain's angry rebuke based upon the ostentatious disrespect with which the party of subalterns had charged past his carriage on the up hill drive, Woodrow had no defense to offer. It was a boyish ebullition on the spur of the moment, May having led on with a "Come ahead, fellows! I'm not going to trail behind that dashed pawnbroker," and the rest having impetuously followed. But it was done, and their regrets were on account of the regiment, not for Nathan. It was bad form, as they owned, to show to civilians contempt for a brother officer, no matter how much they might feel it.



"Three cheers for Lieutenant Langdon!"

These episodes growing out of Langdon's departure were the talk of the club and indeed of every household on the post the rest of the week. The inspector general could not help hearing them, but said not a word. The colonel commanding was a sorely perturbed man. He felt that if he did not punish somebody—do something to vindicate the good order and discipline of his command—there would be a rap from department headquarters, possibly from Washington, and this was more than a candidate for the star of a general officer could contemplate with equanimity. He excused himself the moment dessert was over at Nathan's dinner party that evening and, though it was after tattoo, began an investigation of the affair. A dozen of the batterymen and all the junior officers present at the station were summoned to the adjutant's office, and in five minutes he had the facts. There was not the faintest attempt to equivocate or dissemble. Lieutenants May, Woodrow, Sparrowe and Le Duc said they heard the call for three cheers, and May said that, though he didn't shout, he swung his cap and had all the appearance of it. He disclaimed any disrespect for the court, the reviewing authority, the president or the post commander. Mr. Langdon was his best friend. He was sorely distressed at his dismissal, and he did come within an ace of cheering, only he knew Langdon himself would have disapproved. The colonel used some rasping language, in the course of which as a cavalryman he reflected on the sense of subordination and discipline that did not appear to prevail in the batteries, thereby antagonizing every gunner at the post, and then, dismissing the officers with no little asperity in his reprimand, he summoned Sergeant Rancey, an Irish idol in Battery D, and whirled on him with the stern query, "Is it true you called for 'three cheers for Lieutenant Langdon, the best officer in Battery D?'"

"True as shootin, sorr," was the prompt reply.

"Go to your quarters in close arrest, sir," said the colonel, and without the quiver of a muscle of his sun tanned face the Irishman spun on his heel and stalked out. Then Sergeant Blossom, a down east Yankee, was summoned in.

"Did you join in the cheers for Lieutenant Langdon?" asked the colonel.

"Yes, sir," was the emphatic answer.

"Didn't you know that was tantamount to mutiny?"

"No, sir. There was no such thought or intention. We meant to show our sympathy for a beloved officer and an unfortunate man: that was all."

The colonel wheeled impatiently in his chair. He loved the old style soldier, who knew nothing beyond the will of his superior officer. These modern evolutions of soldiers in the ranks, men of education who read and thought for themselves and spoke better English than some of the officers, were thorns in his flesh. He did not know just how to take Blossom, much less what to do with him, but compromised by bidding him stand aside until he had questioned the others. One after another a dozen came in, promptly acknowledged that they had cheered the departing officer, disclaimed all imputation of disrespect and inferentially any expression of regret. Every mother's son of them seemed to wish to be understood as maintaining that he had a perfect right to cheer, and if he hadn't he was ready to take his punishment. "Confound it," said the colonel to his silent adjutant, "if I slap 'em in arrest Nathan won't have a sergeant for duty. The whole battery seems to have been in it. Tell them to go to their quarters—go to grass—go to Ballyhack—but there must be no more cheering. I won't have it."

"There won't be," said his staff officer dryly, "now that Langdon's gone." He, too, had loved the fellow and was sore hearted over his downfall. "There's nobody else they'll be apt to cheer for unless it's Melville."

The colonel turned suddenly and glared, but the adjutant's face was placid and unconcerned as he quietly stepped to the outer room and in low tone bade the assembled throng disperse. Then in silence he rejoined his chief.

"You're always quoting Major Melville," said the latter petulantly. "Is there no one in your own corps worth considering?"

"Plenty," answered the adjutant, "yet none just like Melville. There's the man to straighten out this matter, colonel, if you really want it done."

The Revolution of 1848.

In March, 1848, I had to go over to Paris to finish up some work there and just came in for the revolution. From my windows I had a fine view of all that was going on. I well remember the pandemonium in the streets, the aspect of the savage mob, the wanton firing of shots at quiet spectators, the hoisting of Louis Philippe's nankeen trousers on the flagstaff of the Tuileries. When the bullets began to come through my windows, I thought it time to be off while it was still possible. Then came the question how to get my box full of precious manuscripts, etc., belonging to the East India company, to the train.

The only railroad open was the line to Havre, which had been broken up close to the station, but farther on was intact. In order to get there we had to climb three barricades. I offered my concierge 5 francs to carry my box, but his wife would not hear of his risking his life in the streets. Ten francs; the same result. But at the sight of a louis d'or she changed her mind and, with an "Allez, mon ami; allez, toujours," dispatched her husband on his perilous expedition.

Arrived in London, I went straight to the Prussian legation and was the first to give Bunsen the news of Louis Philippe's flight from Paris. So even a poor scholar had to play his small part in the events that go to make up history.—Max Muller's Autobiography.

Montezuma's Well.

One of the most pleasing natural curiosities in the territory of Arizona is the pool of water known as Montezuma's well. It is situated 15 miles northeast of the old abandoned military post known as Camp Verde. It is 250 feet in diameter, and the clear, pure water is about 60 feet below the surface of the surrounding country. Some years ago certain military officers sounded the pool and found that it had a uniform depth of 80 feet of water except in one place, apparently about six feet square, where the sounding line went down about 500 feet without touching bottom.

The well empties into Beaver creek only about 100 yards distant, the water gushing forth from the rocks as though it were under great pressure. The well is undoubtedly supplied from subterranean sources, possibly through the hole sounded by the army officers years ago. The sides of the well are honeycombed with caves and tunnels, permitting sightseers to descend to the water's edge.

Montezuma's well contains no fish. The flow of water from it is the same throughout the season. Popular opinion has attributed the origin of the well to volcanic action, but as the rock surrounding it is limestone it is more than probable that the action of the water is responsible for its creation.—Native American.

Millions Made by Planting Trees.

Any one who takes a vital interest in the welfare of his grandchildren can insure their being rich by planting trees on treeless land, which land he can leave to them in his will. Some big British fortunes have been provided for in this manner. A predecessor of the present Duke of Athole had a lot of land, but it was not especially valuable—in fact, he was "land poor."

He determined that his descendants should fare better and so began planting trees. In the course of his lifetime he planted 14,095,719 larch trees alone, covering an area of 10,324 acres. His last plantation covered 7,800 acres, which in the ordinary way becomes a forest of mature timber 70 years after planting. Thinned down to about 350 trees an acre, each tree will contain at least 50 cubic feet of timber, which, at 25 cents a foot, gives a sum of $4,375 an acre, a total for the value of the timber on the last plantation alone of $34,500,000.

The whole initial outlay for this plantation, which has so increased the wealth of the ancient house of Athole, is said to have been only about $15,000 for the seedling trees and the cost of the labor of planting them. The maintenance of the wood was paid for out of the profits arising from the sale of young wood when thinning the plantations.

Abe Lincoln.

Of all the great men I have known Lincoln is the one who has left upon me the impression of a sterling son of God. Straightforward, unflinching, not loving the work he had to do, but facing it with a bold and true heart; mild whenever he had a chance, stern as iron when the public weal required it, following a bee line to the goal which duty set before him. I can still feel the grip of his massive hand and the searching look of his kindly eye. I remember that when Lord Lyons, who was a bachelor, went to communicate the news of the marriage of the Prince of Wales to him officially he took the queen's letter in his hand and said, "Well, Lord Lyons, all I can say is, 'Go and do thou likewise.'"—Sir Edward Malet's "Shifting Scenes."

Great Patent Nation.

The United States grants 25,000 patents per annum, or nearly as many as all the rest of the world. England grants 8,000 per annum and France and Germany each about 7,000, and such countries as Canada, Australia, Austria, Italy and Russia grant about 4,000 each. An interesting and hopeful fact is that more patents are granted in proportion to the applications than ever before in the history of the patent office, showing that mechanical genius is not chasing as many rainbows as formerly. American inventive genius is shown in all lines of invention, but it greatly predominates in machinery for manufacturing, transportation and labor saving. Europe and the orient have begun to find that without American industries they would be unable to go ahead.—Success.

When Booth Laughed.

William Mestayer, the comedian, once said: "I never saw Edwin Booth laugh heartily but once. We were playing 'Julius Cæsar' at Baldwin's in Frisco. Booth was Brutus, McCullough was Cassius, Harry Edwards was Cæsar and Charley Bishop and I were plain, everyday citizens. It was the last night of the run, and we all felt frisky. So when Cæsar spoke the well known line, 'Let me have men about me that are fat,' Bishop and I, both fat men, walked boldly up to Cæsar and shook him heartily by the hand. It broke Booth all up, and he laughed outright."

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

BALL GAME.

First Game of the Season was Played Here July 4th.

JACKSON vs. TECUMSEH,

In Which Jackson Wilted and Tecumseh Wins—Score 2 to 5.

Two ball games, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon, were billed for this town on July 4th between Jackson and Tecumseh, but owing to the fact that the Jackson team missed the morning train, they were obliged to play but the one game. Only six innings were played on account of the rain. Although the Jackson team had some of the best players in Michigan, Tecumseh was too much for them. Calhoun and Miller did fine work for the home team. In the fourth inning Spencer was substituted for Messmer in the Jackson team.

USING HIS WITS.

Showing How People May Be Guided by Inference.

"You see," said the man with the bulging forehead and prominent nose, "if people would only be guided more by inference it would save lots of useless trouble."

"I don't understand you," said the man who had been tickling a pimple on his chin.

"Why, for instance, I passed a frozen pond one winter day. On the ice I saw a pair of skates, a boy's cap and a mitten. Out in the middle of the pond the ice was broken. Did I jump to the conclusion that a boy had been drowned and raise a great hullabaloo about it?"

"Of course you did, or else you ought to be prosecuted. You don't mean to say you passed on and said nothing?"

"I do," calmly replied the man of the forehead. "I inferred instead of jumping to a false conclusion."

"But you had to infer that the boy was under the ice," protested the other.

"Not a bit of it. If the boy had fallen in, the skates and cap and mittens would have gone with him. I simply inferred that he had seen a rabbit and given chase. I was right too. In the course of five minutes I met him on the road."

"Oh, you did! And maybe you inferred something else."

"Of course I did. As he had the nosebleed, I inferred that he had fallen over a log in the chase and got left, and he admitted that such was the case."

"Then you ought to have wound up the performance by inferring whether it was a male or female rabbit."

"It wasn't necessary, my captious friend. As I passed on I found the rabbit, dead from overexertion, and it was a male."—Washington Post.

Historical Divisions of Time.

For convenience time is, by historians, usually divided into three great eras—ancient, mediæval (or middle) and modern. The ancient period is considered to extend from the earliest times down to the fall of the Roman empire in the west in A. D. 476; the mediæval from that date to the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492 and the modern from that time to the present. Some historians prefer to put the end of the mediæval period at the capture of Constantinople by the Turks, about 40 years earlier than the Columbus event. The dark ages are often held to be coeval with the mediæval era, but some authorities think that the term should be applied only to the part of the era extending from the downfall of the empire of Charlemagne, in the ninth century, onward.

Short and Sour.

There had been a small bank failure, and the bank had gone into the hands of a receiver. The receiver had proved to be dishonest and had absconded with what remained of the funds of the institution. Expert detectives, however, were on his track, and he was run to earth in a mountain town and taken back to the scene of his financial exploits.

It was after midnight when the detectives arrived with their prisoner, and Mr. Means, the principal depositor in the bank and therefore the principal loser, was awakened at his home and informed by telephone of the capture.

He expressed his gratification and went back to bed.

Shortly afterward he was aroused to receive another telephone message to the same effect from a different source.

"Thanks," he said, "but I had heard of it already. Good night!"

And again he sought his couch.

About 2 o'clock he was awakened a third time. The telephone bell was ringing.

In no gentle frame of mind he answered it.

"Hello!" he said.

"Hello!" responded a voice through the telephone. "Is this Mr. Means?"

"Yes. What do you want?"

"Mr. Means, this is Deputy Sheriff Jones. We've caught that runaway receiver. Is there anything you'd like to have me do personally in the matter?"

"Yes!" roared Mr. Means. "Hang up the receiver!"

And he was not disturbed again.—Youth's Companion.

ENGLAND'S FIRST SHIP.

Great Harry Was the Country's Premier Fighting Machine.

Of the first ship, properly speaking, of the British navy, known as the Great Harry, the following particulars are given in an old number of the Mechanic's Magazine, dated Oct. 25, 1823:

The Great Harry was built by King Henry VII at a cost of £14,000, and was burned at Woolwich, through accident, in 1553.

Though King Henry, as well as other princes, hired many ships, exclusive of those which the different seaports were obliged to furnish, he seems thus to have been the first king who thought of avoiding this inconvenience by raising such a force as might be at all times sufficient for the service of the state. Historians tell us that he caused his navy, which had been neglected in the preceding reign, to be put in a condition to protect the British coasts against all foreign invasions, and that in the midst of profound peace he always kept up a fleet ready to act.

In August, 1512, the Regent, a ship of 1,000 tons, which was at that time the largest vessel in the British navy, was burned, and to replace it the Great Harry, or, as it was also known, the Henry Grace de Dieu, was built in 1515.

The vessel, of about 1,000 tons burden, was manned by 349 soldiers, 301 marines and 50 gunners. She had four masts and portholes on both decks and in other parts.

Before the time of her construction the cannon were placed above deck and on the prow and poop. One Decharges, a French builder at Brest, is said to have invented portholes.

In a list of the British navy, as it stood on Jan. 5, 1548, the Great Harry is said to have carried 19 brass and 103 iron pieces of ordnance.

The name of the ship is supposed to have been changed in the reign of Edward VI to Edward, which, on Aug. 26, 1552, was reported to be still "in good case to serve," and was ordered "to be grounded and calked once a year to keep it tight."—Cassier's Magazine.

BILLIARD CUES.

How They Are Made—America Furnishes the Best.

"Most billiard cues," said a New York manufacturer the other day, "are made in two pieces—the cue proper and the handle. The cue is made generally of maple, and the butt, which is wedge shaped, is inserted into a handle of rosewood, snakewood, ebony, mahogany, walnut or some other fancy dark wood, which is cut to dovetail with the long part.

"The maple wood used in making the handles is sawed into suitable lengths and seasoned. The logs are then split into pieces from which the handles are made. These pieces are called bolts. The bolts are sawed approximately to the shape of the handle to be finally made, and in this shape they are handle blocks. The handle block is turned to the shape of the handle in a lathe, and when the butt has been fitted it is finished and polished.

"The finest and best cues are fitted to the handle or butt by means of a double wedge. At the top of the cue is a ferrule of ivory, of horn or bone, in which the leather tip is fitted. While the ivory ferrule is the most expensive, of course it is less durable than the horn or bone ferrules, which are less liable to crack. The extra workmanship on cues is put in on the butts, some of which are elaborately inlaid and carved in beautiful patterns.

"There are a number of billiard players who will not permit another person to use their cues, and for the use of these particular players cues are turned out from which the tips may be unscrewed, leaving the cue with unfinished points and useless.

"American billiard cues are the lightest, strongest and neatest made anywhere in the world. They are made in all weights and lengths and rank in price from 30 cents to $25 and more each, according to the quality and finish of the article.—Washington Star.

The Lesson He Wanted.

In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," Booker T. Washington tells an amusing anecdote of an old colored man who during the days of slavery wanted to learn how to play on the guitar. In his desire to take guitar lessons he applied to one of his young masters to teach him. But the young man, not having much faith in the ability of the slave to master the guitar at his age, sought to discourage him by telling him: "Uncle Jake, I will give you guitar lessons. But, Jake, I will have to charge you $3 for the first lesson, $2 for the second lesson and $1 for the third lesson. But I will charge you only 25 cents for the last lesson."

Uncle Jake answered: "All right, boss, I hires you on dem terms. But, boss, I wants yer to be sure an give me dat las' lesson first."

A Startler.

A gentleman whose hearing is defective is the owner of a dog that is the terror of the neighborhood in which he lives.

The other day he was accosted by a friend, who said:

"Good morning, Mr. H. Your wife made a very pleasant call on us last evening."

"I'm very sorry," came the startling reply. "I'll see that it don't occur again, for I'm going to chain her up in future."—London Telegraph.

His Bumps.

They were newly married and were calling upon one of the friends of the bride who had been particularly pleasant upon the occasion of their wedding. The bridegroom, apropos of nothing, began to talk about phrenology and told how his wife had discovered two very prominent bumps on the back of his head. He was proud of them. So was she, and she passed him around that the host and hostess might feel the bumps and know of their existence. Then she explained:

"My book on phrenology says that they mean good memory and generosity."

It was evident that she was proud of the facts, and so was he. But the host, being of an inquiring turn of mind, wished to satisfy himself, so he got down a phrenological work from one of his library shelves and after much labor found the bumps on the chart. Turning to the notes, he read, seriously at first, then unsteadily. The bride became suspicious, but she was game and said:

"Read it out loud. Please do!" And the host read:

"These bumps are most frequently found on cats and monkeys."

Other topics consumed the remainder of the visit, which was brief.—New

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder-worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience, a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says:

"For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice, I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; totally unable to lie on my right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain, is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night. I could do my housework as well as I ever could and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

A Book Hunter's Worry.

The worry of finding that a book is incomplete is often to be expected. Often most respectable looking books have a page missing somewhere. One cannot trust even a folio that has been connected with religious houses all its life. It may be invincibly bound in the strongest calf; it may have passed all its quiet, unread days behind glass and be as clean as on the day on which it was issued, and yet page 341 may have vanished.

We once knew a man who had a firm belief in the devil and for this reason: He said that he could hardly count the imperfect books by which he had been misled in his time, and in nearly every case these books had a highly respectable past. They had grown mellow in monasteries or had been carefully tended in great libraries, where they were never touched except to be dusted. It seemed morally impossible that harm could have come to these books, and yet each one had a page missing somewhere. Therefore he was reluctantly forced to the conclusion that the devil was in it. He supposed that when the devil was in need of more quotations he abstracted a page from some little read book, choosing it both in order that he might obtain a reputation for wisdom and also that he might not be found out.

We do not uphold this theory, but we do recommend the book hunter, so far as possible, to collate every book of any importance which he may contemplate buying.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Why They Were Selected.

It has been recorded that General Henry Knox, in 1783, was the "greatest" of 11 distinguished officers of the army, weighing 280 pounds. Noah Brooks, in his book entitled "Henry Knox," gives the following incident relating to the general's full habit:

With a Captain Sargent, he was selected to present the hard case of the starving and naked men at Valley Forge to the attention of a committee of congress. One of the congressmen, wishing to show his wit and sarcasm, said that he had never seen a fatter man than General Knox nor a better dressed man than his associate.

Knox managed to keep his temper and remained silent, but his subordinate retorted, "The corps, out of respect to congress and themselves, have sent as their representatives the only man who had an ounce of superfluous flesh on his body and the only other man who possessed a complete suit of clothes."

Why Buchanan Never Married.

"Mr. Buchanan, who was the first bachelor elected to the presidency, was 65 years of age when elected and had deliberately given himself to a life of celibacy," writes William Perrine in The Ladies' Home Journal.

"In the days when he was a young lawyer of Lancaster, Pa., he had loved Miss Coleman, a beautiful daughter of a citizen of that town. They had been engaged to be married, when one day he was surprised to receive from her a request to release her from the promise. According to Mr. George Ticknor Curtis, the separation originated in a misunderstanding on the part of the lady, who was unusually sensitive, over some small matter exaggerated by giddy and indiscreet tongues. Soon after the estrangement she was sent to Philadelphia and there died suddenly.

"Throughout the rest of his life, or for nearly half a century, Mr. Buchanan is not known to have revealed to anybody the circumstances of this romantic tragedy. He would only say that it had changed his hopes and plans and had led him more deeply than ever into politics as a distraction from his grief. In his old age, long after he had retired permanently to private life, he called attention to a package containing, he said, the papers and relics which would explain the causes of his youthful sorrow and which he preserved evidently with the idea of revealing them before his death. But when he died and his will was read it was found that he had directed that the package should be burned without being opened, and his injunction was obeyed."

Irish Lacemaking.

After the famine of 1847 lacemaking was revived in Ireland. Limerick, the most successful Irish lace, is not really a lace at all. It is tambour work upon net and muslin.

The Irish point, so called, is the ancient cut work, being made in quite the same way.

Net was first made by machinery in 1768. The machine was an adaptation of the stocking loom to lacemaking and was cumbrous and not very effective. In 1809 John Heathcote, a farmer's son, evolved from consciousness and experience the first machine to make true bobbinet with perfect six sided holes. It brought a great hue and cry about his ears from laceworkers, who fancied they saw themselves thus reduced to beggary.

The Luddites broke into the factory where the machines were first set up and made scrap iron and kindling wood of them. The only result was to drive the new manufacture to other and safer quarters. For long the secret of the machine's construction was most jealously guarded by English manufacturers. Not satisfied with letters patent they kept up a coast patrol to make sure that nobody took model or drawings to France.

At last, though, they were outwitted. A discharged workman who had the plan of it in his mind managed to get safe over sea and build a machine in France.

Sort of a Cannibal.

An old farmer for many years got his dinner on market days at a small hotel kept by a widow.

She had long suspected that he ate more than the price (1s. 6d.) warranted, so she determined to test him. She accordingly arranged matters so that there was no room for him at table, but she took him into a private room the table of which was graced by a steaming leg of mutton. He set to in good earnest, and soon nothing was left but the bones.

Highly delighted with his cheap feed, on passing the bar he tendered 2 shillings for his dinner and a quart of ale.

The widow declined to take any payment on the ground of having inconvenienced him so much.

Chuckling to himself, the farmer lifted down his market basket from a hook, and, finding it rather light, he tore off the covering and shouted:

"Here, Mrs. Brown, where's my leg o' mutton?"

"Why, ye old silly," said the widow, "ye have ate your leg for your dinner!"

Conversion Through Pork.

An old Cambridge friend of mine who had a good deal of the wisdom of the serpent in him had a farmer in his parish in Norfolk whom he could not get to church. Whenever he pressed upon him his neglect or his bad example he was always met with the same excuse, "You be too young and do not know enough to teach such as I." At last he gave up the farmer in despair. But one day he happened to pass by the farm while his parishioner was engaged in killing a fine pig. My friend said: "What a pig! Why, he weighs 34 stone!" "What dost thou know of pigs?" replied the farmer. "I only wish he weighed as much." When they next met, the farmer, to his surprise, told my friend that the pig had been found to weight just 34 stone. He added, much to my friend's gratification, "And thou wilt see me at church next Sunday, parson."—Manchester Guardian.

A Crushed Lawyer.

Some time ago a well known San Francisco attorney, who prides himself upon his handling of Chinese witnesses, was defending a railway damage case. Instead of following the usual questions as to name, residence, if the nature of an oath were understood, etc., he began: "What is your name?" "Kee Lung." "You live in San Francisco?" "Yes." "You sabbie God?" "Mr. Attorney, if you mean 'Do I understand the entity of our Creator?' I will simply say that Thursday evening next I shall address the State Ministerial association on the subject of the 'Divinity of Christ' and shall be pleased to have you attend."

Needless to say, a general roar of laughter swept over the courtroom at this clever rally, and it was some minutes, much to the discomfiture of the lawyer for the defense, before order was restored and the examination proceeded upon ordinary lines.—Argonaut.

HIS DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

A Pompous Reception That Amused President Grevy.

M. Severiaro de Heredia, the minister of public works in the Rouvier cabinet during the presidency of M. Grevy, belonged to the famous naturalized Cuban family, of which another member, the Comte de Heredia, is one of the immortal 40 of the French academy. Most of the family have dark skins, suspiciously mulatto, and other negro characteristics. This has, however, in nowise interfered with their standing in Paris, where several of the family have long been prominent. The former minister had also been president of the municipal council of Paris and a deputy from a Paris arrondissement.

His dark skin led to a curious mistake at the Elysee the day after he had been appointed a member of the Rouvier cabinet. According to immemorial custom the new ministers called singly on President Grevy to pay their respects. On the same day, as it happened, an official visit was expected from the president of the republic of Haiti, who was to present his letters to the president. When M. de Heredia arrived in the court of the palace, the minor officials stationed there, who were not familiar with the new minister's features, judged from his complexion that he was the Haitian dignitary. The courtyard became very animated with guards hurrying to and fro to their places, while one of the officers of the president's military household went to inform M. Grevy of the distinguished visitor's arrival.

M. de Heredia received all this with dignified composure, for, never having been a minister before this, he thought this ceremonial was probably the usual one. Finally, with the beating of drums, he was ushered into the reception room, where the chief executive stood ready to receive him. "What," cried he, "it's only you, Heredia!" "Why, yes, M. le President," replied the puzzled minister. Grevy began to laugh. "Well," he cried, "you have been minister only 24 hours and have succeeded in turning my house upside down. What will you do later on?"—Chicago Herald.

CHASED THE SUPER.

The Exciting Race Between Kean and the Stage Hand.

Some strange tales have been told by old timers in the stage business about the Keans, both the elder and the last to be seen on the American stage. Some have said that hard study made them a little wrong at times, and some of the things they did certainly looked queer.

It is told by an old New Orleans horseman, who is here from the Crescent City, that when Kean the younger was playing there he nearly scared a super to death and came near "pinking" him.

It was in "Richard III," in the scene where he sees the ghosts. The stage manager was a bit the worse for drink and determined to have some fun. He did not like Kean, as he was a hard man behind the scenes. Among the supers was a raw Irish lad who had never seen a stage before. The manager told this fellow that if he would run across the stage when he gave him the tip he would stand to earn $2. The poor fellow was broke, and a two spot looked to him like a national bank. He agreed, and the stage manager gave him a gaudy oilcloth banner bearing these words, "Smoke General Jackson Cigars."

It was nearly a panic that this Irish lad started. He ran across the stage, and when Kean saw him he was furious. He made a lunge at the unfortunate super with his sword, and, as the "rag" came whizzing down to a hurry call, he chased the poor standard bearer off the stage, down the passage and to the street. For two blocks he followed him in his Richard costume, and finally the super escaped down a dark alley.

What effect it had upon the show the turfman does not say, but certainly it was only the super's agility of foot that saved him.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wrote Sermons In His Sleep.

Narrating "Some Remarkable Cases of Double Personality," Dr. R. Osgood Mason cites in The Ladies' Home Journal the case of a "young ecclesiastic in the seminary with the Archbishop —— of Bordeaux, France, who was in the habit of getting up at night in a condition of somnambulism, going to his study and composing and writing his sermons in the dark. When he had finished one page, he read it over and properly corrected it. A broad piece of cardboard interposed between his eyes, and his writing made no difference to him. He wrote, read and corrected just the same as if there had been no obstruction. Having completed his work to his satisfaction, he returned to bed, and in the morning he had not the slightest idea of what he had done in the night and had no knowledge of it until he saw the manuscript in his own handwriting."

HARD ON SMOKERS.

Old Time Legislation Against the Use of Tobacco.

It is one of the curiosities of old time legislation that the use of tobacco was in early colonial days regarded by the magistrates and elders as far more injurious, degrading and sinful than that of intoxicating liquors. Both the use and the planting of the weed were forbidden, the cultivation of it being permitted only in small quantities, "for meere necessitie, for phisick, for preservation of the health, and that the same be taken privately by anncient men." But the "creature called tobacko" seemed to have an indestructible life. Mrs. Alice M. Earle writes of these early restrictions about tobacco in "Stagecoach and Tavern Days:"

Landlords were ordered not to "suffer any tobacco to be taken into their houses" on penalty of a fine to the "victualler" and another to "the party that takes it." The laws were constantly altered and enforced, and still tobacco was grown and was smoked. No one could take it "publicquely" nor in his own house or anywhere else before strangers. Two men were forbidden to smoke together.

No one could smoke within two miles of the meeting house on the Sabbath day. There were wicked backsliders who were caught smoking around the corner of the meeting house and others on the street, and they were fined and set in the stocks and in cages.

Until within a few years there were New England towns where tobacco smoking in the streets was prohibited, and innocent cigar loving travelers were astounded at being requested to cease smoking.

Mr. Drake wrote in 1886 that he knew men, then living, who had had to plead guilty or not guilty in a Boston police court for smoking in the streets of Boston.

In Connecticut in early days a great indulgence was permitted to travelers—a man could smoke once during a journey of ten miles.

JAPAN IN WINTER.

Colder In Houses of the Rich Man Than In Open Sunshine.

"I suppose that the American people and the Russians are the only western races that really keep warm in winter. Still those who dwell in other countries admit that they have the same ideal by their inefficient effort to attain to it," writes Anna N. Benjamin in Ainslee's. "The Japanese winter is most trying on account of its continual dampness, but the Japanese are content to remain cold. They make almost no effort to overcome it. The old 'bushido' (chivalrous) idea of the 'samurai' (knights) was that it was effeminate to feel cold, and such is their severe training that they do not really feel it as we do. The wearing of some extra 'kimonos' and the use of a 'hibachi,' or brazier, in which are a few tiny sticks of lighted charcoal, are the only concessions to winter weather. With the 'hibachi' they never pretend to heat more than their finger tips, which they hold over the coals. It is used when the house is entirely open.

"The houses, as every one knows, are built of thin, light wood, and the sliding panels which serve for doors and windows have paper panes. They are as apt to be open as closed during the day. When I took my first jinrikisha ride through the streets of Nagasaki, I forgot my own sufferings in my sympathy for this unhappy nation, which as surely as the cold came endured such misery from it. The coolies wear thin blue cotton clothes and are always paddling through the mud. The storekeepers sit out in their open booths, and the women go bareheaded about the streets. In the houses of the rich the still cold behind the closed panels is often more intense than that outside in the sunshine, where the air is stirring. The schools and public buildings are equally frigid.

"It seemed to me that the only warm things in Japan were the babies, who looked like bundles of gayly colored crape, their round heads covered by knit caps. They slumber peacefully tucked down their mothers' backs. The attempt to keep warm in winter is not entirely a 'modern improvement,' though it goes with western civilization. The Koreans do it very thoroughly, the Chinese to a certain extent. The Japanese, as a race, continue to scorn it as they always have done, and this is merely one of a hundred examples which prove that the Japanese are still true to their traditions in their daily life and as yet little affected in the ordering of their homes by the ideas adopted from the west."

NOVEL CURES.

Unique Methods Employed to Overcome Certain Diseases.

Freezing, baking, illuminating, torturing, frightening and bruising are among the accepted ways of curing certain diseases, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times. For example, the baking cure: When one has a well developed rheumatism, he is placed in a species of stove and the crystals of uric acid are literally melted out of his body.

Another odd cure once tried for rheumatism was burial in damp, warm clay. The first rheumatic burial took place at Menominee, Mich. The treatment was not a success, and this form of cure has been given up.

The freezing cure: This was first introduced by a Swiss doctor, Paul Burdeyront. He placed his patients in sheets immersed in ice water, packing the patient all about with crushed ice. This treatment is today used in typhoid fever cases.

Or the patient is plunged into an ice water bath. The treatment saves many lives. Raging fever above 105 degrees F. has been brought down by these means to normal—98 2-5 degrees—in less than ten minutes.

Neither of these modes of treatment actually freezes one. A physician of Paris, M. Figeau, introduced in 1890 an ammonia vapor method, which really froze the patient. The body was placed in a chamber into which certain chemicals were introduced. Ammonia gas, by sudden evaporation, then produced intense cold, and the blood in the body lost most of its heat.

M. Figeau's method did not meet with success. Some of his patients succumbed to the drastic measures, and the practice was abandoned.

The Wheel Problem.

Which, at any given moment, is moving forward faster—the top of a coach wheel or the bottom?

The answer to this question seems simple enough, but probably nine persons out of ten, asked at random, would give the wrong reply. It would appear at first sight that the top and bottom must be moving at the same rate—that is, the speed of the carriage. But by a little thought it will be discovered that the bottom of the wheel is in fact, by the direction of its motion around its axis, moving backward, in an opposite direction to that which the carriage is advancing and is consequently stationary in space, while the point on top of the wheel is moving forward with the double velocity of its own motion around the axis and the speed at which the carriage moves.

Our System of Notation.

Some system of notation has been used since time out of memory. The first record we have of it is of figures written with a stick on a flat surface covered with sand. Before that all calculations were made with pebbles, beans and the like. Even now the Chinese do their calculating with little stones or beads strung on wires, in a frame. The Romans first used vertical lines—I, II, III, etc.—to express numbers. The Arabic figures, which we commonly use at the present time, are of much earlier date.

The Arabic system is chiefly valuable on account of the great convenience it affords by giving a figure a value according to the place it occupies in the line. By this system the most enormous sums can be expressed by the ten little characters which form the numerical alphabet.

The First Millionaire.

Who was the first millionaire? Solomon? But come down to earth in modern times. Solomon's wealth was fiction, like that of Crœsus, Midas and the rest. Perhaps you remember Pope's lines—

When Hopkins dies, a thousand lights attend
The wretch who, living, saved a candle end.

John Hopkins was generally known as "Vulture" Hopkins from his rapacious method of acquiring money. He was the architect of his own fortune, dying worth $1,500,000 in 1732.—New York Press.

Willing to Hear of It.

A Methodist critic, wishing to put his bishop "in a hole," or, as Dr. William Everett would say, "to deposit him in a cavity," asked in open meeting whether or not the bishop came to the conference in a Pullman car.

"Yes," the bishop cheerfully replied. "Do you know any easier way?"—Boston Christian Register.

HE DID HIS BEST.

Celebrated Musician's Adventure In a Swiss Country Village.

The late Sir John Stainer, one of England's most celebrated musicians and composers, was several years ago in a small Swiss village, and the English clergyman was on the lookout for a musician to assist at the service. Stainer was in the smoking room of the hotel when the clergyman found him and started the conversation with "Do you play the harmonium?" "A little," was the reply of the ex-organist of St. Paul's cathedral. "Will you, then, be good enough to help us out of our difficulty on Sunday? We will read the psalms, and the hymns shall be the simplest I can select," added the delighted parson. "I will do my best," said Stainer, with a smile.

The service passed off all right, but the congregation, instead of rushing away at the close, listened to a brilliant recital. When the parson heard the name of his assistant, he asked him to dinner. "Do you smoke?" he said at the close. "I will do my best," muttered Stainer, and the ensuing laughter was the prologue of an entertaining exchange of Oxford reminiscences.

Stainer was a great story teller. One anecdote he was fond of relating had reference to the days when there were amateur orchestras in churches. The "Messiah" was being sung, and as the line "Who is the King of Glory?" approached the man playing double bass whispered to the violoncellist in front of him, "Let us have your rosin, and I will show 'em who is the king of glory!"—London Tit-Bits.

TAKEN PRISONERS

Japanese Fisherman Marooned on an Unknown Island

BY THE UNION FISHERMEN

Exactly Where the Island Is Located is a Secret of the White Fishermen, But They Chose It Several Weeks Ago for the Purpose.

Vancouver, B. C., July 12.—The developments in the Fraser river strike situation in the past 24 hours have been startling. The union fishermen have now the upper hand, having accomplished a coup d'etat which is without a parallel in the history of the many labor disturbances in British Columbia.

As a result of a battle of small boats out on the gulf, a battle in which many shots were exchanged, but in which no combatant was killed, 16 Japanese were taken prisoners by the strikers. The Japanese boats were overturned, the rifles and fishing gear of the orientals thrown into the water and the Japs themselves taken to one of the small islands far out in the gulf.

Exactly where this island is located is a secret of the white fishermen, for they chose it several weeks ago for occasions such as this. They say they will continue to maroon non-union Japs there for the remainder of the season or until the place is discovered by the authorities. All that is known is that the island is between here and Nanaimo, 50 miles away, and that it is hard to find. The Japanese will be given food every few days and made comfortable, although closely guarded until a settlement is reached, or until their island prison is located by the authorities. Two provincial constables were out in Japanese boats and effected the arrest of six white fishermen. These are charged witn molesting Japanese and their case will be heard today. A shot was fired from another boat the time of the arrest, and the arrested men themselves tried to bluff the constables at the time of the arrest by firing in the air. No one was hurt by the shooting.

The Japanese held a big meeting at Steveson, raised by voluntary subscription $4,000 for a Japanese hospital which they think may be needed, and then discussed the salmon catching situation. Some were in favor of joining the union men in the strike, especially as the run of salmon has been small. The meeting broke up without definite action.

Last evening a big run of salmon was reported coming in from the south. The canners think the union men will not stand firmly in view of the temptation to participate in the catch.

There is renewed talk of calling out the militia.

Such a severe storm raged at the mouth of the Fraser river all Wednesday night that the union patrol boats which were to have attacked the Japanese fishermen were afraid to leave Steveson. The Japs kept coming in during the night without fish, driven in by the gale. Five Japs are reported to have been drowned.

The Indians, hitherto very antagonistic to the Japs, helped the latter to land, but the white men gave no aid. The shouts of the Japs trying to make a landing kept the whole population of Steveson up all night.

Following up the advantage attained by their friendly aid, the Indians are now trying to induce the Japs to join them in the strike and to get 15 cents per fish instead of 11 cents, as promised them by the canners.

Six white fishermen have been arrested at Steveson for intimidation. Several shots were fired by the union men before they submitted to arrest, but no one was injured.

GRAND CONCERT

Given American Passengers to the Land of the Midnight Sun.

New York, July 12.—The Hamburg-American line has received a cablegram from Tromsoe, Norway, dated July 11, from Capt. Kaempff of the steamer Auguste Victoria, which sailed from New York June 20 with a full list of Americans for the land of the midnight sun. Capt. Kaempff's message reads:

"Met Baldwin's polar vessel America at Tromsoe, which was greeted and cheered with great enthusiasm by the Auguste Victoria's passengers. The members of the polar expedition were invited to dine on board the Auguste Victoria, and a grand concert was arranged in their honor."

AFTER TWENTY-ONE YEARS

Father Finds His Son Working in an Iron Furnace.

Indianapolis, July 12.—A special to the News from Anderson, Ind., says: John J. Morath, capitalist and landlord of the Capitol hotel at Philadelphia, created a sensation at the local rod mills when he appeared among the roaring furnaces and picked out one of the big, brawny men as his son, Joseph Morath, whom the father lost trace of 21 years ago. At that time the parents of Joseph Morath were poor. His mother died, and the only child, a son, was taken by an aunt.

She died in another city, and the father has never been able to locate his son until this week. The son became a rod mill worker and married. His wife died and their baby boy was left at Indianapolis with relatives. Joseph Morath was taken from the mills by his father and promised an easier place in Philadelphia. They went to Indianapolis to get the boy Morath, with his son and grandson, will leave for Philadelphia today. The reunion came about by the long lost son, a member of the Knights of Pythias, speaking of having been born in Philadelphia, but not knowing what had become of his parents.

A PERMANENT FITTING.

Tablet to be Placed on Newark in Memory of Heroes.

Washington, July 12.—The navy department has received a letter from Capt. B. H. McCalla, referring to the fact that he has placed on the guard deck of the Newark a brass plate containing the names of the officers, seamen and marines who were killed and wounded last summer in the effort made to relieve the foreign legations in Pekin. The letter adds:

"As officers and men from the Newark made an exceedingly fine record in conflict with an enemy, I very much hope that you will direct that the plate be a permanent fitting of the ship in remembrance of the casualties incurred in the line of duty, and as an incentive to duty."

Instructions have gone to the navy yard at Boston to have this plate made a permanent fitting of the Newark.

Theatrical Manager Dead.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 12.—Harry Mann, the theatrical manager of New York city, is dead of Bright's disease. He had managed a number of leading play houses, among them the Madison Square, Fifth Avenue, Fourteenth Street and Knickerbocker of New York and the Columbia of Brooklyn and the California and Baldwin of San Francisco.

Asks for Protection.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 12.—National Piazza, Italian vice-consul here, received information of the lynching of two more Italians at Avon, a small station in Washington county. A mob of fifty or more men are alleged to be hunting the Italians through the swamps. Piazza has asked the governor to afford his countrymen protection.

A Friend of the Indians.

Washington, July 12.—Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones has received an envelope postmarked Denver, Col., containing $40 in bank notes, with a simple memorandum: "Please give this to any tribe of Indians—from a friend of the Indians." WOEFUL WRECK

TRAIN GOES THROUGH A BRIDGE NEAR CONNEAUT, OHIO.

ELEVEN PEOPLE KILLED AND A NUMBER INJURED.

SCENE OF THE WRECK PRESENTED A HORRIBLE APPEARANCE.

Cleveland, O., July 12.—According to information given out at the headquarters of the Nickle Plate road here, nine men were killed as the result of a collapse of a bridge at Springfield, Pa., while a construction train was passing over the structure.

The bridge was being repaired. When the locomotive and cars went down a gang of Italian laborers working beneath the bridge, were caught in the wreck. At least seven of the Italians were instantly killed and a number of others badly injured. P. A. Moore of Conneaut, the conductor, and William Griffith of Buffalo, the engi- William Griffith of Buffalo, the engineer of the construction train, were also killed.

The wrecked bridge is located seven miles east of Conneaut, O. It spanned a gully 80 feet deep.

The bodies of the dead were taken to Conneaut.

The place where the horror occurred was at Crooked Creek, directly north of East Springfield, Pa. For many years the creek has been spanned by a heavy structural steel bridge. On May 1 the work of filling up the valley was commenced. Down in the ravine, 55 feet below, masons were at work building a large stone abutment. The scene presented a horrible appearance. The steel was wrenched and distorted into one huge mass. The three cars containing stone were broken to bits and the railway track obliterated in the pile.

Besides the physicians who were present, Master Mechanic E. A. Miller, Supt. Horham of Cleveland and Rev. Father Murphy were on the ground assisting in the removal of the bodies. The accident stopped all traffic on the line. The passengers were sent over the Lake Shore.

The freight trains were held up, part of them going to Girard over the Lake Shore. The cause of the wreck can be laid only to accident. For a long time all trains have been required to reduce their speed in passing over the bridge.

The railroad men regard it as little less than miraculous that it withstood the strain of the heavy-laden passenger train No. 3, while moving slowly over it, and five minutes later fell while only the weight of three uncoupled cars were standing upon it.

THE ALTON WRECK.

List of Dead Now Nineteen, and More of the Injured May Die.

Kansas City, Mo., July 12.—Of the twenty-four persons injured in the Alton wreck who are still in Kansas City hospitals, two are not likely to live and three others are fatally hurt, but probably will survive until tonight.

Five of the injured left for their homes yesterday. A revised list shows 19 dead.

The case of Mr. Hayslip of Chenoa, Ill., is extremely pitiful. Although badly burned and in a serious condition, the enormity of his affliction made it necessary for him to leave the hospital last night. His wife died Wednesday night at the University hospital, and his daughter is now in a dying condition at St. Joseph hospital. He will take the body of his wife home and return for his daughter.

The hospital attendants report that the less seriously injured patients are improving rapidly.

Most of the injured were Epworth League excursionists going to San Francisco, and were in the tourist car in which the greatest havoc was worked. The slightly injured leaguers are proceeding on the journey.

Proved a Blessing.

Kansas City, July 12.—A special to the Star from El Reno, O. T., says: When registration was resumed at the government land office booths here Thursday morning not more than two-thirds as many persons were in line as at the corresponding time Wednesday. Most of the crowd had left town Wednesday night, to return again within a few days after the rush shall be over. This proved a blessing to those who remained in line, as the thermometer at noon registered 102 degrees in the shade. There is much complaint over alleged inadequate facilities offered by the government in furnishing application blanks and notaries, and in slow registration. No disorder has occurred.

In Very Bad Straits.

St. Paul, July 12.—Marie Curtis, wife of Samuel E. Curtis, an actor, better known as "Samuel of Posen," filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday. Her liabilities amount to $175,121, and her assets will net nothing, being but clothing valued at $275, and all exempt under the law. The creditors, of whom there are some hundred or more, are scattered all over the country. Dressmakers, dentists, physicians, agents, theatrical men, bill posters and managers of companies all come in for amounts ranging from $10 to $25,000. The only article of value the bankrupt owns at present is a small gold pin valued at $25.

Directly From Rome.

Washington, July 12.—Rev. James Daugherty, S. J., has succeeded Rev. John D. Whitney, S. J., as rector of Georgetown university. The change was ordered directly from Rome. Father Whitney was appointed three years ago.

Contractors Object.

Benton Harbor, Mich., July 12.—Thirty-seven bricklayers and masons in Benton Harbor and St. Joseph have formed a union, and beginning Monday will do nine hours work a day for ten hours' pay. Work is behind on several large blocks being erected in the cities, and contractors object to the shortening of hours. They may import non-union men, in which case trouble is predicted.

The man who lives for himself alone is apt to be neglected by the world at large.—Chicago News.

KILLED HIS WIFE

Then Cut His Own Throat After Sending His Horse Home.

Rochester, N. Y., July 12.—Farmer McGrath, near Brockport, killed his wife and then committed suicide.

Mr. and Mrs. McGrath came to town to do some trading and about 10 o'clock at night left for home. At 3 o'clock in the morning a son found the bodies a few miles from the farm house.

The woman had a terrible wound over the left eye, which is supposed to have rendered her unconscious.

McGrath, after inflicting it probably drove through an opening into a lot, took the insensible woman out of the buggy and stabbed her in the back of the neck. He then made a gash three inches in length across her throat, severing an artery.

Carefully covering her body with a blanket he drove further into the lot, unhitched his horse and started it toward home, after which he returned to where his wife was lying and cut his own throat from ear to ear.

A common two-bladed jackknife was the weapon used.

The McGraths had five children, all under 16 years.

HOW IS THIS FOR HIGH?

The Hot Wave and Hot Wind Still Doing Business.

Topeka, Kan., July 12.—Government stations in Kansas report as follows their maximum temperatures: Kansas City 103, Concordia 102, Dodge City 98, Dresden 106, Fort Scott 108, Hays City 106, Macksville 101, Manhattan 106, McPherson 107, Osage City 106, Sedan 105, Wichita 102, Topeka 102.

The wind has been blowing at the rate of 14 miles an hour from the southwest, but so dry that it had a blighting effect on the crops, and corn is in bad condition.

Reports received here indicate that in no county in the state are the crops damaged less than 50 per cent. In many counties much more than 50 per cent would be necessary to cover the estimated damage.

Bourbon, Allen, Franklin and Miami counties report almost a total loss of the corn crop. Alfalfa is about the only product standing the dry period well. It is generally conceded that this is the worst drouth since 1860 in Kansas, but it will not entail nearly so much suffering as in past years.

Anti-Cigarette League.

Buffalo, July 12.—The American Anti-Cigarette league, with a membership of nearly 300,000, began its first international convention here yesterday. The committee on credentials reported nearly 600 accredited delegates representing the anti-cigarette leagues of almost every section of the United States and Canada. The report of the secretary showed an increase in membership during the year of upwards of 100,000.

Petition for Prayers.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 12.—Gov. Dockery has received numerous petitions asking him to issue a proclamation setting a day of fasting and prayer for rain. It is said that unless rain shall come soon the failure of crops in Missouri will be the greatest since 1854.

Senator Kyle's Successor.

Pierre, S. D., July 12.—Gov. Herried has appointed A. B. Kittredge to fill the unexpired term of the late United States Senator Kyle.

Sponsors Appointed.

Washington, July 12.—Miss Catherine Whipple Sibley of Detroit, a lineal descendant of Commodore Whipple, has been chosen to christen the torpedo boat Whipple Aug. 15. Miss Isabella Truxton of Norfolk, a great-granddaughter of Commodore Truxton, will christen the torpedo boat Truxton. Mrs. Worden, widow of Admiral Worden, probably will designate her daughter, Miss Grace Worden, to christen the torpedo boat named after the admiral. The three ships will be launched together in Baltimore.

End Drawing Near.

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., July 12.—Dr. Murdock, the physician who is attending Gen. Daniel Butterfield at his summer home in Cold Spring, says that for the last ten days the general has been very weak and unable to leave his bed without assistance, and that he realizes that the end is drawing near.

Judge Tobias has rescinded the famous order of Judge Young, and hereafter trials at Upper Sandusky, O., may be reported by the papers.

John Deremer, drug clerk, took a revolver down from a shelf to get a bottle of health restorer. The gun went off and killed Customer Clinton Billmyer.

Dr. Antonio Bellinzaghi of New York asserts that he has discovered a serum that will knock out yellow fever in one round without injury to the patient. He will experiment on Cubans.

The last tract of white pine in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, has just been sold to a manufacturing firm. It contains 11,000,000 feet of pine, 17,000,000 of hemlock and some hardwood. Consideration, $155,000.

George Weltz of Altoona, Pa., had a tiff with his sweetheart, Anna Eddleman, and for three days wouldn't speak to her. Her persuasive powers were aided by a pistol she held in her hand as she met him, and he spoke at once.

The British admiralty has issued instructions for 169 vessels of the navy to engage in maneuvers, beginning July 29. Participating vessels will contend for the command of the English channel.

In Minden, Neb., County Treasurer Alfred Norlin has confessed to the embezzlement of $10,000 in county funds and admitted he set fire to the courthouse to cover his crime. He was sentenced to six years with a fine of $5,400.

Left the Overalls.

Romulus, Mich., July 12.—Early yesterday morning masked and armed burglars entered the tents of the Adventists, who have been holding meetings in this village for the past month and took Elder Parkhurst's watch, his pocketbook, containing his money, and all his clothing except a pair of blue overalls. Followers of a show which was in town are believed to be the guilty parties.

Howell Boy Drowned.

Howell, Mich., July 12.—Frank Benedict was drowned in Thompson lake, adjoining Howell, yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. The body has not been found. Expert divers failed. The lake is being dragged. Benedict was about 17 years old.

FOULLY MURDERED

Peter Smith, a Farmer, Killed While at Work

DAUGHTER SAW THE MURDER

A Sheriff's Posse Is Searching for the Murderer With Bloodhounds, But When Last Heard From Had Not Located Him.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 12.—Peter Smith, a farmer living about 12 miles from Dowagiac, was shot by an unknown man yesterday morning and died without regaining consciousness. The motive for the crime and identity of the murderer are unknown.

Smith was working in a rye field. As he passed one corner riding on a binder, some one fired from a crouching position behind a rye stack. The charge of large shot from the shotgun entered below the right shoulder.

Smith was removed to his house nearby, where he died without being able to talk intelligently. The murderer escaped to the woods. A posse of officers with bloodhounds has so far been unable to locate him. The crime was witnessed by Smith's daughter Lydia, who was picking cherries in an orchard near the house. The girl was too frightened to give a description of the man, except that he wore a straw hat.

He was a prosperous farmer owning a good farm where he lived, at Sister Lakes, near Dowagiac. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

NATIONAL EDUCATORS

Continue Their Interesting Sessions in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., July 12.—With 15 distinct meetings regularly scheduled upon the printed program, and several specially called besides, yesterday was easily the biggest day of the N. E. A. convention.

There is no way of determining at present the attendance at the convention. There are plenty of rash guesses, but Secretary Shepard, who has seen every convention since 1892, said that he did not believe the registration would be 8,000. He said there might be 2,000 unregistered, bringing the whole attendance to 10,000, but that would be the limit, in his opinion.

For half an hour in the morning the delegates to the convention to the number of more than 1,000 sat at the armory and listened to a masterful address on "Social science and the curriculum," from the lips of Prof. George E. Vincent of the University of Chicago, who took his seat only to rise and acknowledge the tremendous applause that followed his effort. Since the convention opened on Tuesday no speaker has been heard who handled his subject with such thorough knowledge and such easy familiarity as did Prof. Vincent, and his auditors were not slow in recognizing the merit of his remarks.

At the district meetings the programs were all carried out. The members of the art department paid a visit to and inspected the works of art in the gallery of Mr. James E. Scripps in the evening.

A Practical Solution.

Benton Harbor, Mich., July 12.—Chief of Police Johnson has discovered a solution to the hobo question in Benton Harbor. The city is about to begin extensive paving and Johnson proposes to put every hobo in the vicinity to work grading the streets. He will make the rounds of back stairs every night and hoboes arrested will be kept at work until the paving has been completed. He wants from 50 to 100 men, and if he cannot find them in Benton Harbor he will take some of the hands of St. Joseph.

State Millers Meet.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 12.—Seventy-five members of the State Millers' association met here yesterday for the regular summer meeting. Many subjects of interest to the trade were discussed during the business session.

Jennie Hammond, convicted of attempting to derail a Grand Rapids & Indiana train at Kingsley, has been sent to the Adrian reform school until she is 21. Her present age is 15.

The fire team on the hook and ladder truck at Ann Arbor ran away and crashed into a buggy containing Dr. Jeanne Solts and a three-year-old boy from a private hospital. The boy was perhaps fatally injured, while Miss Solts was not hurt.

Henry Levi of Charlotte and Miss Maud Buck of Lansing were enjoying a drive when their horse ran away. Miss Buck received injuries about the head. She has since been unconscious and will probably die. Levi was dragged a long distance, but escaped with severe bruises.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

TECUMSEH,

One of the Most Prosperous Villages of its Size in Michigan.

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE VILLAGE

And Some of Its Prominent Business Interests.

The geographical position, size and commercial importance of Tecumseh certainly entitles it to the well-merited distinction it has long enjoyed of being one of the best laid out, most attractive and prosperous villages of its size in Michigan. Tecumseh is pleasantly situated on the River Raisin, on the line of the C. N. and D. S. Railways and the Jackson branch of the L. S. & M. S. Ry. being 33 miles from Jackson, 58 miles from Detroit and 36 miles from Toledo.

A good citizen is a loyal citizen, and a loyal citizen takes an active interest in home affairs. The following sketches of Tecumseh's business men have been prepared by the HERALD to show the advantages the village offers as a trading point and to encourage the people of this vicinity to patronize home merchants. In fact our people can find no valid excuse for visiting other cities to buy goods. The same opportunities exist here and usually even lower prices can be had, as the expense of conducting business in Tecumseh is merely trivial when compared to large cities. All who read these sketches and watch the HERALD'S advertising columns, are fully informed on where and what to buy, and what prices to pay.

HON. JAMES ELLIOTT.

President of the Village, and One of the Most Expert Horseshoers, and All-round Blacksmiths in Lenawee County and Best Fixed Financially.

For many years Mr. James Elliott has been engaged in general blacksmithing in Tecumseh and is well known to nearly every man, woman and child in this section of the county. He has worked up a very large trade by his general excellence of work. Mr. Elliott is not merely a horseshoer. He is also an expert in treating diseases of the hoof, having given this important branch of the business much scientific research, and as a consequence he enjoys a lucrative patronage.

He owns his own one and a half story brick shop which is 30x80 feet in dimensions with side facing on Railroad street. His shop is fully equipped with all modern fixtures and appliances known to the blacksmith's trade, having three forges and lighted by electricity and an office partitioned off at one end. Mr. Elliott owns almost an entire square of ground facing on Railroad street nearly opposite the Emery Hotel, and within one block of the C. N. and D. S. R. R. station. He also has erected on the same plot of ground and adjacent to the blacksmith shop, a substantial frame barn large enough to accommodate two or three horses and floor space for carriages. He has also erected within about 100 feet of his shop one of the most handsome two story frame residences in the village. The yards and lawn front Railroad street. The yards in front of the blacksmith shop, barn and residence are always kept clean and tidy, the lawn surrounding his residence is interspersed with flowers, shrubs and ornamental trees, showing plainly the neatness and respectibility of his estimable wife and family who occupy the same.

At the southeast corner of the premises Mr. Elliott has a large frame wagonshop where all manner of carriage repairing and new work is done.

Since coming to Tecumseh Mr. Elliott has by close application to business built up a very prosperous trade and 'tis safe to say he is not only one of wealthiest general blacksmiths, but actually the wealthiest blacksmith in Lenawee county, who has made his money directly from his own trade and not by means of any outside speculation. He is a kind husband and an indulgent father. He is a whole-souled and generous business man and he takes an active interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the city. As president he is the same to Tecumseh as the late Mr. Pingree was to Detroit. He is popular with everybody and was at the last election elected to the presidency of the village by a large majority, running on an independent ticket against his brother, Thos. Elliott, who was nominated for the same office on the republican ticket. Mr. Elliott is a gentleman of unassuming manners, honest and reliable and a man with whom it is a pleasure to meet.

LILLEY STATE BANK

Of Tecumseh.

Nothing is of greater importance to the material welfare of a city, town or village than banking facilities adequate to the requirements of its business and financial activities. Tecumseh adds to commercial prominence the advantages of an active financial center by institutions of unquestioned strength and soundness, administered by men of valuable experience and great ability.

Foremost among these is the Lilley State Bank, which had its inception from a private bank that was founded in Tecumseh away back in 1860 by Mr. Lucius Lilley, who is the present president of the Lilley State Bank. In the year 1865 Mr. Lilley organized the National Bank of Tecumseh which was conducted by him at its head until the year 1873 when it went into voluntary liquidation and was succeeded by a private bank of Bills, Lilley & Co. On the death of Mr. Bills in 1880, the firm name was changed to Lilley, Bidwell & Co.

In 1893 the Lilley State Bank was organized with Mr. Lilley as president, which position he still occupies; and it may be said right here without fear of contradiction that Mr. Lilley is without doubt the oldest continuous banker in the state Michigan, and for a man of his years (nearly eighty) he is hale and hearty and gets around much more active than many a man forty years his junior. From the time of earliest banking days Mr. Lilley has pursued a safe sound conservative course which has won for him the confidence of the financial world and the favor of a large and steadily growing circle of influential customers.

The last statement of the Lilley State Bank, made on Feb'y 5th, 1901, shows a capital stock of $40,000, a surplus and undivided profits of $11,399 while at the same date the bank held deposits of $166,892 and had cash on hand and due from banks $110,570. The Lilley State Bank has a nicely appointed office midway between Railroad and Pearl streets on Chicago street. The bank conducts a general business, covering all the departments usual to a state bank of the first class, receiving approved accounts of banks, bankers, corporations, business firms and individuals, and with safe banking; making loans and discounts, buying and selling exchange and doing a large, active and successful business with customers who are among the leading business men and capitalists of Tecumseh and Lenawee county and in fact the state.

The bank has a first-class standing and, in fact, is rated as the best, not excepting any private, state or even national banks of Michigan. Mr. Lilley has had a continuous running account with the Second National Bank of Toledo for upwards of 33 years. Think of it, over a third of a century. He does business with numerous other banks, including some banks of Detroit and the Importers and Traders Bank of New York.

Personally Mr. Lucius Lilley is a native of the State of New York, born in the year 1823. In the year 1834 he removed with his parents to Cleveland, Ohio, where he lived and attended school until 1853. He secured a position in the office of the general ticket agent for the Lake Shore Ry. Remaining here until 1855, he came to Tecumseh and went into the banking business as above stated. Mr. Lilley is well known as a leading financier of this section of the state and is numbered among the wealthiest men in Southern Michigan, whose executive ability has been a leading factor in the success and present prestige of this substantial institution. As a private citizen he is an unassuming gentleman, wide-awake and possessing the happy faculty of making and retaining fast friendships by his sauvity of manner and his geniality of character. He is one of the county's best known and highly respected citizens and has long been a leading man with a reputation for sterling worth and the most positive reliability.

Mr. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, the vice president of the Lilley State Bank since the death of Mr. A. L. Brewer in 1898, is a native of Michigan born in Tecumseh and has always lived here. He is also president of the H. Brewer & Co's works and ranks as one of Tecumseh's most prominent young business men and has a bright future before him.

Mr. Fred A. Shepard, the cashier of the bank, is a native of Michigan, born in Hillsdale in the year 1867, and has been cashier of the Lilley State Bank for the past three years.

Mr. Frank B. Bauer, the assistant cashier, is a native born Tecumseh boy, born in 1869, and has been associated with the bank for the past 15 years.

All of these young men stand high in social circles here and are regarded as among the most prominent in the village, and so long as the Lilley State Bank remains in such careful, conservative and safe hands, the confidence of the people will be retained.

TECUMSEH PAPER MILL.

One of the Old and Firmly Established Mills of the State.

The Tecumseh Paper Mills, operated by the Henry Smith estate and under the direct management of Mrs. Henry Smith, widow of the late Henry Smith, who was one of the founders of the Tecumseh Paper mills over thirty years ago, her son, Mr. George Smith, being now superintendent of the works.

The Tecumseh Paper mills is one of the oldest, best-known and most successful straw board paper mills in Michigan and their product finds a ready market under any and all conditions of trade. They are manufacturers of high grade, machine finished straw-board wrapping paper, which is used almost exclusively by the butcher's trade, and no concern in their line turns out a better quality for the same money.

They find a ready market in the jobbing houses of Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland for their entire product which is over six tons of paper every 24 hours, and the mill is constantly operated the year round. A force of from 22 to 25 skilled hands are employed, who receive from $175.00 to $200.00 per week wage which in turn is distributed among the different merchants of Tecumseh.

The Tecumseh Paper mill was first established by the late Henry Smith, his brother, George Smith, and Thomas Lovell in the year 1869 under the style and firm name of Smith Bros. & Lovell, and the present structure, known as the Tecumseh Paper mill, was built. Two years later Smith Bros. bought out Mr. Lovell's interest and in 1878 Henry Smith (now deceased) became sole owner.

The mill is operated by a splendid water power and is one of the foremost manufacturing industries of Tecumseh, covering a large area of ground space for buildings, storage yards, etc., and is now conducted under the able management of his only son, an enterprising young business man of about forty years of age who has been raised to the business and is therefore well acquainted with every detail of the paper making art.

Personally the late Henry Smith was a native of Bavaria, Germany, born Nov. 2, 1830. At the age of seventeen he came to the United States, first locating in New York City. In 1850 he made a hazardous trip overland to California during the gold excitement in the newfound Eldorado of the west. In 1854 he again returned to New York city and engaged in the furniture business with his brother George. In 1857 he came to Michigan, locating on a farm in Macon township where he remained for about ten years. After selling his farm he came to Tecumseh together with his brother George and purchased the furniture factory of David VanTyne. This factory was destroyed by fire two years later. In 1869 the Smith brothers and a Mr. Lovell engaged in the paper making business.

Mr. Smith was a man of public spirit and generous to a fault, ever ready to further the interests of Tecumseh, and 'tis said he was mainly instrumental in securing the Lima Northern railroad and their car shops for the town, by not only giving liberally himself a bonus but by causing others to donate that never would have done so had it not been for him. To show his sterling worth as a citizen and the high appreciation of the man in the community, it is a matter of history that Mr. Smith was elected regularly and successively to the village council for fourteen years and he will always be remembered as an honored and highly respected citizen.

C. A. SLAYTON

A Gentleman who has Made an Enviable Reputation for Himself.

Wholesale and retail dealer in grain, produce, agricultural implements, and vehicles of all kinds. Office and showrooms nearly opposite the Lilley House on Railroad street.

This old and highly respected business dates its inception away back about forty years ago when the father of the present proprietor, Mr. J. P. Slayton, moved with his family, two sons and a daughter, to Tecumseh from the town of Lyons, Wayne county, state of New York in the year 1861, having previously been engaged in the mercantile business in New York. Soon after his arrival in Tecumseh, Mr. Slayton together with a Mr. Tindall engaged in the agricultural business, a few doors below the present C. A. Slayton building.

The firm of Tindall & Slayton carried on an agricultural business in a small way for a number of years, while at this time young Slayton then a lad of about thirteen years of age, attended the different schools here, and then finished up his education in a commercial college in Detroit, having taken a bookkeeping course. Returning to Tecumseh, he was engaged as bookkeeper by Messrs. Tindall & Slayton for a number of years or until that firm dissolved partnership, when he bought a half interest in the business with his father in the year 1869.

The firm name then changed to Slayton & Son. The father and son continued the business, which continued to grow in volume year by year with young blood installed and new methods advanced until the year 1885, when the elder Slayton retired from business and the son, C. A. Slayton, bought his father's interest and became the sole owner of a business, which today stands foremost among the agricultural dealers in Lenawee county, if not in the state.

Mr. Slayton, is not only an extensive dealer in agricultural implements, carriages, etc., but he is also an extensive dealer in grain of all kinds, seed, flour and feed, also beans, apples and potatoes, and in fact every kind of grain and seeds a farmer has to sell. He is also dealer in wagons, carriages, cutters, bicycles, harness, blankets, robes, binder twine, coal, salt, lime, fertilizers, water lime, plastering hair, etc. In fact, C. A. Slayton is to Tecumseh what John Wannimaker is to Philadelphia, and 'tis said of him that he will buy and sell anything from a needle to a saw mill and is the business man of all others of the town.

The business houses occupied and owned by Mr. Slayton are numerous, viz., the mammoth store house on Railroad street near Chicago street, is a substantial red pressed brick structure, two story and basement, 160 x 100 feet in dimensions, all of which is utilized for his business, in the rear across an alley is a wareroom 30 x 125 feet. Nearly directly opposite the L. S. railroad depot is his elevator with a capacity of 15,000 bushels, for the storage of grain of all kinds with side tracks convenient for loading and unloading grain with an 8-horse power gas engine. Across the tracks from the elevator stands his large coal sheds, 35 x 85 feet, with a capacity of several hundred tons of coal with weight scales, etc. in connection, besides two other storehouses, 30 x 40 feet each, near by for storing salt, fertilizers, etc. Another large store house, 40 x 100 feet, for the storage of surplus agricultural machinery, threshing machines, engines, and also for wood, which is located near the standpipe.

Mr. Slayton is a live business man, but unassuming in manner, thoroughly honorable and reliable in all his dealings and his word is as goods as a bond. He owns a fine home on Pottawatamie street, has an estimable wife and two sons, one fourteen years of age and the other, seventeen, the latter having just returned from Lake Forest academy to spend his summer vacation. Mr. Slayton, although he never aspired to office was elected as township clerk and compelled to serve for fourteen years. He was also a justice of the peace one term. C. A. Slayton is one of Tecumseh's best known and most highly respected citizens.

They have built up a trade by their honorable and square dealing methods and strictly one price system and the same courteous treatment to all purchasers alike, whether rich or poor, man or child, one buying just as good and cheap as the other, have placed the name of McCann Bros. at the head of the clothing dealers, not alone in Tecumseh, but throughout the county of Lenawee, for honesty and uprightness will always win out in the end.

When an advertisement is put in the paper by the McCann Bros., announcing a bargain in clothing or gents' furnishing goods, the public knows full well that what they say in their advertisement is true and the people who take the advantage of their offer are sure to get in reality just such bargains as they claim to give. Their assortment of fine ready to wear garments are of the best quality and textures made by some of the leading manufactures of the country.

The McCann Bros. believe in the old axiom of "quick sales and low profits" and when they put a price on their goods that their competitors in the same line of business, are made to wonder at the marvelous low prices. The sequel to all this is their great skill in buying their goods, their being in a position to pay spot cash for all goods, thereby saving all discount at a low figure and their willingness to sell at a close living margin and thus giving their patrons the benefit of their close buying direct from the manufacturers.

Another reason is their one price and honest way of doing business, which has placed them at the head of the clothing dealers in Tecumseh, or as is said above, Lenawee county. Under new methods of the manufacture of ready made clothing nowadays it is hard for any person not acquainted and strictly up-to-date in the clothing trade, to distinguish the difference between the ready made goods and those made by a custom tailor, either in fit or perfect workmanship. Moral people will find it to their advantage to trade with McCann Bros. and may be assured of the same gentlemanly treatment which has been characteristic of the house in the past, as they are honorable and reliable business men of Tecumseh.

THE GLOBE FLOURING MILL.

Owned and Operated by the Wm. Hayden Milling Company of Tecumseh.

In the above concern we have a most important factor to the success of the farmer and it is the pride and boast of Tecumseh. It is a matter of history of Lenawee county that the first building erected in the county was located on the present mill sight and the first flour mill erected in the county was on the same spot where the Globe Mill is now situated. This was away back in the spring of 1825 when a grist mill was built for Messrs. Wing, Evans & Brown by a Turner Stetson, a huge granite boulder being worked into shape for the mill stones. Vast are the improvements of today in the manufacture of flour for right here on the self same mill site was erected the first flour mill in Lenawee county. From that day until the present Tecumseh and flour have been the two names inseparable as it had not only then the name of making or rather grinding the best flour. While today the process of flour making is much different, as it is manufactured by a roller process instead of the stone grinding as of yore, the Globe Mills still retain the name of making the best flour.

In the year 1836 the mill had 7 or 8 run of stone propelled by a large overshot water wheel, while today it has not only the best water power in Southern Michigan, it has also electric motor power used for lighting.

In the early fifties, the mill was purchased by a Thos. Baylis, of Tecumseh. On Dec. 17, 1856, the property was deeded to William Hayden and owned by him until his death which occurred some four years ago. Since Mr. Hayden's demise, the heirs of his estate have controlled the mill, which has been incorporated as a stock company and placed in the hands of his two sons, William and Levi, who have successfully conducted the business ever since.

The Globe Mills, or what is now more commonly called The Wm. Hayden Milling Co's Mills, is an up-to-date mill in every way, being fitted up with all the latest and most improved machinery, consisting of rotary sifters in place of the old fashioned reels, and rolls have taken the place of the mill stones. The company manufactures wheat, strictly pure buckwheat and cornmeal flours and feed, having a capacity of 135 barrels of flour per day. The principle brands are their "1900" flour, "Hayden's Best Patent," "White Star," "Seal of Michigan," all of which are equal to any other brands manufactured and are most excellent for bread and cake baking.

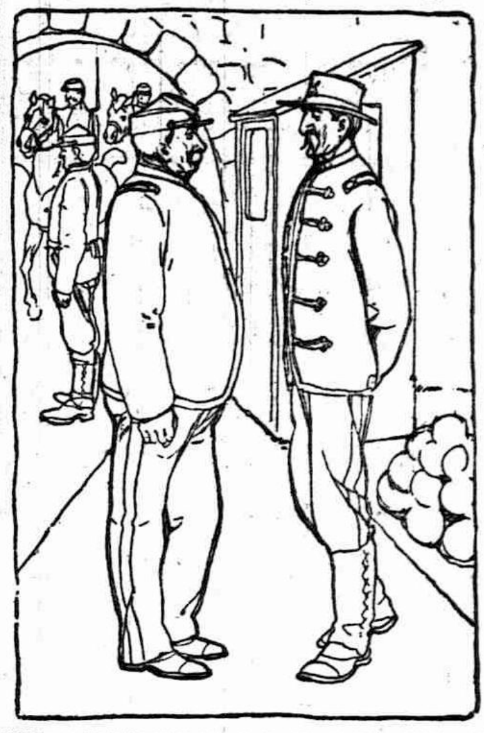
The estate purchases supplies throughout this and adjoining states, has extensive storage and railroad facilities, brings many farmers here, as they offer the highest cash market for grain, etc., and besides maintaining agencies in Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland where their products find a ready market. They have also an extensive local trade, selling flour in every town in Lenawee county.

The two brothers in charge of the mills are both partical business men and are ever aiming to retain the confidence of the public by liberal business methods and walking well in the footsteps of their honored father who was regarded here as a most thorough, honorable and reliable business man, who had done many things for Tecumseh, having at all times the welfare of the village in view and by his liberal methods in dealing with the farmers, was the means of bringing them to Tecumseh to trade when they actually lived nearer Adrian. As said above, the two sons, with their liberal business methods, their industry, are a most important factory in the commercial solidity of Tecumseh.

Ten Years Trial.

"I can straighten out post matters without having to call on an—an—an outsider," answered the colonel haughtily, for he had the same conception of his corps that the Chinese had of China—everybody not of it was an outside barbarian. Moreover, he was distinctly jealous of Melville, and it kept cropping out in the most absurd and palpable way. Early in the spring, when ordered to the command of this important station, the department commander had said to him: "We have applied for Melville to command your artillery. He'll be a tower of strength to you and relieve you of all responsibility in the management of the batteries." And this remark, intended to reassure, had just the opposite effect. The colonel did not wish to be relieved of any care or responsibility, did not wish it to be supposed he needed a tower of strength. He was one of a small but somewhat prominent class among our senior officers who rejoice in extended responsibility and who prefer hours of personal work to delegating one iota of authority or power to anybody else. He was so oddly constituted, moreover, that he would gladly have added to his functions the ladling out of medicines and the distribution of hospital stores. His mania was for scraping and saving for Uncle Sam. He would spend hours of valuable time pruning off a dollar from the estimate of the post quartermaster or squeezing a cent a bushel from the hay or grain contract. He had never before served with mounted artillery, but unhesitatingly assumed [illegible] control of the affairs of the batteries, criticising and forbidding the expenditure of paint for the carriages and caissons, cutting down the number of horseshoes, condemning the amount of grain and hay fed out in the daily allowance and putting a stop to shell and shrapnel practice as being viciously extravagant. "It will all be straightened out when Melville comes," said the gunners, but it wasn't. The colonel had never met Melville before, but had had him dinned into his ears every time he talked with an enthusiastic artilleryman, and, to use his own expression, "it made him tired." "Melville is a sort of demigod according to these artillery fellows," said he, "but I propose to run my own post, and no man shall run me."

So when Melville arrived and reported for duty the colonel met him with much solemnity and state. Ordinarily offhand and impulsive in speech and manner, he now assumed an imposing dignity of mien that filled his adjutant with merriment and did not deceive Melville in the least. That clear sighted, grave mannered soldier listened with every appearance of courteous interest to the colonel's exposition of what he considered the needs of the batteries and the batteries' discipline and instruction, but as his own views were neither asked nor desired gave no expression of them. The colonel called upon the new arrival at the quarters of Captain Cannon that evening and found a dozen red striped fellows there, all clustered about their demigod, and the colonel's manner was if anything more awfully impressive than in the morning. He remained but ten minutes, and the gunners drew a long breath and looked at each other as he left the room and burst into irrepressible laughter as he stalked away from the gate. But Melville came back to their midst with Captain Cannon, they having seen the colonel safely down the steps, and not a line in Melville's face betrayed the fact that he saw anything comical in the situation. Within the week he was partially settled in his new quarters and fully engrossed in his new duties. He found the post commander pottering about the battery stables and gun sheds day after day, giving orders direct to stable sergeants, farriers and blacksmiths, but not a line of his face or a tone of his voice betrayed the faintest irritation or disapproval. Irate captains came to him to protest, and he said, "Patience," and nothing the impetuous post commander could say or do ever seemed to throw him off his mental balance for a moment. He was ever grave, exquisitely courteous and entirely subordinate. For a month the colonel had things all his own way. Then one day, all unannounced, there dropped in an inspector, who gave two days to the batteries and two hours to the rest of the command. The colonel insisted on being with him everywhere. The inspector found fault with the condition of the horses' feet and declared them insufficiently shod. He was referred to the order of the post commander. He said all of the horses looked too finely drawn, as though they had come in from a hard campaign, and was shown the post commander's order cutting off two pounds of grain per diem. He said the gun carriages looked dingy and was informed of the post commander's prohibition of further use of paint. He criticised their neglect of gun practice with service ammunition, and again the post commander had to shoulder the blame. He dined with that dignitary, as did Melville and Nathan and two or three cavalrymen that evening, and the colonel drank much of his own champagne and talked incessantly in defense of his policy, on which point the inspector and the gunners were diplomatically silent, but within a week of the former's departure down came a letter from department headquarters embodying all his criticisms and directing the post commander to take measures to correct the matters complained of without delay. They were all of the post commander's devising, and, "without the ruffling of a feather or the turning of a hair," as the boys expressed it, without a word of altercation or expostulation, Melville had won the battle. He met the colonel with the same grave, imperturbable courtesy, with that utterly unimpeachable respect of manner. Even though the post commander was fuming with wrath and the consciousness of defeat, Melville allowed not a trace of exultation to be visible, not a word of triumph to escape him. He gently, gravely rebuked one or two youngsters who crowed in their delight and by utter superiority of his mental equipoise rasped the irate colonel infinitely more than if he had given voice to the sense of victory. The colonel was forced to the conclusion that the senior major of artillery was a bigger man at department headquarters than he had ever been, and this jealousy redoubled.



"You think he was a very good soldier, I am told."

And yet the soldier in him compelled him to respect Melville. He couldn't help it. Officer or man, the soldier did not live in all the service who knew him and did not honor. Pure in speech, refined and courteous in manner, a gentleman in the finest sense of the term, in every thought and word and deed; just, temperate, merciful, a model of fidelity to duty and to principle, a man to whom an oath was well nigh as intolerable as a lie, he so ordered his life that friends and comrades studied him in vain for fault or foible, and enemies were unknown. Among his elder officers were men who a quarter of a century before had been his pupils in the section rooms of "the old academie," where they well nigh worshiped him. "Never," said they, "no matter how exasperatingly stupid a cadet might be—never was Melville tempted to use an impatient word." Among the younger officers were those who only a few years back wore the gray at the Point when Melville was their honored commandant, the position of all others in the army of the United States which has the greatest influence on the character and development of the young soldiers of the nation, the position of all others most difficult to fill, and Melville was the idol of the corps of cadets. At the different stations where he had served—at Newport, at Fortress Monroe and at the Presidio of San Francisco—he had left his impress ever the same. They spoke of him as the "Bayard of the Battery," and one of the traditions which his old regiment gloried in was the mountain campaign against a fierce and recalcitrant tribe in which Melville led his guns into the fastnesses of an unexplored wilderness and brought the savages to bay. Add to all this that his home life was as beautiful as his professional career had been well nigh flawless, and even crotchety, fault finding, jealous old "Cat" owned himself powerless to penetrate the armor of Melville's perfections, and May and Woodrow, thinking sadly of the comrade lost to them, found the words constantly springing to their lips, "If Melville had only come earlier!"

And yet, as we have seen, it was unlikely that Melville could have prevailed in a matter such as Langdon's, who had done so much to hurt his own cause. The major had discovered the good points in the post commander much sooner than the latter would admit that there was anything remarkable about Melville. By mid-October, however, the genuine soldier in "Cat's" constitution had compelled in him an admiration and respect for the gravely courteous artilleryman that, in spite of the lingering jealousy he felt, made him desire Melville's friendship. Long ere this he had realized that battery horses were built on far different lines from the "troopers" he loved and, being much heavier—haulers instead of carriers and fed and shod for draft and prepared for severe and sudden strain—should never have been cut down from their allowance with the view of making them conform to his ideas of how a horse should look. "Cat" ruefully admitted, to himself only, that he had come near spoiling some 250 draft animals and nearer still to making one ass who should be nameless. It was not until a month after Langdon's departure, however, that he mustered up manliness to say to Melville: "How much a fellow thinks he knows about some other fellow's business until he tries. Now, I had no more idea that a battery horse had to be so much heavier. Course I could have read it all up in the tactics, don't you know, but I hate books, somehow, and I ought to have realized that battery commanders like Hatnor and Singer, at least, knew their biz. I don't take any stock in—in Nathan. His horses had hides on 'em like a Yellowstone buffalo. Why, I had to give him hades the first week I got here, and he gave me a swell dinner. But I just wish you would consider you're at the head of the artillery part of this establishment now, Melville. I believe it's best to leave it all to you."

And the two gravely shook hands. "Cat," as has been observed, had a conscience. After a moment's silence he began again: "Then there's another thing. That adjutant of mine—impudent fellow at times if he is a good officer—has never forgiven me about Langdon. He doesn't speak of it, of course, except when I draw him out. I wouldn't stand that, you know. But he says if I'd been here longer and had known more 'bout Langdon and as much about Nathan and Torrance as I do now I wouldn't have been so hard on him. He says I ought to have sought your views. Well, p'r'aps I ought, Melville, but I didn't get to know you at first. Where is that fellow now, anyhow? D'you ever hear from him?"

"I have heard once or twice," answered Melville gravely. "But he prefers to say nothing of his occupation. His creditors, at least, are furnished with his address."

AFTER 20 YEARS.

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder-worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience, a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says:

"For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice, I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; totally unable to lie on my right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain, is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night. I could do my housework as well as I ever could and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Rooted sorrow—An aching tooth.

"I owe my whole life to Burdock Blood Bitters. Scrofulous sores covered my body. I seemed beyond cure. B. B. B. has made me a perfectly well woman." Mrs. Charles Hutton, Berville, Mich.

Rarefied Humor of the Rockies.

High up on the Laramie range there is a little station called Sherman—a mere watering place for trains on the Union Pacific railway. Near by it is a gigantic pyramid of stone 60 feet high and 60 feet square at the base, which was set up by the railway as a monument to Oakes Ames and Oliver Ames.

In the latter eighties there arrived at Sherman a shabby person of melancholy aspect, who put up a "shack"—western for shanty—not far from the monument. Ostensibly, he was prospecting, and he continued to prospect for three years without accomplishing any results, so far as could be observed. At the end of that period the management of the Union Pacific received from him a communication demanding the immediate removal of the monument from the premises, which he claimed as his under the homestead law.

The matter was regarded in a humorous light at first, but subsequent proceedings developed the fact that the squatter had what lawyers call a "case."

The stranger, it seems, had located on a section of land which did not belong to the Union Pacific—the same section on which the monument had, by an inadvertence, been placed. He knew very well what he was about, and the upshot of the affair was that the railway had to pay $5,000 for the squatter's tract in order to make its title good.

The monument, by the way, is distant only about 100 yards from the station, and it is a favorite trick of experienced persons to induce green travelers to attempt a run to the pyramid and back during the two minutes of the train's wait. In nine cases out of ten they fall on the way back, bleeding at the nose, the air being so rarefied at that elevation of 8,300 feet as to forbid such exercise.—Saturday Evening Post.

Fainting Spells

always indicate a weak heart. They are usually preceeded or followed by palpitation or fluttering, and there may be pain in left side, a smothering sensation and shortness of breath. Such a heart should be treated at once, before the disease develops beyond control. Heart disease is as easily cured as other troubles if taken in time.

PUNISHED THE PAINTINGS.

They Violated Editor Storey's Cast Iron Rule and Were Hanged.

"When we went to Chicago to live just after the fire," said a woman who has since returned to New York, "we furnished the house with all that was necessary to make it attractive. One winter my husband bought a number of paintings, and after they had been placed properly we invited a clever young woman to come in and see the collection. I don't mind telling you that she wrote for Mr. Storey's newspaper, The Times. She understood art. She had been reared in Boston and she had studied abroad.

"When the article on our collection appeared, what was our horror to read that each picture described had been 'hanged' by a man who made a specialty of putting up paintings. My husband was teased into a fit of neuralgia the next day by his Chicago acquaintances, who expressed their regret that all his paintings had been executed. Of course the women heard of it and there was a giggle for blocks.

"I called upon the young woman from Boston and asked how she had made such a blunder. She was in an agonized frame of mind and protested that she didn't write it 'hanged.' I was sure she didn't. Then came the explanation. A few weeks before there had been an execution in the Chicago jail and Mr. Storey's reporters wrote that the man was 'hung.' Mr. Storey was furious and issued an order, so I heard, that henceforth editors, reporters, copy readers, printers and proofreaders must write and set up and read 'hanged' for 'hung.' The rule was inflexible. The young woman who wrote of our collection used the word 'hung' throughout her article and Mr. Storey's rule was enforced. But as long as we lived in Chicago we were always known as 'that New York family who had their paintings executed.'"—New York Sun.

FUNNY SPECTACLES.

The Impromptu Rows That Occur In the Streets of Paris.

"Did you ever see a street fight in France?" asked an artist who had lately returned from Paris. "They are funny spectacles. I saw one once while passing the Bal Bullier at midnight. Two little Frenchmen walked along in front of me, engaged in conversation. A third little Frenchman ran up on tiptoe from behind somewhere and kicked the taller of the talkers between the shoulder blades. He went down with a cry, turned a somersault into the gutter and lay there.

"And instantly—how, I don't know—that street was full of hundreds of little Frenchmen, fighting and chattering and screeching. They didn't use their fists. They slapped, scratched, pulled whiskers and hair and, above all, kicked—kicked in the high French manner, not landing where we Americans land, but getting home on the face and neck and on the back between the shoulders. For five minutes there was pandemonium, and then as suddenly as it had begun the brawl was over and the boulevard was still again.

"But afterward in all the boulevard cafes you found torn and bleeding Frenchmen, who leaned back limply in their chairs while their little ladyloves wiped daintily with their skirts the blood stains from the faces of those heroic scrappers. The little ladies wept and murmured sweet, consoling things; the little men seemed in the depth of despair; but it wasn't long before little drinks were ordered and little cigarettes lighted and everybody was gay and happy again." — Philadelphia Record.

The Clothes Moth.

We may marvel at grubs growing fat and succulent upon such unpromising fare as old timber affords, but that achievement is improved upon by the insects that prefer to draw their entire nutrition from woolen fabrics, fur, horsehair, feathers, tanned leather and the like and apparently without ever a desire to "wet the whistles" by anything of a juicy nature. Any small, silvery winged moth that is seen flitting about the house is regarded as a "clothes moth," but every one killed is not an enemy, for there are a number of moths of similar size and appearance that come from outdoors and have been occupied as grubs in destroying green leaves. It is a common error to suppose that it is the clothes moth that does the mischief, though by destroying the moth we prevent the laying of innumerable eggs from which come the consuming larvæ, whose cutting jaws would be actively and incessantly employed in mutilating choice fabrics and valuable furs. These caterpillars are rarely seen by the housewife because their first care on leaving the egg is to disguise or hide themselves.

The clothes moth proper has yellowish gray wings, with three or four indefinite brownish spots upon them, and in consequence of its marked preference for furs it is known to science as Tinea pellionella.—Good Words.

A Common Freak.

When P. T. Barnum was in the museum business in New York, one of his most jovial friends was Gaylord Clark, a famous litterateur in the days of our fathers. They were a well matched pair of practical jokers. One day when Mr. Clark dropped in at the museum, as was his custom, Mr. Barnum, apparently much excited, hurried his friend into the private office and said: "Gaylord, I was about to send for you. I want your advice. I have a chance to purchase the most wonderful of all zoological freaks. It's at first a perfect fish, then it changes to a four legged land animal, then it climbs trees and"—

"Bah! You're joking," interjected Mr. Clark.

"On my honor I am not," impressively replied the showman. "But the expense."

"Oh, hang the expense," interrupted Mr. Clark, brimful of enthusiasm over the business project of his friend. "If you can get any such freak as that, your fortune's made. But what's the thing called?"

"Well," replied Mr. Barnum, with just the faintest suggestion of a twinkle in his left eye, "it belongs to the batrachian family of animals and in the vernacular is called the—the—tadpole!"

Superstitious Great Men.

Superstition has not only prevented mankind from attaining a superior eminence of happiness, but what is more deplorable, it has added in a great degree to an already extensive catalogue of earthly miseries. It is not by the ignorant alone that superstitious beliefs are entertained, but by many eminent men of the past and present. Dr. Samuel Johnson was a firm believer in ghosts and second sight. Josephus, the great Jewish historian, relates that he saw the extraordinary sight of an evil spirit being induced to leave the body of an afflicted mortal upon the application of Solomon's seal to the patient's nostril. James VI, who was noted for his intellectual attainments and theological learning, was a firm believer in witchcraft. So deep a hold did this absurd notion have on him that he published a work upholding this doctrine and actually punished all who opposed the belief.—Exchange.

A Cheese Roast.

Those who insist upon eating cheese should take the precaution to cook it thoroughly before eating. It is for this reason that some people who are unable to eat raw cheese find themselves able to eat toasted cheese without difficulty. Toasting the cheese does not, however, increase its digestibility, but rather the reverse. Its beneficial effect, if any, is from the destruction of the virulent microbes which are present and which are capable of giving rise to symptoms even more distressing than those of ordinary indigestion. The best method of dealing with cheese is to give it to the pigs, as it is nothing more or less than decayed milk, fit only for a scavenger diet.—Sanitary and Municipal Engineering.

A Trait of Augustin Daly.

A lovely trait of Mr. Daly's character was his tenderness and thought for children. I never knew him to pass a little newsboy on the street without buying a paper, and he always took the paper with a look in his eyes as much as to say, "We must help the boys to get a living." It was a beautiful trait—not giving as charity, but buying what the boy had to sell.—Mrs. Gilbert in Scribner's Magazine.

The Coffee He Wanted.

"Lady," said the beggar, "won't yer gimme a nickel to git some coffee?"

The woman did so, and he started into the neighboring saloon.

"Here," she cried, "you don't get coffee in there!"

"Lady," he replied, "dat's where yer way off. Dey keeps it on de bar wid de cloves an orange peel."—Philadelphia Record.

How it is Done.

The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich;" the second, how to regain good health. The first can be obtained by energy, honesty and saving; the second, (good health) by using Green's August Flower. Should you be a despondent sufferer from any of the effects of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Appendicitis, Indigestion, etc., such as Sick Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Sour Stomach, Habitual Costiveness, Dizziness of the Head, Nervous Prostration, Low Spirits etc., you need not suffer another day. Two doses of the well known August Flower will relieve you at once. Go to John J. Orr and get a sample bottle free. Regular size, 75 cts. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

Swells With Swell Chests.

"I had occasion to examine two brothers who had applied for policies in our company the other day," said the medical examiner of a life insurance company. "One was 35 years old and the other was 33. They are both unmarried and are known about town as pretty gay boys. Usually there is considerable attached to writing policies for men who are known as 'rounders,' but these two proved to be perfect specimens of physical manhood.

"I was particularly impressed by their chest developments. They both had the same measurement and also the same expansion—from 39 to 43. When I found that they had smoked cigarettes from boyhood, I wondered all the more at the four inch expansion. Then they told me that when they were youngsters they used to delight in seeing how long they could hold their breath under water. Every time they took a bath in the tub one would take a deep breath, duck under, and the other would time him with a watch. A minute and a half, I believe, was the limit of their endurance. They said it was all their mother could do to get them out of the bath and drive them to bed."—Philadelphia Record.

Both Expert In Logic.

"Tom," said a father to his son whose school report showed him to have been an idle young scamp, "what have you been studying this term?"

"Logic, father," replied Tom. "I can prove you are not here now."

"Indeed! How so?"

"Well, you must be either at Rome or elsewhere?"

"Certainly."

"You are not at Rome?"

"No."

"Then you must be elsewhere."

"Just so."

"And if you are elsewhere you clearly can't be here."

For answer the father took up a cane that lay near and laid it smartly across his son's back.

"Don't!" cried Tom. "You are hurting me."

"Not at all. You have just proved conclusively that I am not here, so I can't be hurting you."

Before his stern parent had quite done with him Tom felt that there must be after all a flaw somewhere in his logic.—London Tit-Bits.

SAPOLIO
LIKE A GOOD TEMPER SHEDS A BRIGHTNESS EVERYWHERE.

Women are Like Flowers. Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

RELIEF IS COMING

Welcoming Rains in the Western Corn Belt

AND MORE IS ON THE WAY

The People Are Requested to Assemble at Their Regular Places of Worship to Invoke the Blessings of Almighty God.

Washington, D. C., July 16.—Relief for the heat-stricken district of the great corn belt today is predicted by the weather bureau. No general rains apparently are yet in sight, but thunder showers, with consequent lower temperature, are probable in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois and possibly in Indiana. There is a prospect Wednesday in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys and in the upper lake regions, bringing cooler weather for the time being.

Yesterday the hot weather continued throughout the corn belt and over the lower lake region and upper Ohio valley, but temperatures fell considerably during the early evening over the latter district under the influence of local thunder storms. Thunder storms also occurred in South Dakota, northern Illinois, portions of Ohio, Missouri and Arkansas and afforded some relief from the heat.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 16.—Gov. Dockery, who has received many requests to issue a proclamation calling upon the people to observe a day of fasting and prayer that the drouth might be broken, has set apart Sunday, July 21, on which "the people are requested to assemble at their usual places of worship to invoke the blessings of Almighty God." Little rain has fallen in this state since April 27.

Kansas City, Mo., July 16.—A portion of the drouth-stricken southwest has been relieved by rain during the past 24 hours. Much good has already resulted to crops, and as there are prospects of more rain, it is believed many thousands of dollars will be saved farmers on stock and crops. Nevertheless, much greater quantities of rain must come before a lasting benefit shall be done. In the portions of central and western Missouri, western Kansas and the territories still untouched by rain, conditions remain unchanged, the temperature ranging from 98 to 106, the latter at Hutchinson, Kan. During the day a heavy rain fell in the vicinity of Coffeyville, Eldorado and Wichita, Kan. At Coffeyville the people held a jubilee on the streets during the rain.

In Kansas City Mrs. Martha C. Mullett, wife of a prominent business man, died of heat prostration, and Edward B. Shillito, contracting agent for the Traders' Dispatch fast freight line, was overcome and is in a critical condition. Near Leavenworth, Kan., on a farm, Oliver S. Hiatt, a well-known Kansas Politician, died from the effects of the heat.

PITCHED BATTLE.

Between Negroes and Mexicans on a Railroad Extension.

Hereford, Tex., July 16.—Word has reached this place of a pitched battle and wholesale killing between Mexicans and negroes who are working on the new Rock Island extension in New Mexico, 100 miles west of here. The trouble originated in the killing of a Mexican by a negro some weeks ago. The authorities undertook to arrest the assailant but his friends interfered and they were obliged to withdraw.

Last week some 35 or 40 Mexicans armed themselves with Winchesters and went after the negro. A battle took place in which 15 negroes were killed and several wounded. The casualties among the Mexicans cannot be learned. The trouble occurred at Spencer's railroad camp near Liberty, N. M., in a sparsely settled portion of the territory, where the police officers are few and law is not rigidly enforced.

Millionaire Drowned.

Vancouver, B. C., July 16.—The body of D. D. Dick, an English millionaire, has been found near Banff. He had been staying at the Banff hotel and had wandered off Sunday, the 7th, and it is supposed was accidentally drowned. It was not unusual for Mr. Dick to disappear for a day or two without announcing his departure, and no special alarm was felt at first. Searching parties were finally organized, but it was not until yesterday that his remains were recovered.

Mysterious Disappearance.

New York, July 16.—George Rogers Wilson, a wealthy New York stock broker, who has been spending the summer at Larchmont-in-the-Sound, disappeared on Sunday night and all trace of him has been lost. His coat and straw hat were found on a rock in Larchmont Manor park, overlooking the sound.

Destroyed by Fire.

Alliance, O., July 16.—Reeves Bros.' boiler works here have been completely destroyed by fire. Loss about $100,000; insurance, $40,000. About 175 men are thrown out of employment.

Colored Men Hang a Negro.

Montgomery, Ala., July 16.—A mob of negroes at Courtland hanged Alexander Herman, a negro, who was charged with killing Sallie Swope. Herman made a confession.

MODERATION AND HUMANITY

Exercised by United States in China Proves a Blessing.

Washington, July 16.—It is now apparent from mail reports which have just reached the state department from China that it was solely through the moderation and humanity exercised by the United States representatives at Pekin, by the president's direction in the early negotiations for a settlement of the Boxer trouble, that a number of innocent lives were not sacrificed. These reports show that a more sober and painstaking inquiry has developed the fact that some of the Chinese officials supposed to have been connected with the Boxer outrages, whose capitals were destroyed and punishment was demanded by the foreign ministers, have been proved to be entirely innocent of the charges made against them.

In many other cases proof has been adduced that the offenses with which the Chinese officials were charged were not nearly so grave as was supposed at first by the foreign representatives in Pekin. Therefore, it is regarded here by officials as a matter for congratulation that Messrs. Conger and Rockhill moved with deliberation and acted as a restraining influence in the matter of punishment, for not only were these lives saved, but under their influence the whole list of capital sentences was reduced from ten to four and mitigation of other offenses was obtained.

OUIDA LETS LOOSE.

Writes of Indignities Heaped Upon a Woman.

London, July 16.—Mlle. Louise de la Ramee (Ouida) has a long letter in the Daily News, protesting against the treatment administered by British in South Africa to Mrs. Cronwright.

"It is, I think, entirely true that Mme. Olive Schreiner has been transported to a strange place and imprisoned within a fence of wire netting, which is protected by armed sentinels, stationed at intervals, with orders to fire upon any one attempting to escape.

"In this place she lives alone, with her dog, in one small room, for which she pays, cooking for herself and compelled to remain all night without any kind of light. Her husband is refused permission to visit her, although her brother is a former premier of Cape Colony.

"What is her offense? Merely to have espoused the cause of the Boers during the war.

"Is it tolerable that for this alone she should be subjected to the indignity of isolation and be carried away from all she loves."

BLAMES HIS WIFE.

Death of Little Alice Cothrell Laid at Her Door.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 16.—New facts developed in the proceedings which remanded the aged Charles Dunn of Wallen, Ind., to jail without bail, as the murderer of little Alice Cothrell. Mrs. Dunn, wife of the murderer, is insane. Little Alice was her favorite friend and playmate.

During the days and nights when the search for the murdered child continued, it is said that the insane woman asked Dunn to take the body out of the cistern, and when the body was finally dragged to the surface, the woman caressed it and wept bitterly. For a moment her mind seemed almost restored. It is now said that Dunn will persist in denying all knowledge of the girl's killing and will allege that his insane wife, in a moment of irresponsibility, choked her to death and threw her body in the cistern.

Sailor Boys at Buffalo.

Buffalo, July 16.—Gov. James K. Nash of Ohio has arrived here on board the U. S. S. Hawk and escorted by the U. S. S. Michigan and U. S. S. Yantic.

Aboard the Yantic are the naval reserves of Detroit and Saginaw. The Hawk carries the naval reserves of Cleveland. In the complement of the fleet are about 100 regulars, 150 Michigan naval reserves and 50 Ohio reserves. Gov. Nash will remain on board the Hawk during his stay in Buffalo.

A Victim of Hazing.

New York, July 16.—Harry Craven, the grandson of the late Rear Admiral Craven, U. S. N., was committed by Supreme Court Justice Dickman to Bloomingdale asylum yesterday. The commitment says he is a hopeless lunatic. He is 19 years old. It is said the boy's madness was brought on four years ago when he was a student at the Annapolis naval academy. One night while out with a number of students he was hazed, it is alleged, and from that time his mind began to weaken.

A Great Opening.

Detroit, Mich., July 16.—The Blue ribbon races started off yesterday in great shape. A shower in the city prevented many from attending, but there was no rain at the track. Star Pugh, a Michigan horse, won the Chamber of Commerce stake and Hetty G., in the 2:06 pace, made the fastest time of the year, 2:05½. Lady Thisbe and Highwood were the other winners. The M. & M. $10,000 purse is on for today.

RECORD IS BROKEN

Unprecedented Heat in the Upper Peninsula

MARQUFTTE REGISTERS 108.

Three Dining-Room Girls at Houghton Prostrated, One Falling on the Dining-Room Floor During the Dinner Hour.

Marquette, Mich., July 16.—Marquette is going to take in its summer resort shingle, a maximum official temperature recorded yesterday was 108 degrees, as against a previous record temperature eight years ago of 103 degrees.

The government thermometer registered 105-6 degrees for three hours, then jumping to 108. The heat was not felt in the city as much as on Sunday, when the official maximum temperature was 102, although several industries suspended work and one prostration was reported.

Houghton, Mich., July 16.—The second day of the hot spell at Houghton proved the worst for suffering. Sunday's maximum of 103 3-10 was not reached yesterday by three degrees, but several prostrations occurred. Andrew Swenson, chief cook at the Douglass house, died from the effects of heat and three dining-room girls were prostrated, one falling in the dining-room during the dinner hour. Sunday there were four prostrations, but none proved fatal.

JUMPED ON A WITNESS.

Courtroom Turned Into a Bedlam During a Murder Trial.

Upper Sandusky, O., July 16.—During the progress of the Johnson murder trial here Willis Miller, the defendant, attacked Guard Grundtisch of the county jail, who had just given testimony which Miller characterized as perjury.

A brother and sister of Miller joined in the attack on Grundtisch and a desperate struggle ensued. A general fight followed and the courtroom was turned into a bedlam. A number of women fainted and others screamed in terror. When they tried to leave the room they were trampled on by the excited mob.

Judge Tobias adjourned court and Miller was taken to jail under guard.

WANTED AT LANSING.

Arrested on a Serious Charge by Detroit Officers.

Detroit, Mich., July 16.—Marcus Pine, a barber giving his age as 25 and claiming to live at Trenton, Mich., was arrested by Detectives Cotter, Larkins and High for the authorities at Lansing, where it is alleged the young man is wanted on the charge of taking indecent liberties with a 14-year-old girl named Blanche Gorham, who became a mother.

It is claimed that Pine induced her to come to Detroit a few days ago, holding out the offer of marriage, finally leaving the girl to shift for herself.

Run Down by Electric Car.

Pontiac, Mich., July 16.—Augustus Sidley, residing in Oakland county, near the Wayne county line, was run down by a Detroit & Northwestern electric car and may die as a result of the accident. Sidley was driving, and it is thought that he fell asleep in the buggy and being only a short distance from home the horse turned to cross the road and stood on the track. The buggy was completely demolished, and Sidley received a horrible wound in the breast.

Two Boys Drowned.

Detroit, Mich., July 16.—The waters of the Detroit river claimed two more victims yesterday afternoon, when Charles Hoffmann and Edward Gitschlag were drowned within 30 feet of the ferry dock at Belle Isle.

A Brutal Act.

Durand, Mich., July 16.—Fred Harrington yesterday afternoon seized an old man by the name of Neil Rouse as he entered a saloon and threw him over the bar. Neil struck on his shoulder, breaking it. Harrington was arrested.

Crazed with drink, Emmett Pierce of Riverdale started a fight on an Ann Arbor excursion from Toledo. A brakeman pounded him and then threw him from the train. He was then arrested by Deputy Sheriff Hovey and a complaint was made against him by the railroad company.

Dosing an Elephant.

A difficult operation was performed the other day at the zoological gardens at Hanover. An elephant was suffering great pain from a growth on the lower part of one of its hind feet, and it was deemed necessary to cut this malformation away. In order to render the animal insensible a dose of 600 grains of morphia in six bottles of rum was administered. This dose took about an hour before any visible effect was produced. The elephant then fell over in a kind of sleep, and the operation was successfully carried out without any further ado. The operation lasted in all three days.—London Globe.

AWARDS AT PAN-AM.

Action of Superintendent Hailed With Delight by Exhibitors.

Buffalo, July 16.—Awards for exhibits at the Pan-American exposition will be announced in September. The statement given out by Dr. Protchett, superintendent of awards, was hailed with delight by the exhibitors for the reason that it marks a new departure on the part of the exposition management in the early announcement of awards.

Heber M. Wells, governor of Utah, and his bride arrived here unheralded and unattended. Governor and Mrs. Wells spent the day at the exposition.

Two hundred and fifty members of the Missouri State Press association, which has just held its 34th annual session in St. Louis, have arrived at the exposition. Their purple badges bear the inscription: "United we stand for Missouri and the world's fair." They were delighted with everything they saw at the fair, but chiefly with the hydraulics of the canals, lakes and fountains. The Georgia editors left for home yesterday.

MANLY INDEPENDENCE.

Andrew Carnegie Not Averse to Others Putting Up.

Edinburgh, July 16.—The first meeting of the trustees of the Carnegie educational fund was held here yesterday. Lord Elgin, who presided, read a letter from Mr. Carnegie announcing that he had signed the deed placing $10,000,000 at the disposal of the trustees.

"Although the dividends on the stocks will not be available until autumn," says Mr. Carnegie in the course of the communication, "I have arranged for the payment of scholars' fees from the beginning of the next university term. I believe the conditions of the gift insure a sufficient standard of merit, and I hope the honest pride by which my countrymen are distinguished will prevent claims from those who do not need assistance.

"To further mark my personal belief as to this matter, I have arranged that the trustees may receive funds from others to be administered along with my donation. I believe this to be a valuable clause, since my experience with young men indicates that many are glad of the opportunity later in life to repay advances thus received, although these are free gifts. I hope the trustees will gladly receive any such contributions and that this will foster the spirit of manly independence so dear to the Scot."

Held to the Grand Jury.

Boston, July 16.—Francis Burton of Dumont, Colo., charged with larceny in getting $2,500 on an alleged false claim from the New York Central & Hudson River R. R., was held to the grand jury by Juuge Adams in the second session of the municipal court. It is claimed that Burton secured $2,500 from the road for injuries alleged to have been sustained while a passenger, but which really were inflicted previously in a fight.

Voluntary Increase.

Columbus, O., July 16.—The local management of the Central Union Telephone Co. has voluntarily increased the salaries of all its operators about 20 per cent and reduced the working day to nine hours. About 100 girls are affected. It is stated the same advance will be granted in a number of other cities where the company is located.

One Hundred Hurt.

London, July 16.—"More than 100 persons, including troops and police, were wounded yesterday in an encounter at Lemberg," says the Vienna correspondent of the Daily Express, "growing out of an attempt by the police to stop street parades held in demonstration of the behalf of the unemployed."

Considered Insuperable.

Vienna, July 16.—"We learn from official sources in Paris," says the Politische Correpondenz, "that the difficulties of organizing an effective European customs league against the United States are considered insuperable."

Mark and William.

Canton, O., July 16.—Senator Hanna spent the afternoon yesterday with President McKinley. He arrived from Cleveland and was met at the station by Secretary Cortelyou.

THOUSANDS STRIKE

President Shaffer's Predictions are More Than Realized

BIG STRIKE IS NOW FAIRLY ON

While All the Mills of the United States Steel Corporation Are Included in the Conflict, the Three Companies Are First Attacked.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 16.—Reports received from all sources connected with the great strike of the steel workers indicate that the members of the Amalgamated association had matters well in hand and that the strike order was generally obeyed. Telegrams from various points where the mills of the American Tin Plate Co., the American Steel Hoop Co. and the American Sheet Steel Co. are located told of the shutting down of these plants in large numbers. In many cases the plants had been shut down by the first strike order which affected the sheet steel and the steel hoop companies only. The last order brought out all of the union plants of the American Tin Plate Co. with the single exception of the new mill in Monessen, which is still running. At the Amalgamated association headquarters it was stated that the figures given out Saturday night regarding the number of men who would be actually idle in the mills of the three companies had been proven correct. This number was placed at 74,000.

The strike, although one of the greatest that has been declared in recent years, will affect Pittsburg but slightly. Despite the fact that this city is, and for years has been, the recognized industrial center of the world, President Shaffer's action in calling the men of the American Sheet Steel, American Tin Plate and American Steel Hoop companies out on strike, will have but little bearing on the commercial life of Pittsburg. This is a peculiar fact, but it is nevertheless true.

Of the 74,000 men idle, 2,500 are in Pittsburg, 800 in Allegheny and 1,500 in McKeesport.

President Shaffer has it in his power to close many more Pittsburg mills, but it is not thought that he will do anything of a radical nature until he is compelled to.

The American Steel Hoop Co., supposedly non-union, known as the Painter mill, in West Carson street, was closed in all its branches. The tie-up at this mill was said to have been a surprise to the mill owners and officials in charge of it. The other plant, known as the Lindsay & McCutcheon mill, in Allegheny, was shut down completely in the puddling and bar mills. All the skilled workmen refused to enter the mill, and the company did not even operate the five furnaces. The finishing department of the mill was working, and as the men are not in the union, but it is claimed by the workers that the employes in that department will go out.

While all the mills of the United States Steel Corporation are included in the general conflict, the three companies are the first attacked.

The most interesting report to the Amalgamated men was the dispatch from New York which said a conference of manufacturers was to be held in New York today, at which Warner Arms, vice-president of the American Tin Plate Co., was to present a detailed account of the experiences of the committee that met the Amalgamated association in this city last week. It was stated that the question of again extending the olive branch to the strikers or of taking up the fight and crushing the association would be determined. Generally speaking, the workers, from President Shaffer down, seem to be looking for some sort of a settlement.

They Broke Even.

Rio Janeiro, July 16.—The Brazilian chamber of deputies has confirmed the report of the committee appointed to consider the case of Rear Admiral Mello and which was handed to the chamber July 12, and in which the accusations against the admiral were declared to be without foundation.

The chamber of deputies decided that Admiral Mello's accusations against President Campos Salles of Brazil, by which the officer attempted to justify his own conduct at the time of his arrest last April, were groundless.

Interlake Regatta.

Put-in Bay, O., July 16.—The annual interlake regatta begins here today and continues until Friday. Yachts from several cities along Lake Erie, including Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Erie, Put-in Bay and Sandusky, will compete. Some of the boats already entered are the White Wings, Clover, Corsair, Marietta, Cygnet, Restless, Bessie, Dreamer, Marian, Plover, Frolic, Crowler Meteor and Jane.

Today's races will be over a triangular course, once around, for 20-foot and 16-foot classes.

Dunder und Blitzen.

Berlin, July 16.—The weather here is the hottest known for several years. A number of persons died of sunstroke. Violent thunderstorms are reported in various sections of the country, and there was a cloudburst at Potsdam. Two men and many cattle were killed in the Harz mountains by lightning; several houses were burned and one man killed by lightning near Nienburg. At Herrenberg and Wurtemburg the crops have been half ruined by hail, and they have been badly damaged in other sections.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

BURIED AT NIGHT.

Body of Horace Peters, Who Murdered Peter Smith.

Benton Harbor, Mich., July 16.—The mystery surrounding the death of Peter Smith, who was shot by some one lurking behind a cock of hay in a field last Thursday morning, has been solved by the finding of the body of Horace Peters in a wooded swamp near Bainbridge Center. It has all along been suspected that Peters was the murderer, and only last Saturday the sheriff offered a reward for his capture.

The body was in a decomposed condition, which leads to the belief that the murderer went to the swamp immediately after committing his crime and killed himself.

Peters's body was placed in an ordinary dry goods box and buried in the woods at midnight Sunday. The greatest joy prevailed during the burial.

It is generally believed that Peters was insane at time of the murder, his immediate and only cause for the deed being the refusal of Smith to loan him a peck of potatoes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Didn't Work and Mrs. Thomas Shepard Is Dead.

Mason, Mich., July 16.—Mrs. Thos. Shepard, wife of a prominent Aurelius farmer, died Sunday night. She became the mother of a child about two weeks ago and was attended by christian scientists, no regular practicing physician being engaged. She was a firm believer in christian science and did not want the services of a doctor.

Undertaker McDonald of this city was called to prepare the body for burial, but could do nothing, as no burial permit could be secured. Several physicians were asked to sign the document, but refused, on the ground that they knew absolutely nothing of the case.

A coroner's jury was impaneled by Justice Ferguson and a postmortem examination was performed by Drs. Thomas of this city and Evalin of Aurelius. The jury adjourned until next Saturday. The case and the prominence of the parties have awakened widespread interest.

A BRILLIANT RECEPTION

Was the Opening Feature of the Maccabees Convention.

Port Huron, Mich., July 16.—A brilliant reception was the opening feature of the eleventh biennial review of Supreme tent and Supreme hive of the Maccabees last night. The business grind commences today and many important propositions are before both bodies. Changing of the present method of medical examinations and having a board of examiners instead of district examiners and rerating old members will bring out discussion in Supreme tent.

Dr. Mary A. Danforth, supreme medical examiner, has decided to withdraw for re-election, and her successor will be Dr. Susan Rose of Pennsylvania. The principal supreme officers of both bodies will be re-elected.

Poor Little Iva.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 16.—Little Iva May Hosack, one of twin girls, aged 17 months, found a match on the flood and commenced to play with it. In a moment her screams called her parents, who rushed in to find the little one enveloped in flames. They made frantic efforts to extinguish the blaze, and succeeded, but one-quarter of the child's body is blistered badly. There are doubts as to her recovery.

Hanging to a Tree.

Traverse City, Mich., July 16.—The body of Charles Ritchey was found on the peninsula hanging to a tree, by children picking berries. Ritchey, who had been allowed to leave the asylum to visit with a brother in town, escaped his brother in the morning and grabbed a piece of rope as he darted through the woodshed. Searchers were out all the afternoon feeling sure that he had made away with himself.

Shot by an Unknown.

Schoolcraft, Mich., July 16.—Ransom Carpenter's remains were brought from Newbury, Mich., for interment. He was shot there by unknown parties. He formerly lived here, was a Maccabee and leaves a widow and four children. The sheriff of Luce county is investigating the case. A stranger's handkerchief was found in the bedroom where Carpenter was discovered.

Queer Freak of Lightning.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 16.—A severe electrical storm passed over the city yesterday afternoon which caused the mercury to take on a considerable contraction. There was one mail box at the corner of Main and William streets from which the mail could not be collected, as it was so heavily charged with electricity that it could not be opened.

Saved by a Hero.

Jackson, Mich., July 16.—John Murta, 20 years of age, is something of a hero, having saved the life of Clyde Lee, a 15-year old boy employed with the Eldred Milling Co. Young Lee went swimming in a clay hole and getting beyond his depth sank to the bottom. Murta rescued Lee by diving. It required an hour's hard work to resuscitate him.

Fatal Shooting Affray.

To Be Cheerful.

The sovereign, voluntary path to cheerfulness, if our spontaneous cheerfulness be lost, is to sit up cheerfully, to look around cheerfully and to act and speak as if cheerfulness were already there. If such conduct doesn't make you soon feel cheerful, nothing else will on that occasion. So, to feel brave, act as if we were brave, use all our will to that end, and a courage fit will very likely replace the fit of fear. Again, in order to feel kindly toward a person to whom we have been inimical, the only way is more or less deliberately to smile, to make sympathetic inquiries and to force ourselves to say genial things. One hearty laugh together will bring enemies into closer communion of heart than hours spent on both sides in inward wrestling with the mental demon of uncharitable feel-

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

You think he was a very good soldier, I am told," said "Cat," looking keenly into the major's face a moment, then turning to scrutinize as keenly the column of horse just moving leisurely in from morning drill.

"An exceptionally fine one," said Melville.

And at that moment the exceptionally fine soldier, hat in hand, was standing patiently, silently, in the anteroom of a great railway superintendent. The half dozen chairs had long been occupied by others as wistful looking as himself. There were a dozen more silent, shabbily dressed men wearily lounging about. They had been waiting since 8 in the morning for an audience, but some matters of grave import "up the road" occupied every moment of the magnate's time. Clerks were hurrying in and out. Other officials, with anxious faces, came and went. Every now and then some of the waiting party would slip quietly out and, returning, hold whispered conferences with others of their kind. They were all, apparently, men of more or less experience in railroading, and Langdon stood among them an alien and a stranger. They looked at him queerly when the clerk came out, nodded to him and held open the door. Hat in hand, Langdon passed through a room where half a dozen men and women were clicking at typewriters and was shown into a small, sunny corner apartment. The superintendent sat at his desk, a stenographer beside him. A well dressed, handsome man of 50 was nervously pacing the floor.

Holding out a note, the superintendent said:

"You brought this from—from our president, Mr.—Mr. Langdon. What do you know about railroading?"

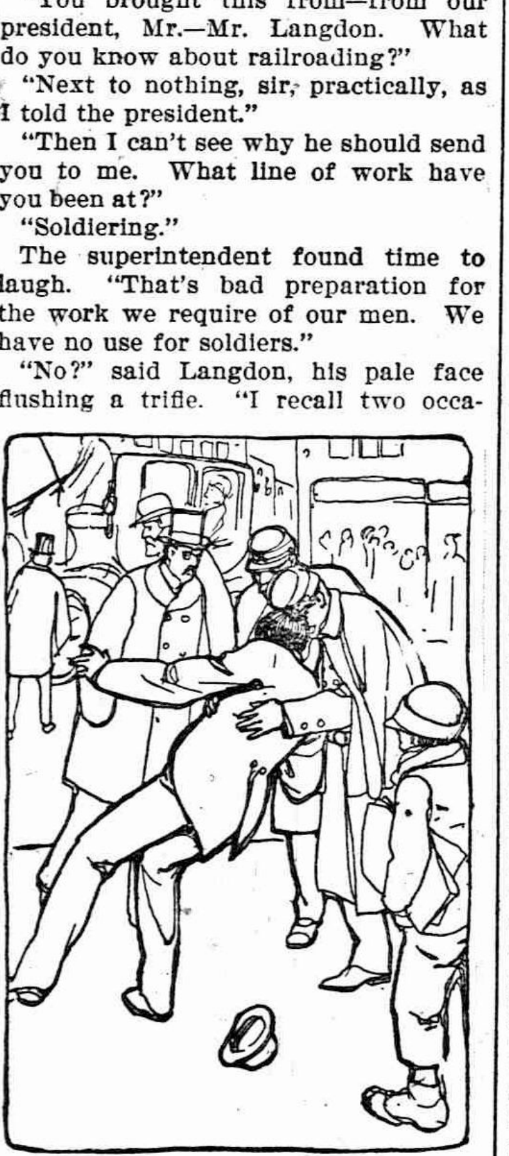
"Next to nothing, sir, practically, as I told the president."

"Then I can't see why he should send you to me. What line of work have you been at?"

"Soldiering."

The superintendent found time to laugh. "That's bad preparation for the work we require of our men. We have no use for soldiers."

"No?" said Langdon, his pale face flushing a trifle. "I recall two occasions on which my regiment was hurried to protect your property against your own men, and now that you're in for another strike I thought you'd be glad to hire men who would stick to their posts. I can at least handle a brake or fire an engine as well as the clerks and typewriters you are sending out to do it, and I'm more used to roughing it."



"My God, Jimmy, it's Lootenant Langdon!"

"D'you drink?" asked the official bluntly, then wished he hadn't, as he studied the pale, clean cut features, the clear, unflinching eyes. "Er—no. You don't look it."

"I have on a few occasions. I do not now."

"Are you willing to go west of the Mississippi and take your chances of being killed as a scab and can you go today?"

"Yes."

"Hold on a minute, Gregory," said the gentleman who had been pacing the floor, but now stood an interested listener. "Mr.—Langdon, is it? Didn't I hear something of you at Fort Pawnee? Weren't you in Captain Nathan's company? I thought so. We have no use for you, sir."

When Eric Langdon reached the street and the open air, he felt numb and dizzy. It was noon, and he had had no breakfast save a 5 cent cup of coffee at a little street stand. Once upon a time the president of this great corporation had visited the Hygeia and become the recipient of all the courtesies of the officers' club at Fort Monroe. On departing he had somewhat pompously said to Langdon, "If I ever can serve you in any way, sir, be sure to let me know." And Langdon marveled that the letter written by the president in New York did not command instant recognition at the general offices in Chicago. His last dollar had been spent to take him thither, and he stood at high noon in the heart of this great thronging hive of trade and traffic, a stranger in a strange land, stunned and wounded, cast out by the class with which he had foregathered, faint from lack of food, knowing not where to turn for help or comfort, when strode toward him through the hurrying throng, sturdily holding their own against the human tide that twice a day sweeps almost resistlessly from the arched doorways of those towering business blocks in the wonder of the western world, two soldiers in the warm blue overcoats and trim forage caps of the regular service. The glittering device above the visors danced before his eyes, the soldierly forms were swimming in midair, as he blindly staggered toward them.

"My God, Jimmy," said the nearest as he caught the fainting man in his brawny arms, "it's—it's Lootenant Langdon!"

CHAPTER III.

That evening half a dozen subaltern officers were gathered about the fireplace in the cheery messroom at Fort Sheridan. The post was new and unfinished. The great city lay temptingly near. The November gale swept spray laden from the stormy billows of the lake, and snow squalls had driven the command to their overcoats long weeks before the townsfolk ten leagues inland began to think of turning out in winter garments. A bleak and forbidding spot it looked when the wintry waves beat high on the bluffs, but here was one homeless, weather beaten traveler to whom at nightfall of that dreary day it seemed a blessed refuge. Against the stiff blast it was a long walk from the station to the messroom; but, supported by the strong arms of two sturdy boys in blue, the new arrival was fairly rushed along over the hard beaten path. He had no overcoat, and the civilian garb he wore was of the cut and style of three years gone by and fitted him all too snugly. He was numb from cold and fatigue, and his brain was a bit muddled by the heroic treatment administered by those amateur physicians, the soldier boys. He had fallen across their path, faint from hunger and sleeplessness and disheartened by his experiences of the morning. Recognizing him instantly, for they were of his own regiment, the gunners had borne him to a neighboring bar and brought him to with that military cure all, kill all, whisky. They had read trouble and suffering and hunger in his thin, white face, and their hearts were bigger than their purses. The free lunch hour was nearly spent, but they succeeded in getting a bowl of hot soup and a huge sandwich, and while one of their number stood sentry over his late superior, huddled in a chair by the stove, and answered evasively the innumerable questions of the inquisitive hangers on the other ran ten blocks to a recruiting office, where he told his story to the sergeant on duty and borrowed $3 until pay day, when, had the sergeant so demanded, as many did in the so called good old days of the army, he would gladly have paid back $5 for the accommodation. Thus re-enforced Corporal Ryan returned to his friends. Langdon was led to the railway station and given a more substantial lunch, he the while accepting the bounty of these soldier Samaritans in mingled helplessness, humility and gratitude that would have broken Rodney May's heart could he have seen it all and set Morrow and Le Duc to swearing. The man was dazed and benumbed by the weight of his troubles and the potency of soldier whisky. He was trying to pull himself together and think. He knew by name several well to do professional and business men of Chicago who at one time or other in his past at the Point, at Newport or Fort Monroe had begged him to let them know when next he came to Chicago, and no Chicagoan conceives the possibility of life without coming to Chicago. He had the cards of some of these gentlemen somewhere in his trunk, but that was at the station. He had the check still in his pocket, but not a cent wherewith to pay an expressman to take it somewhere if he had anywhere to tell him to take it. He reasoned that with a night's rest, a bath and clean linen he could muster up strength and pluck to go in search of these cordial associates and guests of the old days. There must be employment for willing hands and brains, he argued, and all industries could not be dominated by Nathan & Co. But that night's rest and bath, breakfast and trunk, how were they to be had? His conductors were full of hopeful suggestion, of loyal, confident assurance. All the lieutenant had to do was to go with them out to "Shurd'n," and the officers would welcome him with open arms. Who was there? he asked. Ah, yes; Merrivale. He was a classmate at the Point. Nelson? They were together in the same battery at Monroe. Hyatt, Hoyt and Stanton, three boys like May and Woodrow. Yes, they would welcome him for auld lang syne, and yet he shrank from it with utter repulsion. He, who had ever been leader and authority, how could he appear before them now so broken, so humbled, so stricken with poverty and shame? There was just one thing left to him, his watch, but that had been his father's, and the thought of pawning it gave him keen distress. Still he asked Ryan as they sat in the stuffy waiting room if he knew where the watch could be accepted as security for a suitable loan, and Ryan said they were going out to "Shurd'n" to attend to all that—without security. Langdon began to feel drowsy and numb all over and begged them to take him into the air. They did and tramped him up and down for 15 minutes, with the result that he was soon again chilled to the marrow and shivering. They compassionately sought to give him more whisky, but he shook his head. Something told him it was not helping him. Then they took alarm. A man must be ill indeed in the eyes of the Celtic soldier when a drink won't help him. It still lacked half an hour of train time. They had medical practitioners of small caliber attached to the recruiting stations in these days, and Ryan sent his comrade on the run to the North Side office, and, as luck would have it, back came the doctor. Brief examination was more than enough.

"You've got to get to bed and have good treatment," was the almost instant verdict, and helplessly Langdon bowed his head upon his breast. It was dusk when the way train let them off at Sheridan. Ryan sought to wrap his overcoat about his failing patient, but Langdon refused. The honest Irishman thought it was because the officer was too proud to [illegible] in a private's uniform and [illegible] buff. The officer would have [illegible] gladly had there been another to [illegible]. "If I weren't too old to 'list," he had said to his humble companions in Chicago, "I'd 'take a blanket' on the spot." They hurried him against the rising gale toward the officers' club and messroom, well knowing that there they would be apt to find more of the commissioned force than elsewhere. He was breathless, weak, shivering, when they reached the door and were confronted at the very threshold by two officers muffled in their capes, plunging out into the blast.

"What on earth have you got here?" gruffly queried the foremost, halting short in displeasure at the sight.

"It's Lootenant Langdon, sorr," said Ryan, with a touch of his cap. "We found him sick and starved in town, and Mr. Fownes said fetch him straight here."

"Here? Man alive, this is no"—

"Shut up, Bremer!" hurriedly interrupted the other. "It is Langdon! Why, Eric, old boy, don't you know Nelson? Come right in. Bring him right in here, men." And half leading, half bearing, they ran the drooping outcast into the light and warmth of the clubroom, scattering the group at the fire and sprawling him in a deep, easy chair before the blaze. "Give me that hot Scotch of yours, Snipey," ordered Nelson to a youngster in battery dress, who eagerly obeyed. "Now, Eric, swallow and don't say a word." And the hot liquid was absorbed in the midst of profound silence. "Tell me again the doctor's directions, corporal," said Nelson after a moment's study of the effect of his potion.

"That the lootenant needed to be put to bed and a doctor wid him," was the Irishman's rendition of the order, whereat there was a chuckle.

"All right. I understand. You men did just right. Steward, give Corporal Ryan and his comrade a good, hot toddy. Thank you both, men. I'll see you in the morning."

And they were going when Langdon feebly held out his hand and whispered. Nelson bent to hear.

"He says you two saved his life, and he wants to see you when he's better. So do I. Get a stretcher from the hospital and my buffalo robe and blankets, Ryan. Now, we'll have you fixed all right in five minutes, Eric, old boy. Snipey, see if Pills is in the cardroom. What's your hurry, Bremer? I may want your help."

The burly officer was again making for the storm door. He growled some inarticulate answer and shot out into the storm. Nelson glared after him a moment and frowned. "We don't need him," he said as he turned back to Langdon, over whom others were now sympathetically bending. Two or three of the party had drawn aloof and were conferring in low tones, glancing occasionally at the group by the fireside. Then, taking up their caps and overcoats, they edged away to the door. Again Nelson glared, took silent note of their faces and gave a significant bob of the head. "There's as much human nature and human sympathy in that squad as you'll find in a skin game," muttered he to a silent crony. The latter looked grave and perturbed.

"They never knew Langdon, and they only see the possibility of the colonel's coming down rough on us for harboring and consorting with a dismissed officer."

"Dismissed be hanged! Langdon's a better man today, broken as he is, than the cad who preferred the charges," was the hot reply.

"That's why I'm with you," was the quiet rejoinder. "All the same, men like Bremer and those doughboys will say the court declared the charges sustained and Langdon disgraced."

"Disgraced for smashing that sneak Torrance? By Jove, I hold him in higher esteem"—

"Ah, Nelson, it isn't all that. It's that unpaid bill business—all that load of debt that snowed him under, and you know it."

"Know it? Yes, and know, what's more, how little he was to blame. Had our colonel or Melville been in command there, do you suppose they would have let him be court martialed? No, sir! It was Nathan's snide work with that dashed old numskull of a dragoon—old 'Cat.' He never had the bowels of a snake. Find the doctor, Snipey?" he eagerly asked as the youngster came hurrying back.

"Coming the minute he finishes his hand," was the answer, and, true to his word, the young army surgeon speedily entered and came at once to the reclining figure in front of the fire. Langdon had been feebly replying to the sympathetic questions of one or two associates of other days. Now, with white, drawn face and somber eyes, he looked up at the new arrival. Professional decorum and the tenets of his cloth required of the physician an impassive yet sympathetic and reassuring demeanor. But, to the surprise of Nelson and Hoyt, the doctor plainly started the instant he caught sight of the patient.

"This—gentleman is?" he faltered, paling a trifle and looking inquiringly about him.

"Eric Langdon, a classmate of Merrivale's at the Point and my comrade at Monroe," answered Nelson stoutly. The doctor was new to the post and to him, and he wished it to be understood from the start that Langdon was his friend, his guest, and as such entitled to the best Fort Sheridan could give him. The doctor's hesitancy and change of manner put him instantly on the aggressive.

"I beg pardon," quickly spoke Dr. Armistead. "Mr. Langdon's face was familiar. I fancy I have seen his photograph. But that is of no consequence. Permit me," he continued, pulling himself together with evident effort and assuming the conventional manner of the physician. He bent and took Langdon's wrist and gazed thoughtfully, scrutinizingly, unflinchingly into the deep, haggard eyes. There was a moment's silence. Then, straightening up, the doctor spoke. "Mr. Langdon is to be with you, Mr. Nelson?"

"Certainly."

"Then I shall send the steward with medicine from the hospital. I should get him to bed as soon as possible"—

"I've sent for a stretcher, robes and blankets," interposed Nelson sharply. "That's what I intended to do from the start."

"Very good. Now a word with you." And the doctor drew the artilleryman aside. "Your friend will need nothing tonight but some hot broth and sedatives. If, however, he should be restless or ill or if you become anxious," and here the young surgeon seemed to hesitate in embarrassment, "I suggest your calling on Major Bloodgood, my senior."

"You consider it so serious?" asked Nelson in quick alarm.

"No," was the answer, "but"—

"But what, Dr. Armistead?" asked Nelson hotly. "Am I to understand you decline to see my friend and guest?"

The doctor flushed. He was a Virginian, "jealous in honor," sensitive to a turn. It was a moment before he spoke. Then the answer came calmly enough.

"No, Mr. Nelson, but your friend will probably decline to see me. Here comes the stretcher." And so saying the doctor left the room.

Half an hour later, in Nelson's own bed, comforted with a hot footbath and nourishing food, Langdon closed his eyes to thank the God that had not left him friendless in his prostration. He heard the voices of old comrades in the room below. He heard Nelson tiptoeing about the bed, arranging lamps and books for the night. Nelson had spread some blankets on a roomy old couch and was patting and shaking up a pillow, when the steward came softly in with some vials and medicine glasses.

"Dr. Armistead says," he began in low tone, when, to his amazement, Nelson sternly whispered, "Hush!" and, clapping his hand over his own lips to emphasize the order, glanced in anxious fear toward the bed. The caution was too late. With dilating eyes, Eric Langdon was struggling from the pillow and striving to rise.

Nassau's Lake of Fire.

"I doubt if many persons realize the fascination to be derived from a winter spent in the Bahamas," said a visitor just returned from there the other day. "Down near Nassau, for example, there is a curious sheet of water known as the Lake of Fire that is worth going far to see. It is simply a phosphorescent lake, but its weird effects cling to one's recollection in an uncanny way. It is about three miles from the hotel. You drive through quaint and narrow streets, with only here and there a lamppost shedding a dim light, and past the open doors of huts whose occupants seem to fill every space in the abodes to overflowing.

"The gates of the old estate of Waterloo have long since disappeared, and the house is in ruins, but you drive between the posts which still mark the entrance down a grass grown roadway to the edge of this wonderful pond. The water is only a few feet deep, and the pond is scarcely a quarter of a mile long. We stepped into a rowboat by the dim light of a lantern, and in a moment, as the boat pushed off and the oars broke the water into ripples, we were surrounded by a sea of flame. The divers who swam about seemed literally merged in blue smoke, for the effect of this phosphorescence is more like smoke than water. It reminds one of the butterfly dance seen on the stage. The form of the diver is surrounded by a luminous glow, and the fishes take fright and dart away like little flames into the dark and quiet waters. It is a beautiful sight."—New York Sun.

An Early Georgia Monster.

In the fore part of August, 1812, a party of hunters found in a mountainous region now known as Rabun county, Ga., a being nearly eight feet high covered with bluish hair and having a human face adorned with immense ears resembling those of an ass. The creature was stone deaf and on that account seemed wholly unconscious of the approach of the men. This monster seems, from old accounts, to have been seen upon several occasions during the next four years.

In 1816 a number of adventurers from Virginia, most of them surveyors working up the unexplored portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, formed themselves into a party for the express purpose of capturing the uncanny being if possible. They scoured the hills and valleys for several days and at last returned unsuccessful to the starting point.

The many tales told of this extraordinary being seem to have created quite a stir all along the Atlantic coast. A printed circular issued by a land company in 1815 says, "The climate of Georgia is exceedingly mild, the soil productive, and the danger of attack from uncouth beasts which are represented as being half beast and half man are fairy tales not worthy of consideration."

Barrymore and Modjeska.

Maurice Barrymore earned a reputation as a wit and really deserved it. His style could be less successfully transferred to the stage, as his efforts at comic writing showed, but in its spontaneous phases its effect always told. One of the stories told was about his experiences with Mme. Modjeska, with whom he acted for several years. He had been as careless as he often was on the stage, and Mme. Modjeska, with all the conscientiousness of a great artist, protested that he had no right to take his calling so lightly and that if he did not owe it to his reputation to do his best he at least owed it to her, because she had done so much in his behalf and had put him before the public in a dignified and serious line of parts.

"Why, madam," he said, "it is not you who brought me before the public and made me known. People had heard of me all over the United States when they thought that Modjeska was only the name of a tooth wash."

Not Satisfactory.

"No," said the doctor. "I haven't voted yet, and I am not going to vote. I am not feeling well today. Isn't that a valid excuse?"

"Not at all," responded the professor severely; "that's an invalid excuse."

"I suffered for months from sore throat. Eclectric Oil cured me in twenty-four hours." M. S. Gist. Hawesville, Ky.

TECUMSEH ATTORNEY

Loses his Money with Startling Rapidity.

Attorney Garland Gillespie, of Tecumseh, parted with a good, hard dollar Friday afternoon with a rapidity that made the experience of some of his fellow townsmen during the recent visit of Buckskin Bill and his short-change men in that quiet village appear commonplace.

Gillespie was seated in the jail office, talking with Sheriff Shepherd when a Times man entered in quest of news. After joking a few minutes Gillespie turned to Sheriff Shepherd with the remark:

"Want to make a dollar?"

"Certainly, if it's honest," was the response.

"I'll give you a dollar if you'll lock that fellow up," said Gillespie indicating the reporter.

Without a word Sheriff Shepherd arose, took down a bunch of keys and, unlocking the heavy door leading into the corridor, thrust the unoffending newspaper man inside and locked it again. Going over to the desk, Sheriff Shepherd picked up the dollar, walked back and unlocked the door, releasing the prisoner, the entire operation consuming about two minutes.

"Hold on, there," shouted Gillespie, "leave him locked in."

"There wasn't anything said about that," said the sheriff, "you only said lock him up," and Mr. Gillespie was obliged to see his dollar disappear as a result of a flaw in the commitment.

The sheriff and reporter now carry fifty cents apiece as a reminder of the occasion, while Mr. Gillespie says nothing, but keeps up an awful thinking.—Adrian Times.

Notice to Pensioneers.

Mr. D. M. Wells, representing a large pension firm of Coldwater, Mich., will be in Tecumseh at the Lilley House Wednesday, July 17th, for the purpose of consulting soldiers and their heirs in relation to all classes of claims against the government—original and increase claims, claims for restoration where the rating of claimants has been cut down. All rejected claims a specialty. The firm has had twenty years of experience in prosecuting all kinds of war claims. Claims arising out of the War of the Rebellion and the Spanish War prosecuted, bounty and land warrant claims, claims for honorable discharge prosecuted, and widows and minor children's claims increased under existing laws. Widows of soldiers, who, previous to their remarriage, were drawing a pension, can now, under a new law, again be restored to pension rolls in case of death of last husband, or of divorce, where she is not the party at fault, and where she is dependent upon her labor for her support. Do not fail to call at the time mentioned. Consultation free.

Mrs. Adelia Harland.

Mrs. Adelia Harland, mother of Elmer Fuller, died at their home on Oneida street last Wednesday evening of consumption of which she has long been a sufferer.

Mrs. Harland was born in Michigan in 1841 near Tecumseh and has lived in this town and Clinton all her life. She was the daughter of James Jackson, who, besides several brothers and sisters mourn her loss.

The funeral was held at the house Saturday morning at 9:30 and the burial took place at Clinton.

Another Runaway.

Yesterday afternoon as Miss Auten, of Cone, was driving through town, her horses became frightened and ran away throwing her out and breaking the buggy. She was taken in at Mrs. A. Lowry's, where it was discovered she was not hurt seriously. The horses were caught and one of them put on Mr. Lowry's buggy and the other Miss Auten led as she started for home.

When Miss Auten's horses started to run, they struck Mrs. Waldron's, rig which was standing near, knocking the horse over, but otherwise no damage was done.

BASE BALL.

Tecumseh Loses at Clinton Saturday with a Score of 15 to 6.

HARRIS AND BEASLEY WERE OUR BATTERY

And for Clinton: Martin and Gillen—Harris Pitched a Fine Game, but Had 12 Errors Behind Him.

The Tecumseh ball team was done up at Clinton last Saturday by a score of 15 to 6. The following score will show that Harris pitched a good game of ball, but that the out fielding of Tecumseh team was as bad as it could be. It seems that our boys could not feel the ball that day, and it certainly happened that Tecumseh was badly beaten by poor fielding all around.

ROUND ABOUT US.

A North Reading farmer going into his stable one day recently found his boy sitting on the back of the family horse with a slate and pencil in his hand. "Why, son," he exclaimed, "what are you doing?" "Writing a composition," was the reply. "Well, why don't you write it in the house?" asked the father. "Because," answered the little fellow, "the teacher told me to write a composition on a horse."—Reading Hustler.

A young man at Ortonville, went to spend the evening with his best girl, and was so supremely happy when he encircled her waist with his arm that he fell asleep. Naturally the young lady was indignant, and quietly rising she slipped from the room, returned with a wooden churn, which she substituted for herself, and retired. When the young man awoke, he was kissing the dasher, and then he realized what he had lost.—Adrian Press.

A Clayton dispatch of July 1 says: Mrs. Daniel Kelley, a farmer living near here, while alone at the house discovered two men approaching from the barn with masks over their faces. Suspecting something wrong, she rushed to her room, securing the money in the house and hiding it. The robbers approached, seized and bound her hand and foot and demanded the money. She claimed they had none, and after hunting the house left, securing nothing but a little change. Mrs. Kelley was found two hours later by her husband, who immediately gave the alarm.—Adrian Press.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burtless were returning from Tecumseh where they had been to visit his old partner and friend, E. G. Cook. They had passed Wm. Logan's farm, when Mr. B. saw at his right and in front of him a lake as large as Wampler's, its edge fringed with trees and on its bosom boats were floating at ease. He looked away thinking the scene would vanish, but as his eyes turned again in that direction he beheld the lake again beautiful and tranquil. He said nothing to Mrs. Burtless, who had also beheld the mirage, but was so bewildered that she dare not speak at first but finally called her husband's attention to it. They watched it for sometime, until they reached the Wm. Chase farm, where it gradually vanished from sight.—Manchester Enterprise.

DEPTH OF A RAINFALL.

The Method by Which It Is Accurately Measured.

Probably one question that has puzzled the lay mind is how the depth of a rainfall may be accurately determined. The way it is done is this:

A funnel whose larger aperture represents a surface of 100 square inches is placed in a position where it may catch the direct fall of the rain, with the rim of the funnel extending perhaps an inch or more beyond the platform to which it may be fixed. This is for the purpose of preventing any rain from being washed into the funnel and increasing the true fall. From this funnel the water runs to a tube which bears an exact and carefully determined ratio to the area of the funnel's mouth, say one-tenth.

If, therefore, the tube shows water to the depth of an inch, it is clear that one-tenth of an inch of rain has fallen. The tube is provided with a carefully graduated scale so that the fall may be readily seen. Three inches of rain would show a depth of 30 inches in a tube one-tenth the size of the receiving aperture, and the decimals of an inch could be quickly noted by observing the scale.

If placed on the roof of a building, the apparatus should be kept away from the edges to prevent any peculiar slant of the wind carrying into the funnel a larger proportion of rain than would fall into it under normal conditions. The larger the aperture of the receiving funnel is made the more accurate will be the results obtained.

A curious fact that has been noted in connection with rainfalls is that gauges placed on roofs usually gather less water than those placed on the ground. This is accounted for on the theory that the rain in falling absorbs some of the moisture of the air, and the greater distance it falls the larger will be the bulk of the individual drops.—New York Herald.

THE DEER'S HORNS.

They Present all the Phenomena of Animal and Vegetable Growth.

Why and how is the deer so peculiarly unlike any other of the bovine race, the horn differing so materially from all the horned cattle in its composition, growth, maturity and decline? It presents all the phenomena of animal and vegetable growth. It sprouts from the brain without any prolongation of the frontal bone. It rises and breaks through the sinews and takes root on the bone, growing the same as a vegetable. It is nourished by and secretes albumen upon the surface and disposes of the fibrine the same as an animal.

It is clothed with a skin and hairy coat very different from that on the rest of the body. This covering and hair possess a property unknown in other animal bodies—that of being a styptic to stanch its own blood when wounded. It carries marks of the age on the buck by putting out an extra branch each year, which shows an additional power each year to produce them. And this power does not exist in the female. So this difference is more distinctly marked than in any other class of animals. Again, the horn possesses properties unknown in any other animal matter. It is entirely inodorous, capable of resisting putrefaction and almost impervious to the effects of the atmosphere.

And still water at 300 degrees F. will dissolve these horns readily, even though they are not soluble in alcohol and resist the action of acids and alkalies. It is the only vegeto animal substance that we know of that does not perpetuate itself by procreation.

The male and the female are sustained by the same nutrition and elements, and the male only produces horns. This phenomenon is quite as much of a curiosity as the absence of the horn in the buck after shedding.

Serpent Worship.

It was probably in the character of a healer that the serpent was regarded by the Milesians, since most of the localities of Ireland connected with traditions of these reptiles destroyed by St. Patrick were esteemed places of healing. To these spots, generally holy wells, the people of the poor and ignorant classes still resort as pious pilgrims taking relief from their infirmities. They drink of the sacred waters and circle about the fount on their knees while repeating their prayers, and it is a curious fact, as we are informed by an old time traveler in Ireland, that this circling was formerly done "groveling on hands and knees or even lying flat on the ground and wriggling like a snake." This must undoubtedly have been a relic of the ancient rites, though the people had not the slightest idea of its origin or even that such a religion had ever existed on their island.

In the same way they still on Beltane eve (Bel-tinne, or Bel's fire) kindle "bale fires" on the summit of every hill and send flaming wheels rolling down their sides, though ignorant that they are celebrating a day consecrated to Bel, or Baal, by their Phœnician and Irish ancestors, who observed it in a precisely similar manner.—New Lippin-

New Wabash Equipment.

The Wabash Railroad has just received and placed in service on its lines running out of Chicago the following new equipment: Eight combination baggage and passenger coaches, thirty palace day coaches, ten reclining chair cars, three cafe cars and two dining cars. The majority of these new cars are seventy feet in length and fitted with the latest style wide vestibules. They have six wheel trucks with steel wheels. The cars are finished in the finest selected St. Jago mahogany. The lighting is by Pintsch gas with the exception of the cafe, dining and some of the chair cars, which are unusually well lighted by electricity, the fixtures being especially designed for these cars. The dining cars will seat 29 persons and have ample kitchen space. The cafe cars will seat 18 persons in the cafe and have a library and smoking room in the observation end of the car which will seat 14 persons. These cars also contain a private case with seating capacity for eight persons. These new cars represent the highest stage of development of modern car building. Nothing has been omitted and no expense spared that would add to their luxurious elegance or to the comfort and convenience of the patrons of the Wabash road.

No line is now better equipped than the Wabash for handling business to the Pan-American Exposition. Write for a copy of Pan-American folder containing a large colored map of the Exposition grounds and zinc etchings of the principal buildings.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of the War And a Legacy It Left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

TRICKS IN THE SILK TRADE.

How Shoppers Are Fooled—Tests Which Show the Pure Material.

Pure silk, when it has been through all the processes necessary to bring out all its good qualities, is worth its weight in silver, said an expert the other day. Therefore the women who expect to buy pure silk at little more than the price of cotton must expect to be fooled, and there are lots of ways by which the manufacturer gets even with them.

They make stuff that is called silk and passes for it with credulous persons who don't know any better out of nearly any old thing now. One favorite imitation silk is made of cellulose treated with chemicals. It isn't a good material to get on fire in. Then there are south sea island cottons and some mercerized cotton which after treatment look something like silk, though of course they wear very differently, and their silken appearance soon vanishes.

But it is in adulterating goods which really have some silk in them that the greatest skill is exercised to deceive the buyer. To obtain the required rustle and body rough floss is often used for the woof of the material. This soon causes it to wear shiny.

Another trick is to increase the weight and apparent solidity of a flimsy silk material by using metallic salts in the dye vats. Pressing with some kinds of silk increases the weight also, but at the sacrifice of strength. Cheap, crackly, stiff silk which has heavy cords is good silk to avoid. It won't wear.

There are several tests which reveal readily the purity of a piece of silk. The microscope of course will show it at once, even to an unpracticed eye. Pure silk has the appearance of fine, smooth tubes. Another good test is by burning. Pure silk burns slowly, with a slight odor. Cotton flares up quickly and would throw off a decidedly disagreeable smell.

Then the tongue will readily reveal the presence of metallic salts. There is no mistaking their taste. But all these may be disregarded, said the expert, when silk is offered for the price of cotton. You need not bother to test that stuff.—New York Sun.

Making It Rather Personal.

This is credited as one of General Lew Wallace's Turkish jokes: There lived in Stamboul, Turkey, a well to do Turk named Ismad Ismail Hassam. He was endowed with oriental wit that stood him well in hand when he was in a tight place. A neighbor called on Ismail one day and wanted to borrow his donkey to use an hour. Ismail made a low salaam and said:

"Neighbor, I am sorry, but my boy started on the donkey an hour ago to Scutari. By now he is gayly trotting over the hills far from the sacred precincts of Stamboul."

Just as Ismail finished his speech a donkey's loud bray was heard in the stable, which was under the same roof as Ismail's house, but in the rear. The neighbor said:

"Ah, I hear your donkey bray."

Ismail protested that his neighbor's ears were deceived and that the noise was not a donkey's bray. Then the donkey, which was supposed to be jogging along toward Scutari, brayed twice loudly. It was too much, and the neighbor cried:

"Oh, that is your donkey, Ismail. Allah help me. I can now borrow him."

Then Ismail said:

"Which do you believe is lying, the donkey or me?"

The neighbor had to give Ismail the benefit of the doubt and went away.

Why Spiders Are Not Insects.

The spider is not an insect, though probably nine people out of ten would class it under this term. With scorpions and mites spiders form a class in the animal kingdom known as Arachnida. This name is derived from a mythical personage called Arachne, the daughter of a purple dyer of Lydia, who was fabled to have challenged Minerva to a trial of skill in spinning. So indignant was the goddess at this act of boldness that she forthwith transformed the hapless challenger into a spider, presumably in order that she might have the best possible opportunity of practicing the art on which she prided herself so much.

Spiders differ from insects in five main particulars. Their eyes are simple instead of compound, they have eight legs in place of six, they do not pass through the metamorphoses which are characteristic of insects, they have no antennæ and their breathing is accomplished by means of organs which combine the functions of lungs and gills, instead of by tubes pervading their bodies. These points of distinction are sufficient to determine the fact that it is impossible to class spiders as insects.

Remarkable Caves.

M. P. Chaudoir in the Mouvement Geographique describes a visit to the remarkable stalagmite caves within two hours' walk from Tanga, in eastern Africa. Passing through several chambers rising to a height of from 100 to 250 feet, he reached a vast saloon covering an area of 5,000 square yards. Millions of bats covered the roofs and interfered with the exploration of the narrow passages. One of these, killed with a stick, measured 4 feet 10 inches across the wings.

A UNIQUE SENTENCE.

THE NOVEL PENALTY A JUDGE IMPOSED UPON TWO MEN.

Both Prisoners Were Condemned to Jail Until One of Them, a College Graduate, Taught the Other How to Read and Write.

Along in the seventies the late Judge Arnold Krekel was holding court at Jefferson City, relates an old timer, when there appeared before him two men charged and indicted for a violation of the United States laws, one of whom will be called Brown. He was charged with cutting timber on the public domain. Brown was about 40 years old and had been reared on the border in Arkansas and never had any opportunities for schooling, hence was unable to read or write. In his endeavors to get a living he had cut timber suitable for making ax handles on United States lands, which led to his arrest and imprisonment. The other man will be called Jones, for the real name of both men are not known in the memory of any one who witnessed the incident.

Jones was charged with and indicted for having sold liquor to the Indians. Mr. Jones was a native of New York, a graduate of Union college and was educated for a lawyer. He possessed a highly cultured mind, a good Latinist and thoroughly scholarly in all sorts of books. Not succeeding in his profession in his native state, more from lack of application than otherwise, he left that country and plunged into the great west and located nobody knew where, but he drifted into the lower strata of society, and to obtain the necessaries of life he resorted to "bootlegging" among the red men of the Indian Territory border. His arrest and imprisonment followed.

The two men were arraigned before Judge Krekel and the indictments read. They both pleaded guilty and threw themselves upon the mercy of the court. The court questioned both prisoners at length and drew from each his history. He recounted the wrongs they had been guilty of against society. He did this in a kindly tone and manner, suggesting in a mild form that both might have been useful members of some community had they sought honorable means and methods to secure a livelihood.

The court seemed puzzled how to assess a punishment that would meet the ends of justice and protect the government, its lands, its wards and society. Finally, sitting upright in his chair, looking over his glasses as both men stood before him, in a voice little louder and more positive than usual he said:

"Mr. Brown, it is the sentence of the court that you be confined in the Cole county jail until you are educated to read and write." The judge then turned his eyes upon the other prisoner at the bar and, possibly in a louder voice, said, "Mr. Jones, it is the sentence of the court that you be confined in the Cole county jail until you have taught Mr. Brown to read and write, and I enjoin upon the keeper of the jail to afford you every facility possible with the safe keeping of his prisoners."

The lawyers and spectators in court looked with astonishment at each other as the sentence was concluded, and the marshal led the prisoners out of the courtroom.

It was the second term of the court after this incident when the marshal conducted Brown and Jones into court, and it was announced by the court that Brown had completed his education—ready to graduate—able to read and write. Judge Krekel looked over his glasses and asked that the prisoner give him an evidence of his being able to read. Brown stood up and read a few paragraphs from a newspaper to the satisfaction of the court, when he said, "Mr. Clerk, will you let him sit at a table and write me a letter?"

Paper, pen, ink and a seat were furnished Brown, who went to work to write a letter to the court. For some time the poor fellow struggled with the task, and in the meantime Jones was very nervous, fearing he would be compelled to go back to jail and "take up school" again. Finally the clerk said, "May it please your honor, the prisoner can write, but cannot form sentences to make it intelligible."

"Mr. Clerk," said the court, not taking his eyes from the court docket he was looking at, "you will dictate a letter for him and see what headway he makes with that." The clerk dictated a letter that the prisoner wrote quite readily, which subsequently was passed up to the court, who read the same, and after giving the prisoners a short lecture both were discharged and walked from the courtroom free men —Jefferson City Tribune.

Dionysius' Ear.

In Syracuse is a cave said to have been constructed by the tyrant Dionysius, probably used as a prison. It is made in the shape of an immense human ear, and its acoustic properties are most remarkable. Maxwell Sommerville, the author of "Sands of Sahara," visited it and had its properties exhibited to him by the guide stationed there.

The man took a sheet of letter paper and, standing within the portal of the ear, struck the edge of the paper with the forefinger of his right hand once, twice, thrice. Each light tap was repeated through the deep orifices of that stone ear as if it had been a blow with a heavy sledge hammer on the roof of an iron house. He then rattled the paper slightly, and that feeble sound was augmented a millionfold, reverberating through the vaults above and beyond like the crash and roll of thunder. He whistled, spoke and called. Thousands of stentorian voices repeated every sound. Turning to my companion, I said:

"We must not longer tarry. Let us embark. Now we shall go to Kabylia, on our way to the desert of Sahara."

Myriad lungs of stone caught up the last word of each phrase and answered aloud, "Tarry—arry—embark—ark—Kabylia—bylia—Sahara—hara—ara—a—a."

FRIGHTENED HIS WIFE.

Forty Cents Almost the Cause of a Catastrophe.

Before Mrs. Browley was married she scoffed at the misguided girls and women who kept personal accounts. Her argument was that if you know how much money you had and it was all gone what was the use of piling on the anguish by having your folly and extravagance in black and white to stare you in the face, especially as you had no more money at the end of the month than you had without an account book?

But since she has been running a house she has achieved not one but nearly a dozen account books. There is one devoted to the grocery man, another to the butcher, personal accounts take a third, and so on till she spends nearly all her glad young life balancing sums. It is a matter of pride with her that they shall come out even, and so there was woe last month when 40 cents refused to be accounted for. She and Mr. Browley had a grave and lengthy discussion over the missing 40. Each accused the other of frivoling the sum away and neglecting to enter it on the proper book, "Sundries." Mr. Browley insisted strenuously he was not guilty. Mrs. Browley looked pained and urged him to confess. He left for down town vowing vengeance. It was late that afternoon when Mrs. Browley was entertaining a roomful of aristocratic callers that a telegraph boy appeared. The maid brought in the fatal yellow envelope, and at once the bride knew her husband had been fatally injured and was sending for her. Some one revived her with smelling salts, a lady in purple velvet fanned her with a hastily snatched lamp shade, and a third visitor with more presence of mind than the rest opened the telegram. The message read:

"Honest, now, what did you do with that 40 cents?"—Chicago News.

The Breton Peasant.

If there is a country where the tradition of hatred of "the Englishman" as a hereditary enemy still holds it is in Catholic Brittany. In the eyes of the Breton peasants and fishermen the Englishman is the enemy with whom they have fought battles and will fight them again.

That is to say, the Englishman stands for the typical sailor of a man-of-war or torpedo boat, whom they will fight when the time comes for the attack, but no one thinks of him as a man. The enemy is a unit of war, something outside ordinary life, a being in uniform whom it is glorious to kill. He is "the enemy"—something which will do great mischief to France if one does not take care, something which must be much more terrible and dangerous than they can imagine, since all the men of France lose the best years of their youth in learning to kill this eventual adversary.

If ever the peasants come clearly to realize that the only use of war is to kill people like themselves; if ever each soldier becomes capable of imagining what the shock of two armies is and by what complicated series of lies and intrigues peoples are brought to the point of killing each other, the work of peace congresses will be wonderfully simplified.—Contemporary Review.

Reading as a Cure.

The practice of reading aloud at regular intervals is of great benefit to any one affected with a chest complaint. In all cases of lung trouble it is important to indulge in those exercises by which the chest is in part filled or emptied of air, and reading aloud, singing and whistling are three of those exercises.

There are many who cannot sing, and we do not expect the fair sex to whistle, but reading aloud can be practiced by all. Care must be taken not to overdo it, of course, and the body should be in such a position as to allow the chest to have free play.

Reading aloud, if we pay attention to what we are doing, will not only be beneficial from the standpoint of health, but will also have the effect of making us better speakers by teaching us proper modulations of the voice and by increasing our knowledge.

This is where it has the advantage over whistling and singing.

STALKED BY VULTURES.

While a Man Was Trailing a Buck the Birds Followed the Man.

I met with a curious and not altogether pleasant experience, writes an Anglo-Indian correspondent who has done a good deal of large and small game shooting in India, when I was one day stalking a black buck. Between me and my quarry lay a large flat field of black cotton soil bordered by a very low, straggling and thinly growing hedge of small babul trees. My only way to get a shot was to cross this, keeping the bushiest tree between me and the buck, who had not much to browse on and was therefore seldom motionless. I proceeded to do the hundred yards on the flat of my stomach. This on loose, hard baked black cotton soil was no joke. I pushed my rifle on ahead; then, wriggling past it until the muzzle was near my knee, I would pass it on in front again, and so on.

Progress was slow, and I was so absorbed that I failed to observe shadows crossing and recrossing my path and circling round until I had gone some 50 yards. Then the whirring of wings attracted my ears, and almost at the same moment a vulture landed on the ground not 20 yards away. I looked up. The air was alive with these repulsive looking birds. Then it flashed across me that I was being stalked! Doubtless these birds were attracted by my extraordinary method of procedure and mistook me for a wounded or dying man making a final effort to reach some shady spot. This was especially possible, as the experience occurred in a famine district where deaths by the wayside were not infrequent. By looking up I had evidently shown myself to the buck, for he was now off at full tilt. I therefore took pot shot at the vulture at 20 yards, but did not allow for the sighting sufficiently and missed him. The thought of being waited for by a flock of vultures while very much alive and well was, to say the least, uncanny.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Burden Bearers of the East.

In the east the camel today, as in the days of Solomon, is the principal beast of burden in peace and in war. Across the pitiless desert he strides, his great pack nodding as he swings along. Down the old, old trail that winds through the hills of Lebanon, blinking, they come in pairs, bringing cedars to the sea. But the most remarkable of all freighters is the eastern hamal, the human burden bearer. All or nearly all the freight of Constantinople is handled by the hamal. He wears on his back a regular pack saddle, thin at the top, where it rests on his shoulders, and thick at the bottom, where it ends at his hips. A broad band circles his forehead, and when he leans forward the saddle presents a flat, level surface.—Munsey's Magazine.

FEATHERED FREAKS.

BIRDS WITHOUT WINGS AND BIRDS WITHOUT SONG.

The Penguin Is a Bird That Walks and Swims, but Does Not Fly—A Bird That Can Run Faster Than the Swiftest Horse—The Tailor Bird.

Birds without wings are found in New Zealand and Australia. Kiwi is the name of one species. Beautiful mats are made of the feathers of the white variety, but it takes ten years and more to collect enough feathers to make even a small mat which would sell for about $150.

Birds without song belong to Hawaii. In Honolulu one sees a bird about the size of the robin, an independent sort of fellow, that walks about like a chicken, instead of hopping like a well trained bird of the United States, and it has no song.

A bird that walks and swims, but does not fly, is the penguin. No nests are made by penguins, but the one egg laid at a time by the mother is carried about under her absurd little wing or under her leg.

The largest of flight birds is the California vulture or condor, measuring from tip to tip 9½ to 10 feet and exceeding considerably in size the true condor of South America. The bird lays but one egg each season—large, oval, ashy green in color and deeply pitted, so distinctive in appearance that it cannot be confounded with any other.

The California condor is rapidly approaching extinction and museums all over the world are eager to secure living specimens. It is believed that there is only one in captivity.

Another large bird is the rhinoceros bird, which is about the size of a turkey. One recently shot on the island of Java had in its crop a rim from a small telescope and three brass buttons, evidently belonging to a British soldier's uniform.

A bird which is swifter than a horse is the road runner of the southwest. Its aliases are the ground cuckoo, the lizard bird and the snake killer, snakes being a favorite diet. In northern Mexico, western Texas and southern Colorado and California it is found. The bird measures about two feet from tip to tip and is a dull brown in color. Its two legs are only about ten inches long, but neither horses with their four legs nor hounds nor electric pacing machines are in it for swiftness when it comes to running.

Most curious are the sewing or tailor birds of India—little yellow things not much larger than one's thum. To escape falling a prey to snakes and monkeys the tailor bird picks up a dead leaf and flies up into a high tree, and with a fiber for a thread and its bill for a needle sews the leaf on to a green one hanging from the tree. The sides are sewed up, an opening being left at the top. That a nest is swinging in the tree no snake or monkey or even man would suspect.

Many a regiment cannot compare in perfection of movement with the flight of the curlews of Florida winging their way to their feeding grounds miles away, all in uniform lines in unbroken perfection. The curlews are dainty and charming birds to see, some pink, some white.

Birds in flight often lose their bearings, being blown aside from their course by the wind. In this case they are as badly off as a mariner without a compass in a strange sea on a starless night.

All very young birds, by a wise provision of nature, are entirely without fear until they are able to fly. The reason of the delayed development of fear is that, being unable to fly, the birds would struggle and fall from their nests at every noise and be killed. Suddenly, almost in a day, the birds develop the sense of fear, when their feathers are enough grown so that they can fly.

It is always a source of wonder to arctic explorers to find such quantities of singing birds within the arctic circle. They are abundant beyond belief. But the immense crop of cranberries, crowberries and cloudberries that ripen in the northern swamps accounts for the presence of the birds.

A stick of wood seven inches long and a quarter of an inch in diameter was once taken from a wren's nest. It is very singular that so small and delicate a bird should use such rough material with which to construct its nest. If an eagle should use material proportioned to its size, its nest would be made up of fence rails and small saw logs.

The extraordinary situations in which nests are found occasionally almost give one the impression that birds must be endowed with a sense of humor. For instance, a wren built its nest upon a scarecrow, a dead sparrowhawk, which a farmer had hung up to frighten away winged ravagers of his crop. In the pocket of an old jacket hanging in a barn a bird, also a wren, made its nest, which when discovered contained five eggs. It was a robin that raised a young family in a church pew and a robin that built its nest in the organ pipes of a church. Places of worship have always been favorite building places for birds.

Skill In Throwing Off Mail Bags.

The busiest clerk in any crew or car is the one who is detailed to receive and throw off the sacks and pouches. To lift a heavy mail sack and throw it from a car moving at the rate of a mile a minute is a matter of good target shooting. "Looks easy enough," commented one of the veteran clerks at the letter case, "and it does seem as if a man should be able to hit a station platform without much difficulty, but you see that station is passed and gone in about one second. Then, the suction of a train running at this speed is something terrific, and until the knack of throwing a pouch is learned a man is liable to feed the wheels with a few letters."—Saturday Evening Post.

Origin of the Word Sterling.

The origin of the word "sterling" is very curious. Among the early minters of coin in northern Europe were the dwellers of eastern Germany. They were so skillful in their calling that numbers of them were invited to England to manufacture the metal money of the kingdom. The strangers were known as "easterlings." After a time the word became "sterling," and in this abbreviated form it has come to imply what is genuine in money, plate or character.

It Dazzles the World.

No discovery in medicine has ever created one quarter of the excitement that has been caused by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It's severest tests have been on hopeless victims of consumption, pneumonia, hemorrhage, pleurisy and bronchitis, thousands of whom it has restored to perfect health. For coughs, colds, asthma, croup, hay fever, hoarseness and whooping cough it is the quickest, surest cure in the world. It is sold by C. A. Wright who guarantees satisfaction or refunds money. A Cherokee Dish.

An article of food much used by the Cherokees is made from corn. The process is first to soak the corn in strong lye made from hickory ashes, just as white people in the country make hominy. This removes the hulls. The corn is then put into a large mortar made by hollowing out the end of a large log and is pounded by a huge pestle.

As the process of pounding goes on the crushed corn is removed from the mortar and riddled with a sieve made of cane and then fanned in the wind to remove the hulls. The "grit," as the course meal is called, is then replaced in the mortar and pounded into a fine meal. It is then boiled up with cayenne pepper and other ingredients. A small amount of lye is left in the meal, and it has a tendency to preserve it for a long time. However, if the stuff sours, it is regarded as a great delicacy. It is known as "con-a-hanna." The food is sometimes varied by the addition of nuts, which is considered especially fine. With the nuts it is called "ca-nutch."

In the olden times cakes were made of "con-a-hanna" by baking the substance in rudely constructed rock ovens or in hot ashes. These cakes would keep for a long time and, in connection with the wild game, provided nourishment for the Indians on their long hunts. Many of the older Cherokees still use the mortar and pestle to make the dish.—Kansas City Journal.

The King's Finger Bowl.

When a member of the royal family comes to dinner, it is a point of etiquette to provide none but the illustrious guest with a finger bowl at the end of the banquet. The other diners must get on somehow without that convenience.

The reason is a curious one. In early Georgian days one never knew who was loyal. Every other man might be a Jacobite in his secret heart. Now, it was a piece of Jacobite ritual whenever the toast of "The King" was drunk secretly to pass the goblet over any water that happened to be by the drinker. This was supposed to convert the toast into that of "The King Over the Water," the exiled Stuart at Rome or St. Germains.

On this becoming known the court insisted that there should be no water within reach of any guest, and the prohibition still holds.—London News.

UNEXPECTED GAIN

Strikers Have Captured the Last Steel Hoop Mill.

THE EMPLOYERS STILL SILENT

The Present Center of the Trouble Is Now Located at Wellsville, Ohio, Where a Big Mass Meeting Was Held Last Night.

Pittsburg, July 19.—The Chronicle-Telegraph says: The strike has affected the sheet steel trade more seriously than was at first supposed, and it is impossible to place an order for delivery within three months. The independent manufacturers are crowded with orders and are obtaining high prices for their product. Sales have been made at $73 a ton, an advance of $6 a ton over the price ruling for No. 28 gauge before the strike, and $11 a ton over the price recently announced by the American Sheet Steel Co. Consumers are unable to get deliveries on orders placed with the combine and are endeavoring to secure their supply elsewhere.

Most important of all news regarding the strike that reached Pittsburg was the action of the men employed in the Duncansville plant of the American Steel Hoop Co. A telegram was received by President Shaffer from the men in the morning asking if they should strike. The message was a surprise for the Amalgamated people, as they were not looking for this news so soon. President Shaffer answered telling the men not to come out unless they were organized. If organized they should strike, for they were needed.

In the afternoon another telegram was received from Duncansville, asking that an organizer be sent to them at once. In compliance with this request, Vice-President John Pierce started for Duncansville this evening to complete the organization. A meeting is expected to be held tonight.

The Duncansville plant is the last of the hoop plants to remain at work, and the Amalgamated association officials say if they are successful in closing this plant they will be masters of the situation, as far as the steel hoop company is concerned, at least.

The present center of the troubles seems to be at Wellsville, O., where a public mass meeting was held for the purpose of presenting both sides of the controversy to the men and citizens generally. The entire district contributed attendants at the meeting, and a number of speeches were made, the principal one being that of President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association.

A dispatch last night from Monessen says: "In spite of all efforts to the contrary, the tin mill here is still running full, and as far as present appearances indicate, it promises not to be affected in the slightest by the strike. The hoop mill is closed down with the exception of 20 men, who are making some needed repairs."

Amalgamated Secretary John Williams received a letter from Vice-President W. C. Davis of the Chicago district, announcing that the men employed by the Federal Steel Co. had been assessed one day's pay for the strike fund. The amount is to be sent every pay day while the strike continues, and Secretary Williams says as there are fully 8,000 men employed by the big steel concern at its Chicago, Joliet and Milwaukee works, the contribution will amount to about $32,000 every two weeks.

On Account of the Strike.

Washington, July 19.—Owing to the delay in repairing the military transports Sherman and Logan on the Pacific coast on account of the strike, orders have been sent to Manila to expedite the return to the United States of the transport Sheridan. The tie-up of the Sherman and Logan is interfering with the Pacific transport service and there is great need for the return of the vessels of that service now in the Philippines. The present plan is to have the Sheridan at San Francisco in time to permit her to start back to Manila by September.

Importing Workmen.

Reading, Pa., July 19.—The P. & R. Railway Co. last night brought in a large number of blacksmiths and boilermakers to take the places of the 300 men now on strike. The new comers were at once taken to the locomotive shops, where quarters have been fitted up for them.

A DOUBLE MURDER.

Negro Kills Two White Men and Flees to the Hills.

Dingess, W. Va., July 19.—Henry Alexander, colored, shot and killed Philip Bennett and Benjamin Carter, both white, here and then fled to the mountains, where he was pursued by a posse. Alexander handed Bennett a quarter and requested him to change it, and Bennett threw the money into the street. This enraged Alexander, who picked up the money and started to walk away, when he suddenly wheeled about and opened fire, killing both Bennett and Carter.

Alexander fled, but it was rumored here that he had been captured in the hills four miles south of here by the officers and taken to Williamson by a circuitous route to avoid lynching. Both of the dead men were well known, and indignation runs high.

BASE BALL.

GETTING POINTERS.

For the Improvement of the Washington Park System.

London, July 19.—D. H. Burnham, Charles McMim and Charles Moore, members of the committee for the improvement of the Washington park system, arrived in London after visits to Paris, Rome, Venice, Berlin and other continental cities.

"The problem of the beautification of Washington," said Mr. Burnham to an interviewer, "is one of the most interesting that could be presented to an architect. We have had but little time to study European cities, yet we have learned much that will aid us. The nearest example for Washington is Rome, where the Tiber corresponds with the Potomac. We have also found many useful suggestions in the embankment in London." The committee sails for the United States July 26th.

INTERNATIONAL BOAT RACES.

All Ready for the Great Events on the Schuylkill.

Philadelphia, July 19.—All the amateur oarsmen of the United States and Canada who are entered for the several events in the national regatta, to be held on the Schuylkill river today and Saturday, are now on the scene of the coming contests.

The regatta, judging from the quality of the entries and the large number of out-of-town contestants, promises to be one of the best ever held by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. Among the last crews to arrive were the Canadians.

"Boathouse row" along the Schuylkill is gaily bedecked with the American and British flags and all sorts of club colors in honor of the visiting contingent.

Suits Dismissed.

New York, July 19.—Judge Lacombe of the United States circuit court, on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs, dismissed 20 suits brought by members of the Sixty-ninth regiment against the Louisville & Nashville railroad, to recover damages for injuries received in the wreck of a train near Chattanooga while they were being transferred from one camp to another during the Spanish-American war. There were some 70 suits in all brought by members of the regiment. Two or three were brougt to trial, resulting in the recovery of damages for small amounts.

Mongolia Now Russian.

London, July 19.—"Mongolia is now Russian," says a dispatch to the Daily Express from St. Petersburg. "Urga, a Chinese frontier station on the road to Pekin, about 200 miles south of Kiakhta, has been fortified and garrisoned by Russian infantry and Cossacks. Surveying parties, escorted by troops, have penetrated as far as the edge of the great desert to determine the route of a direct railway to Pekin across the desert and the point where it will join the Mid-Siberian railway extension, now being constructed around the south end of Lake Baikal."

Russian Wheat Crop.

Washington, July 19.—The state department is in receipt of interesting reports concerning the wheat crops of Russia and India. According to a report from Consul-General Holloway, at St. Petersburg, there are good reasons to hope that the wheat harvest of 1901 will exceed that of 1900. The spring wheat is more promising than the winter crop, the latter having suffered heavily from various causes.

Brutal Assassination.

Valparaiso, July 19.—The Ecuadorean consul-general in Valparaiso, A. Arias Sanchez, was assassinated in the center of the city. He was shot and stabbed and his ears were cut off. The Swedish mile is the longest mile in the world. A traveler in Sweden when told that he is only about a mile from a desired point would better hire a horse, for the distance he will have to walk if he chose in his ignorance to adopt that mode of travel is exactly 11.700 yards.

TRIAL OF AN EARL

Lord Russell Put Through the Mill in the House of Lords

SENT UP FOR THREE MONTHS

His Cell a Commodious Apartment in Which His Lordship Can Be Supplied With His Own Food and Wines.

London, July 19.—Earl Russell, arraigned at the bar of the house of lords on a charge of bigamy, pleaded guilty after lengthy arguments against the jurisdiction of the court.

The trial was carried on with all the quaint middle age ceremonies. The arguments lasted one hour. Both the earl and Countess Russell (Mrs. Somerville), through their counsel, pleaded they did not know they were doing wrong, but had acted on the best legal advice obtainable in Nevada.

The peers reached their decision after consideration of the case lasting 20 minutes.

Earl Russell was sentenced to three months' imprisonment as a first-class misdemeanant.

In anticipation of the arrival of Lord Russell, the officials of Holloway prison have prepared for his reception one of the rooms formerly occupied by Wm. T. Stead and the Jameson raiders. It is a commodious apartment in which his lordship can be supplied with his own food and wines.

The benches reserved for peeresses were amply filled, while the space allotted to distinguished strangers was crowded with diplomatists and their families, including the United States ambassador, Joseph H. Choate, and the secretary of the United States embassy, Henry White.

Millie Cooke, otherwise Mrs. Somerville, Earl Russell's present wife, entered the hall by ticket and sat facing the benches occupied by members of the house of commons. She was accompanied by a young woman dressed in gray and wearing a hat trimmed with cream lace. Mollie Cooke appeared no more concerned than the other witnesses of the interesting scene.

AN OPEN ADMISSION.

English Papers Concede U. S. Right to Control the Canal.

London, July 19.—Lord Pauncefote's statement to the Associated Press as to his conference with the Marquis of Lansdowne, which was cabled back to London, was featured in all the morning papers today and made the subject of editorial comment by some. It is generally regarded as putting a new and hopeful complexion upon the Nicaragua canal dispute.

"A wise diplomacy, says the Daily News, "would make the Nicaragua question a golden opportunity for strengthening the ties between the British people and their kin folk in the United States. The special nature of America's own claim to predominance cannot be overlooked."

"Probably we shall find," says the Daily Mail, "that Lord Pauncefote has consented to the fortification of the canal by the United States, the point upon which the previous negotiations split and foundered. At first sight, it may seem that we are surrendering a good deal, and certainly there should be some solid equivalent in the direction of the Alaskan frontier; but, on consideration, it will be clear that it does not much matter to Great Britain whether the canal is protected by fortifications. By their geographical position, and still more in virtue of the great fleet they are so rapidly creating, the United States, in any case, are bound in time of war to dominate the canal."

ATTEMPTED MURDER.

Shot at a Concessionaire and Then Killed Himself.

Buffalo, July 19.—Ernesto Z. Zeozaya, 24 years old, and a Mexican of good social standing, entered the Streets of Mexico on the midway at the Pan-American exposition at 8 o'clock last night and after attempting to murder Concessionaire McGarvie he fired a bullet into his own heart.

Zeozaya is said to be connected with a rich banking family in the City of Mexico. It is thought he is a Cuban by birth and a grandson of the Cuban general, Gomez. He came here from the City of Mexico about three weeks ago and his mission was a romantic one. In Mexico he had known and loved Senorita Isabelle Gallardo, a singer and dancer who came to the exposition with the "Streets of Mexico" theatrical company. Zeozaya endeavored to accompany the Mexicans, but he was unable to secure a place.

Since his arrival here Zeozaya has made several attempts to secure employment from Mr. McGarvie, but the latter was unable to take care of him. Last night just as the bull fight began Zeozaya walked up to Mr. McGarvie and made a final appeal. When he was informed that there was nothing for him to do, Zeozaya drew a revolver and fired at Mr. McGarvie, the ball grazing his arm. He then turned the weapon on himself and fired. The bullet passed through his heart and he dropped dead.

Broke the Record.

San Francisco, July 19.—Adolph Strecker, a barber of this city, at yesterday's shooting of the third National Bundes festival, completed a score that has never been equalled in the United States on the ring target and which will doubtless give Strecker the "king" prize. Out of 200 shots he has made the record of 395 points, breaking the highest score, by 22 points, of King Hayes, made three years ago.

Confirmed the Statement.

Johannesburg, July 19.—In the course of an inquiry, conducted under oath here, various non-commissioned officers and men of the British army confirmed the statement that the Boers shot the British wounded at Vlakfontein.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Biddle Brothers, Who Killed a Grocer at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 19.—Jack and Ed Biddle were sentenced to death in criminal court for the murder of Grocer Thomas D. Kahney of Albert street, Mount Washington, April 12 last, and Walter Dorman was adjudged guilty of murder of the first degree for his part in the homicide.

Because he confessed and enabled the commonwealth to convict the Biddles, he will not be sentenced to death until after appeals to the supreme court, if any, are taken and disposed of. When that is done then the effort will be made to commute Dorman's sentence to life imprisonment.

Kahney was murdered while defending his home against robbers, and a few hours' later Detective Patrick Fitzgerald was killed in attempting to arrest the Biddles.

Barnet Werbe of Detroit was at one time accused of some connection with the Biddle gang, but the accusation was not substantiated.

HEAT IN ENGLAND.

Great Britain Is Now Suffering From Torrid Weather.

London, July 19.—Great Britain has had no such weather as this before in 11 years. The temperature was 98 in the shade at Southsea and Billinborough, Lincolnshire. Lower temperatures were recorded at other points. The torrid sun caused the asphalt to soften and the tar in wood paving to bubble. The number of deaths and sunstrokes has not been reckoned up, but these and the attempts at suicide in consequence of the heat are described as "numerous."

Soldiers on duty in ordinary clothing suffered dreadfully, two dropping dead in consequence. The war office is relaxing regulations in some factories, substituting night for day work.

The meteorological office announces that there are no signs of a change, and Londoners are dismayed at the prospect of another roasting day, with little ice and few alleviations of the sub-tropical heat.

The Epworth League.

San Francisco, July 19.—The first day of the fifth international Epworth League convention opened with perfect California weather. During the forenoon the streets leading to the Mechanics pavilion, the headquarters of the league, were thronged with thousands of delegates wearing badges, and long before the hour fixed for the preliminary proceedings the vast structure, which will accommodate 15,000 persons, was practically filled. Provision has been made for any possible overflow in churches of various denominations. Differences of creed have not been considered and the entire city is taking an active interest in securing the success of the gathering.

Fosburgh Trial Begun.

Pittsfield, Mass., July 19.—With the jury impaneled and having been taken to the scene of the tragedy, the testimony of one witness concluded and that of another well under way, the government case against Robert S. Fosburgh, the young man charged with shooting and killing his sister, May L. Fosburgh, on Aug. 20, 1900, was fairly started at the close of yesterday's session. The evidence was of a purely technical character and was confined exclusively to descriptions of the Fosburgh house and contents, and testimony by the medical examiner of this district.

Old Merchant Dead.

New York, July 19.—Horace Gray, merchant and banker, was found dead in bed in his home in this city. It is thought that death was the result of heart disease. He was born in Boston 80 years ago and when a young man came to this city, where he started in business with Goodhue & Co. They dealt in the China trade, and their sales of silks and teas from the orient netted the firm millions of dollars.

The Dragon Has Gone.

London, July 19.—"A high official in Pekin, who claims the power of divination," says a dispatch to the Standard from Tien Tsin, "has notified the Chinese court that the dragon has left the capital and that consequently it is impossible for the court to return there. Conservative officials in Sian-Fu are jubilant. It is by such trifles that the policy of China is governed."

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

George Herrick, formerly of New York, one of the oldest members of the American colony, was found dead in bed in London.

Emilio Aguinaldo refuses to discuss a Manila report that in 1898 rebel leaders intended to start a monarchy and make him king of the Philippine islands.

Housewives must be more careful of the broom. The broom corn trust has pushed prices for the material from $50 up to $100 a ton, and threaten to make it $200.

Major Alexander Henry Davis of Syracuse, N. Y., is famous at last. He has gotten his patronymic into the papers by renouncing his citizenship in America and swearing allegiance to King Edward in London. Incidentally he dodges a few taxes.

Theodore Perry, aged 5, is dead in Orthopedic hospital in Flatbush, L. I., after an operation on his crippled little leg, and it is alleged that the unsanitary condition of the hospital and the carelessness of attendants are responsible for the scarlet fever which put out his young life. There's a big commotion on over the event and investigation will be made.

Conservative officials in London admit that Orange demonstrations this year revealed little sympathy for the government in Liverpool. The names of Salisbury and Balfour were hooted, and on another occasion, in the same place, it was declared, amid loud cheers, that the conservative government had forfeited the confidence of Orangemen.

Vessel Burned.

New York, July 19.—The full-rigged ship Commodore T. H. Allen, outward bound with 80,000 cases of oil for Yokohama, was discovered to be aground and on fire just outside of Sandy Hook yesterday afternoon. Word was telegraphed to this city and a number of tugs and fireboats went to her assistance. She was later pulled off, towed inside the hook and anchired near the shore, where she is still burning.

Not Satisfactory.

"No," said the doctor, "I haven't voted yet, and I am not going to vote. I am not feeling well today. Isn't that a valid excuse?"

"Not at all," responded the professor severely; "that's an invalid excuse."

FELL WITH A CRASH

Big Building in Grand Rapids Tumbles to Earth

A FIREMAN BADLY INJURED

The Block Was the Oldest in the City, Being Built in 1856 and Contained the First Theater, Known as Luce's Hall.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 19.—The most serious, and most fortunate, calamity ever known in this city occurred yesterday morning, when the old Luce building, at the corner of Monroe and Ottawa streets, collapsed, demolishing half a dozen stores and doing other damage, which will reach nearly $200,000. The block was one of the oldest in the city, was built in 1856, and contained the first theater in the city, known as Luce's hall.

One portion was occupied by a large department store by Freidman Bros., with four floors filled with dry goods and other merchandise. C. Blickley's crockery and glassware store occupied the next door. Upstairs the building was filled with offices.

Had the calamity happened during the day it would have cost many lives, as the Friedman store was one of the biggest in town, and each floor would have been filled with clerks, as well as offices in the other part.

So far as known, the only accident was to Lieut. John Connor of the fire department. He fell off a ladder 40 feet, injuring his spine, breaking his leg and getting injuries which will probably prove fatal.

Base Ingratitude.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—Gabel Jones, who resides near the St. Joseph river, arrived in this city yesterday morning suffering from knife wounds about the back and head. It is feared the wounds will prove fatal. Jones quartered and nursed a sick man for months who regained his health and made a murderous attack on Jones when he refused to give him food any longer. The fellow escaped.

Confessed the Crime.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 19.—Sheriff Gillen went out yesterday morning and met Albert Leslie, formerly of Trenton, who was riding towards this city on a horse stolen from Bryant Barton, who lives three miles west of Wyandotte. Leslie was placed under arrest and immediately confessed to the crime.

Muchly Married.

Saginaw, Mich., July 19.—A letter received in this city says that John McCormick, formerly well known in this city, has a wife in California as well as one here. McCormick left here several years ago and has not been heard of since. His California wife wishes to prosecute him on a charge of bigamy.

Badly Used Up.

Otisville, Mich., July 19.—Gus Herrick, while driving a horse attached to a hay fork on a farm near this place, had his shoulder broken and was injured. The tug broke and he was struck by the whiffletree with terrific force.

Two Firemen Injured.

Alpena, Mich., July 19.—The Beck Brewing Co.'s plant was nearly destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at $25,000; insurance, $15,000. Two firemen were seriously injured by flying debris.

Badly Injured.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 19.—E. A. Crane, a leading member of the Kalamazoo bar, was the victim of a runaway accident early yesterday morning, which it was though would prove fatal. His sister, Mrs. Conger of Chicago, was also injured.

F. Cowen, the Grand Trunk switch gang man of Durand, who confessed to taking a valise at the depot belonging to Ben Fetters of Milford, Ind., settled the matter by paying the costs. He could not recollect what he did with the valise, so he paid for the contents.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

Personally, Captain E. D. Chilson, the senior member of the firm is an old and highly esteemed citizen of Tecumseh who has had a most remarkably successful career, never having been connected with a single venture that proved unprofitable, which clearly denotes that he is a man gifted with unusual faculties for foretelling the outcome of investment. He owns one of the most handsome residences in the city and has a very highly respected wife and family which consists of two sons, Frank and Harry, and a daughter, Mrs. Moore, whose husband is the junior member of the firm. Mr. Chilson is captain of the steamer Marquette while his son Harry is mate on the same boat. Frank, the other son, is captain of the steamer Colonial.

Mr. Moore, the junior member of the firm, is a native of Michigan, born in Dundee in 1875, is a hustling young business man, and since coming to Tecumseh has made many warm friends. He is the manager for the firm. The success of the business is mainly due to the hustling proclivities of Mr. Moore.

This yard is under the able management of a Mr. E. L. Packer, who like Mr. Kingsley, of Tecumseh, has had many years' experience in the lumber business, being a native of Burr Oak, but came to Clinton to take charge of the yards there and to relieve E. E. Hammond, a cousin of J. M. Hammond, who has been in charge of the Clinton yards, but was transferred by J. M. Hammond to another yard he is also interested in, in the city of Flint, Michigan.

The Clinton yards came into the possession of J. M. Hammond & Co. in August 1898. The company carry at all times in their yard in Clinton about a half million feet of rough and dressed lumber, besides lath, shingles, sash, doors, blinds, mouldings, interior finish, etc., also salt, lime, cement, plaster, hair, brick, drain tile, coal, wood, etc. In fact, every thing usually found in any first class lumber business of this kind.

His first experience in the lumber business was in Florida in the years '87-8. Afterwards for about eight years was employed by his uncle, S. G. M. Gates, of Bay City, at one time the most extensive lumber manufacturer and dealer in Michigan. J. M. Hammond is a self made man, and his success is entirely due to his own energies, and as a dealer in lumber, he is well known not only in Michigan but throughout the adjoining states. He is a man of unmistakable integrity and enterprise, who fully deserves the large measure of the public favor and patronage, which he enjoys.

In every community there are men whose enterprise, activity of mind and strong business talents bring them into prominence, men in whose hands a branch of business, ordinarily commonplace, is built up and managed with such skill that it assumes a prominent position in the mercantile history of the village. Such a man and such a business is the one above, managed by Mr. Tom Adamson. As said above the jewelry business was established about a quarter century ago by the Adamson Bros. and, since the death of George E. Adamson some five years ago, his brother Tom is the sole proprietor and by good management has been brought to its present large and growing proportions.

The premises near the corner of Chicago and Ottawa streets, which is of brick and occupied by Mr. Adamson, is 25x100 feet in dimensions and fitted up with all the latest and most approved fixtures and appliances, making it one of the largest and most handsome jewelry stores in Lenawee county, barring none. Here is carried a large and valuable stock of jewelry, diamonds, cut glass, books, stationery, periodicals, magazines, pictures, fine china art goods, toilet and fancy articles, silverware, watches, clocks, optical goods, umbrellas, etc., etc. Everything is conveniently arranged and two enterprising and obliging assistants are employed, one a Mr. Jos. V. Moross is an expert watchmaker and diamond setter who has been in Mr. Adamson's employ for some time.

The store is liberally patronized and patrons know that in buying goods at Adamson Bros.' store, everything is just as represented and strictly one price to all, thus the key-note to his great success. Mr. Tom Adamson is well known not only in Tecumseh but throughout Lenawee county, as an enterprising, energetic and reliable business man and is held in high esteem and popular favor by everybody.

E. D. BROWN, D. D. S.,

Dentist Office over John Orr's Drug Store on Chicago Street.

Dr. E. D. Brown has been a resident of Tecumseh for the past year and has most thoroughly established himself in the hearts of his numerous patrons, but there are reasons for this—good and sufficient—hence little cause for comment. In the first place, the doctor came among us well recommended from his former home in Dundee, where he had successfully practiced his profession for four years after his graduation from the dental department of the Michigan University at Ann Arbor in the class of 1896. This together with the fact that he is learned and experienced in latter-day dentistry and possessed of a most pleasing personality, soon ingratiated him into the well wishes of Tecumseh people who have bestowed upon him a most cordial welcome and consequent growing practice.

There is nothing new in dentistry worthy of adoption that the doctor is not quick to accept for the benefit of his patrons, and at his office over John Orr's drug store is most conveniently located and is prepared to do all the latest work known to modern dentistry and he is fully equipped with all the latest and most approved dental appliances and fixtures necessary for the conduct of the business and for the most thorough work in his profession and he has won an enviable and a large patronage. By many strong characteristics Dr. Brown has gained the esteem of his fellow men and is regarded as one of the foremost men in his profession. He is most happily prepared to cater to the wants of his numerous patrons. In short Dr. E. D. Brown is a pleasant and affable gentleman, modest and unassuming, pleasant to everybody and just such a man as will gain and retain friendship—in fact, one with whom it is a pleasure to meet, and since coming to Tecumseh, yet but a little over one year ago, Dr. Brown has made hosts of friends.

Dr. Brown married Miss Mary Haight, one of Tecumseh's prominent young ladies, who was born and raised in this village and received her education here, and is therefore well acquainted with all our people.

WM. C. WITHERELL & SON,

Dealers in Agricultural Implements, Carriages, Harness, etc.—Store and warerooms Cor. Chicago and Pearl Streets.

For the past five years Mr. Wm. C. Witherell has been engaged in the above line of business in this village. It is needless to say he has made it a success. The premises occupied at the above location is in a large three story brick factory building which is about 40x80 feet in dimensions, suitably arranged and well adapted for the business. In the year 1898, when his son, C. W. Witherell, became of age, he was admitted into partnership, the name then being changed to Wm. C. Witherell & Son, the latter having been practically raised to the business after leaving school.

The firm handle the Walter A. Wood and the Osborne & Co's full line of agricultural implements and tools, reapers, binders, plows, harrows, horse rakes—in fact everything required in the farm implement line such as are used by the farmers throughout this section of the state. The goods sold by this firm have given universal satisfaction and when either Mr. Witherell or his son sell an article to a farmer and recommend the same, it is always sure to be just as is represented. The firm however are about ready to go out of the agricultural business and are selling the balance of their goods at very low prices.

They intend hereafter to turn their attention more exclusively to the sale of carriages, wagons, sleighs, and also that of harness of all kinds and goods of this description and buy in larger quantities their vehicles and harness direct from the different manufacturers. By so doing they will be enabled to do away with the middlemen's profits and be better able to sell goods cheaper, by giving the purchaser the benefit of their close buying. Another thing, by buying their rigs in carload lots, they will be better able to give a person a much larger selection to choose from and his choice of the different manufacturers goods. They will buy not alone in Michigan but from other states.

Their stock of rigs, harnesses, robes, blankets, fly-nets and dusters, now on hand, is of a large and of a superior quality. Wm. C. Witherell & Son are ready to deal with a farmer and take anything he may have to trade or sell, allowing him the highest current market price for his goods.

Personally Mr. Wm. C. Witherell, the senior member of the firm, was born on a farm in the township of Manchester, Washtenaw county, in the year 1851 and moved with his parents to a farm in Franklin township, Lenawee county, when a lad of about 15 years. A few years later he bought a farm of 100 acres which he still owns and it is one of the finest in this county.

Mr. Witherell's father is still alive and hearty. He is now upwards of 83 years of age and lives in this village. He served during the years 1841 and '45 in the Seminole Indian war in Florida under the late General Armstead and the old gentleman can relate many hair-breadth escapes and incidents of the exciting times they had with the Indians in those early days, and never grows tired in telling his grand children and others the hardships and trials in those stormy days in America's history.

W. C. Witherell, the senior member of the firm, owns a fine residence on Pottawatamie street and has an estimable wife and three children, all of whom are splendid musicians. C. W. Witherell, the junior member of the firm, is an excellent violin player and is leader of the orchestra here, having played at different times in the churches and opera house. Mrs. Witherell, his mother is a noted piano player, so is also the daughter, a young lady of about 17 years of age, making in all a pleasant and musical home.

J. J. BELCHER,

The Only Exclusive Boot and Shoe Dealer in Tecumseh.

Among the most enterprising and progressive merchants in this village, Mr. J. J. Belcher, the reliable and exclusive shoe man, may be mentioned. He came to Tecumseh a little over two years ago and opened up a neat store on Chicago street East, a few doors below the postoffice, for the exclusive sale of boots, shoes and rubbers. Since coming to Tecumseh Mr. Belcher has gained a most enviable reputation as an upright and progressive merchant and honorable citizen.

He deals in all kinds of footwear, making a specialty of reliable stock and always pleasing his customers. The salesroom at the above location is handsomely fitted up and well filled with a nice new line of all kinds of boots, shoes and rubbers, while the basement is used for storage and duplicate stock. His fine assortment of men's, women's, misses', boys', girls' and children's ready-to-wear footwear is complete. He has a fine line of boys' Oxfords and canvas shoes which is just the thing for this weather, also a nice assortment of babies' shoes in all styles, sizes and grades, are here obtained at lowest prices and an enormous business is done.

Some of the goods handled are the most famous and reliable brands on the market. For instance, Mr. Belcher has the famous Walkover line of men's shoes and Strootman's ladies shoes and many other leading makes as well as the best heavy goods and rubbers for farmers.

Mr. Belcher is ably assisted by his estimable wife and nephew in the management of the business. They are both highly esteemed in all circles. Their store is one of the leading trade centers of Tecumseh and is of great value to the village.

JOHN J. ORR.

Retail Druggist.

The well known and popular drug establishment of John J. Orr, who is successor to Orr & Temple, is a house of established reputation. It was established in the year 1888 and has continued to grow in public favor ever since, and is today one of the most popular drug stores in Tecumseh and his patrons are among all classes of people. The store is most handsomely furnished and nicely appointed, while the stock is replete in drugs, chemicals, medicines, toilet articles, perfumes and other choice articles.

Mr. Orr has several of his own preparations, which are well and favorably known to his many friends and patrons in this vicinity and in fact, the state, such as his famous "White Liniment," which is sold for 50c a bottle, also Orr's Corn Salve, which is sold for 10c a box, also Orr's 25c bottle Croup Remedy for children, all of which remedies have an extensive local demand, besides a large mail order trade throughout this and adjoining states is maintained.

Among his mail order customers may be mentioned here is Judge Whelan, the noted police judge, of Detroit, and many others equally as well known throughtout Michigan. Mr. Orr has a standing offer that all money will be cheerfuly refunded, if any of his remedies are not as recommended and all of which are sold at popular prices.

The prescription department is well equipped and here the utmost care is exercised and only fresh and pure drugs are used. In fact the house is up to date and a leader. Mr Orr will ever maintain his reputation for reliability and general excellence of goods handled. Mr. Orr is an affable gentleman and an esteemed citizen and the people of this vicinity patronize him most liberally.

DR. SAMUEL CATLIN,

One of the Best Known, Most Highly Educated and Oldest Medical Practitioners in the County.

Dr. Samuel Catlin, who is of old Puritan stock, was born in the state of Connecticut in 1827 and has been in actual medical practice for over a half century, having passed the fifty year mark about one year ago. Dr. Catlin is a graduate of Yale college away back in the class of 1850 and came to Tecumseh in the year 1856. He is still now in actual practice with the reputation of being one of the best educated and most successful doctors who ever located in this section of Michigan.

In his earlier medical days the doctor made more of a specialty of surgery and enjoyed special distinction in that branch of his profession. Dr. Catlin has the distinction of being the only physician in the county who writes his prescriptions in decimal characters and but one druggist in Tecumseh has he found capable of compounding for him. The doctor has in his long service became thoroughly familiar with every requirement and gained many years ago the confidence of the community as a most capable medical expert.

During Dr. Catlin's earlier years in Tecumseh, although he was then practically a young man, he made a splendid record as a member of the medical profession which even then was the envy of many an older man in the same business. He had surrounded himself with an unusually large practice considering the time he had been here and still his patients, now many of them, don't want any other than "old Dr. Catlin," as he is more familiarly known, to administer to them when sick.

The doctor has a son who is also a physician and is now engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dr. Samuel Catlin has his office at his handsome residence, corner of Pearl and Pottawatamie streets, where he is ready to serve any of his old customers and all new ones who may be disposed to give him a call. The doctor is possessed of a charming personality, being well versed on nearly every subject and being a man of keen intellect and as clear in memory and mind as many a man of half his years and since coming to Tecumseh 46 years ago, he has made many steadfast admirers and friends. He is specially respected by the medical profession throughout the state, all of whom speak of him in highest terms both as a council in serious cases and as a successful practitioner.

Personally, Dr. Catlin has been active in everything pertaining to the welfare of Tecumseh. He served for many years on the school board and it was with great reluctance that he was allowed to withdraw from that body. He is an honorable and very highly respected citizen.

W. F. SISSON

Retail Dealer in Furniture of all Kinds.

The attention that has been devoted to the production of fine furniture in this country reveals the fact that American inventive genius and mechanical skill are quite as successful in this line as they have been in any other. As proof of this we refer to the above leading house, whose stock gives the most convincing argument. Four large floors are occupied and the stock is replete with everything that can be desired in the fine and modern designs, including parlor suites, chamber sets, library, dining room and kitchen furniture, from the cheaper to the better grades. Everything is up to the hour in style and design and offers unparalleled opportunities for choice everyday selections.

W. F. Sisson having had many years experience in the furniture business is therefore much versed in the needs and requirements of the furniture buying public and people of Tecumseh and also in the surrounding country when in need of furniture will find it to their advantage to call on W. F. Sisson before buying their goods elsewhere. He also does repairing and upholstering and his charges are always very reasonable, considering the quality of work done.

Mr. Sisson is successor to Wheeler & Sisson, Mr. Wheeler having retired some two years ago and Mr. Sisson has conducted the business on his own account very successfully ever since. Everything in the furniture line may be had here at prices equal to the very lowest in either Detroit or Toledo and goods equally as good both in workmanship and style. Mr. Sisson is an honorable and square dealing business man and what he says about his goods may be relied upon. He is building a fine house on Shawnee street and intends making Tecumseh his permanent home.

New Wabash Equipment.

The Wabash Railroad has just received and placed in service on its lines running out of Chicago the following new equipment: Eight combination baggage and passenger coaches, thirty palace day coaches, ten reclining chair cars, three cafe cars and two dining cars. The majority of these new cars are seventy feet in length and fitted with the latest style wide vestibules. They have six wheel trucks with steel wheels. The cars are finished in the finest selected St. Jago mahogony. The lighting is by Pintsch gas with the exception of the cafe, dining and some of the chair cars, which are unusually well lighted by electricity, the fixtures being especially designed for these cars. The dining cars will seat 29 persons and have ample kitchen space. The cafe cars will seat 18 persons in the cafe and have a library and smoking room in the observation end of the car which will seat 14 persons. These cars also contain a private case with seating capacity for eight persons. These new cars represent the highest stage of development of modern car building. Nothing has been omitted and no expense spared that would add to their luxurious elegance or to the comfort and convenience of the patrons of the Wabash road.

No line is now better equipped than the Wabash for handling business to the Pan-American Exposition. Write for a copy of Pan-American folder containing a large colored map of the Exposition grounds and zinc etchings of the principal buildings.

"I suffered for months from sore throat. Eclectric Oil cured me in twenty-four hours." M. S. Gist. Hawesville, Ky.

Ten Years Trial.

"What is it, Eric? Lie still, man," spoke Nelson soothingly, yet commandingly, as he hastened to the bedside.

"Doctor who?" demanded Langdon, with menace in his tone.

"Dr. Olmstead, man," answered Nelson, with prompt mendacity. "O-l-m-s-t-e-a-d—Olmstead. What's got into you besides broth and one hot Scotch? I'll give you another presently if you'll settle down and behave yourself."

"Olmstead was not the name," was the stern answer. "Don't trifle with me, Nelson. You said Armistead, did you not?" he continued, whirling sharp on the steward, and that amazed and confounded compounder of drugs could only gulp and turn redder in the face.

"It is Armistead, then," said Langdon, with full conviction. "Send that man out, and his bottles with him," he continued, turning full on Nelson again. "I've got to talk to you." And, obedient to a signal, the steward withdrew.

For a moment there was dead silence. Throwing himself back on his pillow, his lean, long hands outspread on each cheek and temple, Langdon lay staring at the ceiling. Then in a sharp, almost savage, tone he demanded, "How long has that man been at this post?"

"About a month or less. Why?"

"Because he or I must quit it inside of 24 hours."

Nelson stood a few seconds gazing full into the set face and gleaming eyes of his friend. Little by little he was recalling and piecing together the stories that had been whispered about Eric Langdon's pretty, volatile, reckless wife—about her daring life in Washington while her husband was on distant duty with his battery, about the attentions and devotions of elderly reprobates in and about the capitol, men whose pockets seemed lined with gold and whose records were seamed and lined with scandal. But there were tales of still another, a younger man, a distant kinsman, a Virginian of grand old family, a boy lover in her early girlhood, a man who became her shadow and sought to be her knight, for there was a tale of a scene at the Shoreham cafe—a senator in his cups and a stripling doctor in all his youthful strength and chivalry, a sneering jest between one half drunken nabob and a kindred spirit and reputed rival at an adjoining table, an instant spring from a third table on the part of a tall, athletic young gallant in evening dress, a stern, furious demand for immediate apology, followed by a knockdown blow that sent $5,000,000 sprawling in bedraggled human shape, bottles, dishes and glasses raining and crashing upon him. They dragged him out covered with rage and lobster salad and bore him off to bed. Even in executive session the story was suppressed, for there was no bar to the confirmation of a certain appointment to the medical corps of the army. Indeed was it not whispered that the appointment was made at the instigation of certain senators "to get the young man into the army and out of Washington?" Nelson was not much of a repository for gossip. He listened only impatiently at best and remembered but vaguely. Yet now it was all coming over him again, bit by bit, that Armistead was the hero of that exploit, that in the winter of 1884 and 1885 there was lively discussion in Washington society as to whether Armistead was there to get Mrs. Langdon into mischief or out of it. Those who knew him well and of his infatuation for her in her girl days swore stoutly that he was ever standing between her and scandal. Those who hardly knew him at all, and they were 20 to 1, took the opposite view, and those who in the least knew her had no charity for either. Until commissioned and ordered out of Washington, however, he was her shadow, as has been said, and yet it was his tribe, his own brothers, who instigated the proceedings that diverted Cousin Spotts' little fortune from the maw of Mrs. Langdon to their own itching palms. And now of all places on earth here was Eric Langdon under Armistead's care and his—Nelson's—roof; this, too, at a time when Langdon sorely needed rest, peace and friendly aid. "By George," said Nelson to himself, "it is fateful!"

But Langdon was the first to break the silence.

"What is the first train back to Chicago?"

"Seven twelve tomorrow morning, Eric. But not a peg do you stir till we straighten you up. Dr. Bloodgood shall attend you, though. The other is a 'liver' man. There's no reason you shouldn't take his medicine, dear boy. Come, now, be reasonable. You need this bromide or whatever it is."

"Not a drop!" was the fierce reply. "Get me out of this, Nels, for God's sake, even if I have to walk!" he cried, feebly struggling to rise, but Nelson, with his powerful frame, was on him in a minute. Hoyt came sprinting up the stairs and thrust the bewildered steward aside.

"Just send my man for Bloodgood, will you?" panted Nelson to the newcomer. "Then help me strap this lunatic. Do quit your struggling, Eric. You'll only make yourself a thousand times worse."

The sweat was starting from Langdon's brow and the muscles in his neck stood out swollen and distorted. He was fighting fiercely for liberty, he who so short a time before with long sigh had thanked God humbly for warmth and refuge. All the misery of his married life seemed to have hurled itself in concentrated force upon him again and robbed him of his reason. Nelson had to summon the steward to his aid, and Hoyt, too, when he returned, and at last between them they wore their frantic patient out, and the poor fellow sank exhausted upon his pillow, buried his streaming face in his arms and sobbed—sobbed like a little child. It was thus the senior surgeon found him when in surprise and manifest annoyance he appeared, but the instant he was made to realize that the stricken man before him was Eric Langdon Bloodgood's injured air gave place to quick sympathy and interest. Long and carefully he studied his shivering patient. Little convulsive shudderings seemed to traverse Langdon's frame, and his sobs grew feebler. He moaned wearily at intervals, and the steward was sent on the run with a note to Dr. Armistead and an order for certain restoratives from the hospital. It seemed an age before he returned. Langdon lay in semicollapse when at last his step was heard, and the doctor had felt compelled to administer tablespoonfuls of brandy.

"What on earth kept you?" demanded he angrily. "I could have gone there and back a dozen times."

"So could I, sir, but I couldn't find Dr. Armistead anywhere. The patrol coming in from the station said they saw him in civilian dress going out at the gate."

"Impossible," sharply retorted Bloodgood. "He couldn't leave the post without my consent. Drop the medicine and go to the colonel's and see if he's there. I cannot leave this case for two hours. He'll have to look out for the others, and I've got some instructions to give him."

They wore their frantic patient out.

But when the steward returned from the commanding officer's it was with a message that startled both the post surgeon and the two officers present.

"The colonel's compliments, sir, and he says that a sudden emergency called Dr. Armistead to town. The colonel had a note from him and sent back his permission, but he supposed of course that the post surgeon had also been consulted."

There was silence for a moment. Bloodgood looked wonderingly at the steward, finally nodded toward the door, and the man understood and left the room. Bloodgood closed the door behind him, and then Nelson spoke impetuously as ever:

"By heaven, I never supposed Armistead could be a coward!"

And then Langdon began to murmur. They listened, but could only distinguish his dead wife's name.

Solomon's Stone Aqueduct.

London, July 19.—"Dearth and famine threaten the holy city," says the Jerusalem correspondent of the Standard in a communication dated July 6, "on account of the scanty water supply, due to the insufficient rains of last winter. The sultan has granted permission to the municipality to bring water from the Pools of Solomon through iron pipes into the city along the line of Solomon's stone aqueduct. The new works were begun today on telegraphic orders from the sultan, who contributes 6,000 liras. They will be finished in two months."

Unappreciated Efforts.

Unselfish goodness is seldom appreciated in this world of ours. There was that man in the electric car, for instance. Having rung up three fares in his efforts to stop the car for the lady that sat on the opposite side, he tossed after her the umbrella that belonged to the little gray whiskered man on his right. Neither the gray whiskered man nor the conductor liked the thoughtful Samaritan for his altruistic efforts.—Boston Transcript.

Ladies should take off their hats in church. No sermon can inspire a man who is looking into a lopsided aggregation of dead birds, stuffed weasles, chameleon skins, ribbons, beads, jets, sticks, paper, flowers, corn tassels, straw and thistle down. It makes a sinner feel lost in the wilderness.

Had it not been for the report in the HERALD immediately after the election, Hawkins would, no doubt, not have heard of it yet and Tansley would have been saved this "roasting."

A sudden death occurred in Madison township last Monday afternoon when a bolt of lightning struck Jesse Woodbury on the side of the head while he was in the field, passing through his body and into the ground killing him instantly. Woodbury was 27 years of age, and had been working for Losey for about a week. He has been an inmate of the county house, but every summer he ran away, thinking he could take care of himself. He was buried at the county farm Tuesday afternoon.

A GREAT CAMP.

About Twenty-five Chaps Congregated at Devil's Lake.

ALL HAVING A GOOD TIME.

Good Order and Lots of Fun.

Up at Devil's Lake is a novel "outing" camp. The members are about 25 glass-workers from Muncie, Indiana, all employees of the glass works at that place. It seems that each summer the employees of this factory are forced to take a "lay-off" of about two months and consequently have formed themselves into an "outing" club and each summer spend the time at some fishing resort and have a good time for the two months.

The club is governed by a "captain" and policeman. The powers of the captain are absolute and his decisions final. The powers of the policeman are the same except he is at all times amendable to the wishes of the captain. The members of the club pay a certain sum each month into the treasury and each year this money is used in having a good time at some resort. The present camp consists of a living tent, sutler's tent, sleeping tent and cooking tent, and everything is going on in fine style.

The plans for amusement of these chaps are something extraordinary. One of their "skemes" is starting a turtle pen in which may be found hundreds of turtles. The boys are all tired of turtle soup so the over stock are being fatted and are for sale.

The most important part of this camp is nearly forgotten, viz., the refrigerator. This is large and commodious and well filled and at all times under the strict observation of the policeman.

These men think much of each other and, in fact, live lives not only for themselves but for one another. The other night a number of them got lost in some way in the woods and could not find their way home. So next day the captain ordered a lot of trees white-washed to make the path so light and plain that no one could miss his way. The boys are having a good time, everything pleasant and good natured and it is hoped that the Club may again find themselves stationed for the summer at Devil's Lake.

Horse Thief Found.

It will be remembered that some time last fall some one took a horse, buggy and harness from the stables at Mrs. Salkeld's farm residence, south of town. Fred Shoemaker, who, it is believed, has been stealing horses for some time, has been arrested and the trial was set for Tuesday at Ann Arbor, before Justice Gibson, but the prisoner's attorneys were not ready and asked for further time, so the trial has been postponed until Monday of next week. Sheriff Shepherd, of Adrian, accompanied by Hart Stretch, of Raisin, went to Ann Arbor Wednesday to look at a horse brought from the prisoner's stables at Cleveland a week ago. Mr. Stretch identified the horse as the property of Mrs. Salkeld and it was given up to him. Mr. Stretch will bring the horse home at once.

Sheriff Shepherd has found in Shoemaker's apartments at Cleveland among numerous other things a halter strap identified as belonging to Fred Stitt, who lost two black horses and canopy top carriage about the same time of the stealing of Mrs. Salkeld's horse. It is known postively that Shoemaker was in Tecumseh the day Mr. Stitt's horses were stolen and was traced to Toledo two days later.

Shoemaker, it would appear, had been doing a land office business for the last two years, stealing horses by the wholesale. He ran a broom factory in Cleveland and would start out with a load of brooms, telling folks there he was going to take a trip through Michigan. After securing a bunch of horses he would take them to Toledo and send them by boat to Cleveland, where they were disposed of.

Sheriff Gillen found Shoemaker's apartments at Cleveland to contain a large assortment of wheels with name plates removed as well as various other articles supposed to have been stolen.

BASE BALL.

Game Played here Tuesday with Ypsilanti was Hotly Contested.

ELEVEN INNINGS

Were Played on Account of a Tie in the 9th—Score Book Shows a Mistake.

The game Tuesday afternoon was well contested from start to finish. Tecumseh played good ball as well as the visitors. The Ypsilanti team was quite a surprise to Tecumseh as it was the first good ball team ever sent here from that city. The players were all nice men and, better yet, played good ball.

At the end of the game Scorer Keyes had the score marked 8 to 7 in favor of Tecumseh, when, as a matter of fact, the visiting team had scored one more and the number of runs was really a tie. Keyes "backed water" and owned up that he made his only mistake this time. Both sides felt bad but decided on playing the other innings. Johnson claimed that he could have made another run had he known how the score stood, but Johnson should have played ball no matter how the score stood.

After playing another inning and a half, the tally sheet showed 9 to 8 in favor of Tecumseh. Harris pitched the last inning and a half and the visitors never got even a smell of the ball.

The attendance at Tuesday's game between Ypsilanti and the home team was not as large as it should have been. Such ball as was played that day deserves liberal patronage, but those who attended witnessed one of the best games played on the grounds.

Tomorrow Clinton plays a return game here. It is reported that the Clintonites are loading up their team with league players and intend to come here and scoop the town. Tecumseh expects to put up a good game for amateur players and a hot time is expected. No doubt but a large crowd will be in attendance.

Mrs. Adelia Harland

Was born in Tecumseh Nov. 17th, 1840, and died in this village July 10th, 1901. She was the daughter of James and Catherine Jackson. On March 8th, 1865, she was married to Francis M. Fuller of whom she was bereft April 10, 1867, after only three years of wedded life. During these three years their home was gladdened by the advent of a daughter and son. The daughter, Frances M. Fuller, died Feb. 17, 1893. The son, Elmer L., still survives to mourn. Mrs. Fuller was married the second time in 1876 to James M. Harland.

At Tecumseh, in 1882, Mrs. Harland united with the M. E. church of which she was a consistent and faithful member until her death. From 1883 to 1898 she lived at Clinton, Mich., where she was laid to rest by her relatives and friends July 13th, 1901. For the two years just past Mrs. Harland has suffered among us the grievous pains of a lingering disease, yet she has suffered patiently, and, by her gentleness, won the hearts of all. She had an abiding faith in her Lord and often longed to be at rest with him. Her death was a very peaceful one and, though we are glad her suffering is past, we deeply regret her loss and sincerely sympathise with her family.

Did You Ever Drown a Fly?

Whatever other fate might befall it, naturalists agree that the common house fly cannot be drowned and many experiments have been made in relation thereto.

Included in such tests was the immersion of a fly in a tumbler of clear cold water, with a piece of cardboard to fit the glass and floated so as to keep the insect beneath the surface.

So little did the fly trouble about such an obstacle that it kept near the bottom of the glass, and there for a quarter of an hour ran about as freely as in the fresh air, while it at times crawled across the underside of the pasteboard as on the ceiling of a room.

After being immersed for 20 minutes the fly's movements were less active, and at 25 minutes it turned over on its side, apparently dead. It hung suspended in the water just under the pasteboard, which kept it from rising to the surface, and there it remained for another 25 minutes.

It was then taken out and placed on a sheet of paper, looking to all appearance dead. Its next fate was to be buried by being covered with about half a teaspoonful of fine salt.

At the end of 15 minutes the saline was shaken off, the fly having thus been completely covered either by water or by salt for 65 minutes.

Immediately upon its release the insect trimmed its wings and legs actively for awhile and then flew away.—Pearson's Weekly.

LITERARY NOTES.

Prof. C. A. Young, of Princeton, wil contribute to The Youth's Companion of June 27th. an article under the title, "What Astronomers are Hoping For," having reference to the possibilities in the line of achievement and discovery which the new century may realize.

"The End of the Deal" is the title of an unusually good business serial story which is to begin in an early number of The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. A famous transaction on the Chicago Board of Trade is the basis upon which the author, Mr. Will Payne, has founded this striking romance of the wheat pit. A charming love story runs through the stern and stirring plot.

* * *

"The Insolation of Canada" is the title of a pertinent paper by J. D. Whelpley, in the August Atlantic, explaining the awkward position Canada finds herself in towards the United States, and the natural irritation that results from the indifference of this country towards Canada's desire for closer commercial relations.

* * *

The third in The Youth's Companion series of stories of American politics will appear in the issue of June 20th. Its title "A Costly Christmas Dinner", turns out to be more appropriate than one would at first infer. The story is by John C. Sherman. In the same issue the Hon. Lyman Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, gives a clear and comprehensible answer to the question, "What is Money?" Another of the group of "Strange Tales from the Zoos" is announced for this issue, as well as two or three good stories.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of the War And a Legacy It Left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence No. 237 Second-street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little congueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

A Mule as a Life Saver.

The mine mule knows a thing or two quite as well as does the army mule. In one of the mines in the Pittsburg district the ever patient mule proved himself possessed of an almost human sense of coming danger. One morning when the full shift was at work there occurred an unusual thing. The air currents had seemed defective, and there was a restless feeling among the miners, something like the uneasiness of live stock before a storm. A few days previous a chamber had been closed on account of gas, and the men were instinctively thinking of what that might mean. Suddenly there was a clatter of hoofs, and a mule appeared. Its long ears were quivering, and its intelligent eyes were full of terror.

It gave a shrill bray and then was gone down the entry, broken traces flying after it. The men looked at one another, and then the feverishness of the air moved them with one impulse. Dropping picks, they fled precipitately, making a headlong dash through the labyrinth for the open air. With scared faces other miners joined them, and while they were wondering what it all meant a dull, deep explosion went fumbling through the hollow back of them, followed by wave upon wave of noxious vapors. Then they understood. When the bodies of the few poor men who had been hopelessly entrapped were recovered, another was tenderly carried out with theirs—that of the little gray mule that sounded the warning.—Leslie's Weekly.

Laughter.

Laughter is a positive sweetness of life; but, like good coffee, it should be well cleared of deleterious substance before use. Ill will and malice and the desire to wound are worse than chicory. Between a laugh and a giggle there is the width of the horizons. I could sit all day and listen to the hearty and heartsome ha, ha, of a lot of bright and jolly people, but would rather be shot than be forced to stay within earshot of a couple of silly gossips. Cultivate that part of your nature that is quick to see the mirthful side of things, so you shall be enabled to shed many of life's troubles, as the plumage of the bird sheds the rain. But discourage all tendencies to seek your amusement at the expense of another's feelings or in aught that is impure. It was Goethe who said, "Tell me what a man laughs at and I will read you his character."

Welcomed the Circus.

Howard Paul told an amusing story of his first Italian tour, when a party of 80 were piloted about by Thomas Cook, the founder of the famous firm:

"We ascertained that he had arranged at Pisa for a number of open carriages to take us from the railway station to the leaning tower—about the only object of interest there was to see in that archaic place. I telegraphed to the mayor of Pisa that Cook's circus from England would pass through the town and that I desired him to announce it by bulletin on the Mairie and any points where the public would see the notice, that they might extend to the troupe a hearty welcome.

"Not suspecting a joke, the mayor did as I suggested, and when we arrived, entered the coaches and drove in procession through the town the streets were thronged with spectators, who now and then sent up delirious cheers and shouted 'vivas' in demonstrative fashion. Mr. Cook (I rode in his carriage) was astounded at the enthusiasm of the inhabitants and was puzzled to know how they knew the English tourists were coming, as he had only communicated with the station master regarding the vehicles.

"Of course, as the author of the little comedy, I could not enlighten him, and when my American friend and I called on the mayor to thank him for his courteous attention to my requests he gently inquired where the horses were, as the inhabitants would prefer to have seen us mounted. My Yankee partner in the 'sell' was equal to the occasion, and, as he spoke a little Italian, he informed the official that the horses were so numerous they would come on by a later train.

"The secret was well kept, and, as Mr. Cook and none of the tourists were [illegible] and as we only remained in Pisa three hours, they all departed in wonderment as to why their advent had earned such extraordinary excitement."—Argonaut.

The Postmaster at the Zoo.

The lawyer who evidently considers life one huge, continuous joke entered the clerk's office at the city hall with an expression of extreme radiance overspreading his countenance. The clerks and others having business in the office at the time ceased their several pursuits. Experience had taught them that the aforesaid lawyer would say something of an entertaining character.

"Gather round, boys," he said. "I have a dandy for you this morning."

The speaker paused. The others silently waited for what was coming.

"Now listen carefully," resumed the lawyer, "and note the beauty of the connection between the three sections of this little conundrum. Here it is: 'If the postmaster should visit the zoo and while there be eaten by the wild animals, what o'clock would it be?'"

There was another pause. Finally the clerk in charge of the dockets ventured the answer, "It would be all day with the postmaster."

"Wrong, entirely wrong," commented the lawyer. "I didn't ask what time. I asked what o'clock would it be."

A third pause. Then by general consent the answer was requested. The lawyer gayly announced, "Ate p m."

Before the gathering had recovered the lawyer had flitted from the room and was headed for the court of appeals to try the postmaster zoo wild animals conundrum on the higher tribunal.—Washington Star.

A PAIR OF LYNXES.

A great friend of mine, a Russian keeper, known as Stepan, or Stephen, is no less remarkable as a teller of capital hunting yarns than he is in his own legitimate avocation as woodcraftsman.

"I was once," said friend Stepan, "spending the night in midforest, waiting for the capercailzies to begin their morning tournaments, which would not be until 3 o'clock at the earliest.

"As you are aware, the hours of the night spent thus are apt to hang somewhat heavily upon one's hands unless one passes them sleeping comfortably with one's feet close to the fire, but then if you are alone there is the danger of not waking in time for the capercailzie jaunt. Therefore I preferred to remain awake and listen to the voices of the night—the sighing and rustling of the pines over my head, or the occasional distant howling of a wolf, that most melancholy of all the voices of nature.

"Then it struck me that this would be an excellent opportunity for me to practice some of my animal calls, an accomplishment in which, as you know, I have attained some little proficiency.

"I howled first in the character of a wolf, thinking it just possible that I might attract some of these gentlemen within range of my smoothbore, which I had taken the precaution to load with slugs. But though I howled my best for half an hour I found that my friends were too far away. I could hear them, but they could not hear me, for their natural howlings traveled farther than my artificial tones. Then I bethought me that my lynx call might be growing rusty from disuse, and I started caterwauling like the veriest starving or lovesick lynx that ever roamed the woods after prey or partner.

"There is not much chance of calling up a lynx in our part of the country, for these animals are very rare and scarcely ever honor our particular portion of the forest with a visit; therefore my caterwaulings were designed more for practice than anything else, though, of course, one always faintly hopes. What was my surprise, then, when, after I had called for no longer than five minutes or so, I distinctly heard my cries answered from apparently a distance of a mile or a mile and a half.

"I was tremendously excited, for I had never killed a lynx, and, this being the only Russian animal which had up to now successfully defied all my arts of woodcraft, I felt that, could I only succeed tonight in calling up this gentleman or lady and adding him or her to my list of victims, I should die happy when called upon to bid farewell to these hunting grounds in favor of yet happier ones. I decided to put out my fire before I took any further steps toward securing an interview with my friend, for if one thing is more certain than another it is that anything worthy of the name of a lynx would never approach within a quarter of a mile of a bonfire. So I stamped out every bit of blazing wood and scattered the embers, and I did so not without some sinking of heart, for if the lynx should take his time about approaching my place of ambush it would be mighty cold waiting for him this bitter, frosty March night. Then, having by this time subdued the excited beatings of my heart sufficiently to warrant a careful return to caterwauling, I took up a strategic position behind a thick clump of bushes surrounded by a few yards of open ground convenient for shooting, should I be so unfortunate as to get a shot, and, thus prepared, I carefully and cautiously recommenced the calls which had so excited my caterwauling friend in the distance. The creature had never ceased his most eloquent appeals to me to renew my tale and inform him of my exact whereabouts. Now, though I speak lynx language like a native, I cannot claim to understand much of what is said to me in that tongue, but I felt as certain as cocksureness can go that the lynx was addressing to me every fond and endearing expression to be found in the feline vocabulary.

"It must have been something of this sort, for the poor fellow responded with touching warmth the instant that he heard my voice upraised anew. Indeed he redoubled his exertions to convince me that he only needed to be heard in order to be forgiven and taken back forthwith to my heart. I am sure I gave him every encouragement to come and make it up. I yelled quite as lustily as he did, and the noise we two lynxes made for awhile must have caused the rest of the inmates of this part of the forest considerable surprise and much disgust.

"For a quarter of an hour our duet continued thus, each lynx calling from behind his own ambush. I began to think, somewhat anxiously, that after all I should be obliged to make a compromise by going half way to meet my adorer, when, to my great relief, I realized that he was once more on the move. He came along very slowly and cautiously now. Was he suspicious? I trusted not. However, I determined to sit silent for a minute or two in the belief that my apparent coolness might rouse him to increased ardor. Nor was I mistaken. No sooner did I recommence my caterwauling than his own redoubled in warmth and volume. I could almost distinguish the meaning of his impassioned pleadings. He seemed to entreat me not to deprive him of the rapture of listening to my voice, which, he appeared to say, was music to his ears. I could not therefore, under these romantic circumstances, remain long obdurate to his pleading or turn a deaf ear to his ardor and affection. I caterwauled again more lustily than ever.

"Within a very few moments I became aware that my friend or relative or lover—not understanding the drift of his remarks, I could not be sure as to what was the exact relationship in which I stood toward him—had approached quite close, and, could I but see him, must now be within easy range of my gun. But, alas, it was still pitch Requirements of a Good Stroke Oar.

During practice a good stroke is one who is regular in his rowing and easy to follow. He must give the big men plenty of time to finish the stroke out. He must keep them swinging steadily, and in a trial over the whole or any portion of the course he must get every possible ounce of work out of them, so that they are completely rowed out without having got short or flurried on the way. In a race he must know the capabilities of his crew and must be able to feel how they are going, when they want easing off and when they are capable of higher pressure, while above all he must have that degree of generalship which will enable him to decide in a well contested race when to put the pressure on in order to take the advantage of station at a certain point of the course, when to ease off if he is holding his opponent at a slower rate of stroke, how far it is necessary for him to save himself for an effort at the end and especially in a really close contest the exact moment at which he should make the "grande attaque."—Saturday Review.

POWER OF IMAGINATION.

A Druggist's Story of How It Worked In One Case.

"The power of imagination," said a New York druggist. "is past comprehension. Not long since a domestic in the employ of a prominent family came into the store in great haste with a prescription which called for two grains of morphine in two ounces of aqua pura—that is, distilled water—the accompanying direction reading, 'A teaspoonful every hour until the pain is allayed.' The patient for whom it was intended was the head of the family, who was suffering from a severe attack of nervous neuralgia.

"Now, it so happened that the family physician who had written the prescription was behind the counter when the messenger arrived, having dropped in, as was his wont, on the way to his office. While I was putting up the prescription we chatted and laughed and joked and passed the time of day as only professional men are capable of doing. I filled the bottle, corked it carefully and labeled it properly, and when the retreating form of the domestic had disappeared out of the store door returned to my companionable physician visitor. As I did so I saw to my amazement the two grains of morphine reposing upon the prescription scales.

"'Doctor,' I ejaculated, 'I've given that girl nothing but distilled water. The morphine is here; look at it. What shall I do?'

"'Do?' he replied, with admirable sang froid. 'Do? Why, nothing at all. I'll wager you that the aqua pura will work as well without the opiate as with it.'

"'Agreed,' said I. And do you know," concluded the pharmacist, "the doctor was right, and the patient with the nervous neuralgia—an exceptionally intelligent and college bred man—was sleeping as peacefully as a babe after the second dose of the 'mixture.' Faith is everything where medicine is concerned."—Exchange.

The Humane French Boatman and the Dead Englishman.

A long expected French lugger was seen making for the roadstead, and the Lowestoft free traders were on the alert, anxiously seeking an opportunity for communicating with her crew. While they waited for a lapse of vigilance on the part of the excisemen, a boat was lowered from the lugger and rowed toward the shore. A curious crowd of beach men and excisemen assembled to meet her, and as she came in on the crest of a roller it was observed that she contained a coffin.

The French boatmen had a mournful tale to tell. On board the lugger had been an Englishman suffering from an illness which soon proved fatal. In his last moments of consciousness he had begged the captain not to bury him at sea, but to keep his body until a resting place could be found for it under the green turf of a churchyard in his native land. Sympathy with his sad fate and the knowledge that the lugger was not far from the English coast had induced the captain to consent, and now he had sent the body ashore for burial. In spite of his broken English, the Frenchmen's spokesman told his tale well.

Both excisemen and beach men—especially the latter—loudly expressed their admiration of the captain's conduct. A parson was summoned, and in a little while a mournful procession made its way from the beach to the churchyard. Even the chief officer of the excisemen was present and is said to have shed tears.

That night the local "resurrectionists" were busy, and at dawn the churchyard contained a desecrated grave. A little way inland, however, in the midst of the marshes, a smugglers' store received the addition of a coffin filled with silks and lace!—"Highways and Byways in East Anglia," W. A. Dutt.

LOTS BEING DRAWN

EXCITING SCENES AT EL RENO

Man and Woman Drew the First and Second Prizes Respectively, and the Big Crowd Shouted "They Must Get Married."

El Reno, O. T., July 30.—Oklahoma's great land lottery was begun here in earnest yesterday, and when the commissioners appointed by the federal government adjourned the drawing for the day, 1,000 of the choices of the 13,160 acres claims in the Kiowa-Comanche country had been awarded.

The first name drawn from the wheels was that of Stephen A. Holcomb of Pauls Valley, I. T., for a homestead in the El Reno district, and the second, Leonard Lamb of Augusta, O. T. These two men select the two choice claims in this district.

The capital prize winners, however, proved to be James R. Wood of Weatherford, O. T., whose name was the first to come from the Lawton district wheel, and Miss Mattie H. Beals of Wichita, Kan., who drew the second number in that district. They will have the privilege of making the first filings in the Lawton district, and will undoubtedly choose the two quarter sections adjoining that town. These are considered the most valuable in the territory and are worth from $20,000 to $40,000 each.

The day was one of keen excitement, replete with interesting scenes. It is estimated that fully 25,000 persons witnessed the drawing. The immense throng was wrought up to the highest pitch. The drawing of the first names was followed by a mighty shout. When 25 names had been taken from the El Reno district wheel attention was turned to that representing the Lawton district.

The first name brought out for this district was that of James Woods of Weatherford, O. T., and the crowd again went wild. This meant that Woods would be able to claim the quarter section adjoining Lawton town, one of the choicest in the entire country.

The second ticket was drawn and Col. Dyer cried out: "I have the pleasure to announce the name of the first woman to draw a prize—Mattie H. Beal of Wichita, Kan."

Then Col. Dyer gave her declaration as 23 years old and 5 feet 3 inches in hight, just the hight of Woods. Instantly the crowd caught the humor of the situation and thousands shouted, "They must get married!"

The 18th winner in the Lawton district was Minerva McClintock, aged 25 years, of Oklahoma City. She was married Sunday and by this act forfeits her right to her claim. She might have chosen a claim near a county seat town worth several thousand dollars. The drawing was resumed this morning, and it is believed will have been completed by Thursday evening.

HUNG ON MEAT HOOKS.

Man's Skull Fractured and Is Fatally Injured.

Grand Haven, Mich., July 30.—A man hanging to a meat hook by his wrists was the sight that met the gaze of a party in the slaughter house of James Lillibridge, in Ottawa county. His skull was fractured and he is certain to die. His name is John Russell. The wounded man and Lillibridge engaged in a quarrel in the slaughter house. When Russell recovered consciousness he said that Lillibridge attacked him with a knife, then felled him with an ax, afterwards tying his hands and hanging him to a beef hook. Lillibridge denies that he hit Russell with an ax, but says he knocked him senseless with a blow from his fist.

HAPPY REUNION.

Father and Daughter Meet After Nine Years' Separation.

Plymouth, Mich., July 30.—Sadie Edmunds disappeared from her home in Alpena nine years ago. She was then 18, and it was supposed she was killed by a jealous lover. Two weeks after her disappearance her mother died from grief. One month later her sweetheart died from the same cause.

Her father was so affected that he left town and moved to Plymouth. Here he started in business anew, but brooded over the mystery. Two weeks ago the daughter, while at Thousand Islands, read in a Wilkesbarre paper of an accident to a man of her father's name. She employed a detective, who investigated, and acquainted the father of the daughter's whereabouts. A happy visit followed. The daughter at the time of her disappearance married a man now living in New Orleans, La. She is Mrs. Lawrence Brice.

Loss nearly total; insurance $1,500.

KILLED BY A BULL

A Well Known Farmer Meets a Horrible Death

HIS RIBS TORN FROM HIS SPINE

Greasy Was Sixty Years Old and Was Well Known Throughout the County—It Is stated He Was Attacked by the Bull Before.

Three Rivers, Mich., July 30.—John B. Greasy, a prominent farmer living three miles northwest of this city, met a horrible death yesterday morning. After breakfast he went out to turn the cattle into the pasture, when he was attacked by a bull that was running with the cattle. The attack was so sudden that he could give no alarm, but his wife heard the noise, and she found Greasy down and the bull standing over him trying to gore him. Had not the animal been dehorned, in all probability he would have finished Greasy sooner. Mrs. Greasy succeeded in getting her husband away from the animal, and with the help of two daughters carried him to a building near by.

Physicians were immediately summoned, but he died in a few moments without regaining consciousness. An examination showed that the ribs were loose from the backbone. There were other internal injuries.

Greasy was 60 years old and was well known throughout the county. Parties say the bull had attacked him once before, and that he intended to dispose of him.

Capt. E. Joiner, master of the Sagamore, lived in Henderson, N. Y.; Ira Ives, cook on the Sagamore, lived at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y.

The missing: Burley Smith, seaman on the Sagamore, lived at Woodville, N. Y.

The Storm's Work.

Warren, Mich., July 30.—Storm tore the brick smokestack off the Warren Brick & Tile works, also blew down some dry sheds and knocked over lots of fruit trees, corn, fences, etc. J. CADILLAC WON

But Three More Races Must Be Run Before a Decision Is Given.

Chicago, July 30.—The Cadillac won the seventh trial race yesterday, beating the Illinois by one minute and five seconds over a 21-mile course. At the conclusion of the race the judges announced that they considered the results so far obtained indecisive and ordered three more races. This announcement was disagreeable to the Detroit contingent, who claimed that Cadillac had made the best showing and was entitled to the honor of defending the cup.

J. C. Shaw, owner of the Cadillac, left for his home last night, and it is not certain that he will sail any more races. He has not, however, announced that he will not do so. The race yesterday was triangular, seven miles to a leg. The wind was due west, shifting occasionally a point or two, but steady for the most part. During the race it blew at a 20-mile rate. Three boats were to start, but 40 seconds before the starting gun was fired the mast of the Milwaukee broke off short and the Cadillac and Illinois were left to compete alone. The former led throughout and the race was a procession over the course.

RAIN FALLING

And Lower Temperatures Reported From Heated Sections.

Washington, July 30.—Official advices to the weather bureau are confirmative of the press reports of the prevalence of rains over the corn belt since Sunday night, with cooler weather. During the past 24 hours rain has fallen very generally over that section with some few exceptions, notably southern Ohio, Kentucky and southwestern Nebraska.

While not very heavy in amount, the rains are described officially as fair for summer time. At Kansas City there was over an inch of precipitation from one-quarter to almost two inches in various parts of Iowa. In Nebraska the rain fall was fair; in eastern and northern Oklahoma there were some showers, and in Missouri they were pretty fair. Showers are predicted for today east of the Mississippi river and fair weather west. Temperatures in the corn belt were generally above 90 degrees, but in some localities they did not get so high and were not above 95 degrees except at a few points. For the next day or two temperatures will be reasonably moderate, as compared with those of the past heated period.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by G. A. Wright, druggist.

Everything Points to a Settlement of the Strike

STRIKERS STILL ON THE ALERT

Hope, However, Predominates and Peace Is Confidently Expected by the Majority of Those Interested in the Outcome of the Conference.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 30.—Everybody was on the qui vive last night in strike circles, and the coming conference of the leaders of the two contending forces is looked forward to with mingled hope and fear. Hope, however, predominates and peace is confidently expected by the majority of those interested.

"The executive committee of the Amalgamated association will meet in the headquarters today and take up propositions of the United States Steel Corporation for a settlement of the steel workers' strike."

This statement was made by Secretary Williams of the Amalgamated association. Beyond this he declined to discuss the strike in any form. There was no change in the position of the two contestants yesterday. Both sides held firmly to the plan of watching each other.

Yesterday was a busy day for President Shaffer and executive officials of the Amalgamated association. There was a steady stream of callers from early in the morning and innumerable conferences bearing on the proposed settlement of the strike. President Shaffer was firm in his determination not to talk on the strike situation until after the meeting today, or until the decision had been reached by the executive committee concerning the propositions of the United States Steel Corporation. It was intimated, however, that there was a very strong likelihood that the committee would not adjourn today until they had met with the manufacturers and formally discussed the settlement of the strike. If this should be the case, the usual peace is possible in a short time. Whatever points are to be discussed are still only known to the officials of the association and the corporation. Any reference to the points to be settled are therefore guesswork.

Col. G. Watson French and J. F. Taylor of the Republic Iron & Steel Co. had a lengthy conference with President Shaffer, but the object of their call was not made public. It was said, however, that it had no connection with the strike settlement, but rather to the affairs of the Youngstown company. It was said that the Republic company was in need of a number of skilled men and in search of them. After the visit of Col. French, Joseph Bishop, the secretary of the Ohio board of arbitration, went into conference with President Shaffer. His visit was in connection with the strike and its probable settlement. What was said, however, was not divulged and will not be. It is believed that Mr. Bishop has been actively engaged in bringing about the last conference between the strikers and the steel trust, and is among the most gratified men over the results that are at least promised.

One of the most apparent facts in the status of the strike yesterday was the determination of the strikers to raise no ground in their struggle while peace negotiations are being conducted. It was explained this plan was absolutely necessary in order that the position of the Amalgamated association should be strong when the settlement takes place. Most of the officials of the association expressed confidence that the strike is near an end.

BREWERS KICK

And Annul Their Contract With a Building Trades Council.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 30.—The Milwaukee Brewers' association unanimously passed a resolution declaring the contract between that association and the Building Trades' trades council terminated.

The trouble arose over one of the breweries refusing to recognize the Master Plumbers' association to the extent of giving it a monopoly of its business and prohibiting all competition for plumbing work.

The brewers' association took this action after one of the local breweries had been put on the unfair list and upon a refusal of the building trades council to arbitrate the trouble.

The building trades council affiliates with the Federated Trades council, and a lively fight is anticipated. It remains to be seen whether the brewers' union will aid the building trades council in its fight. The Milwaukee Brewers' association is one of the largest in the country, and for several years past has signed an annual agreement with the building trades council governing all kinds of work. The breweries employ several thousand union men.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

Georgetown, S. C., July 30.—A boiler in the sawmill of the Winyah Lumber Co. exploded, almost totally wrecking the plant, killing three negroes and seriously injuring several others. A schooner lying at the wharf was damaged. The explosion is said to have been caused by low water in the boiler.

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

The people of Dakota, just budding into twin star statehood, had appealed for federal troops, but at Brentwood the striker had full sway. Two companies of militia arriving to re-enforce the local command found a few of the latter wandering disconsolately about in small squads and civilian dress, the laughing stock of the town, the leaders of the strike having early and thoughtfully possessed themselves of their arms, armory and uniforms. Received with ironical cheers, the newcomers sought to communicate with the sheriff, as their instructions required. Polite and sympathetic citizens bade them remain aboard the train and they would be switched over into the yards of the Seattle, where the sheriff was reported holding out as best he could. They remained, were switched as promised not only to but beyond the yards—40 miles beyond, in fact—at breathless speed and bidden to camp there until they were hauled back and to live meantime on the country. For over 24 hours the strikers had things all their own way and were jubilant.

Then came the backward sweep of the tide. A wire from the south announced that regulars were in possession at Omaha, Council Bluffs and Sioux City and that a little battalion was on its way to the relief of Brentwood, and still the starving and imprisoned live stock baaed, bellowed and squealed for food and water. Still passenger traffic was at a stand. The division superintendent and his assistants were powerless. Though they manned engines, threw switches and "braked" cars, the rails were soaped, the boilers foamed and their engines were "killed" under their very noses, all without violence of either word or deed. The strikers liked their division chief and hated to be at odds with him now. So long as only railway hands were permitted about the yards or stock trains there had been no wanton destruction of property, but to such scenes ever flock the blackguard element of the community, and the news that troops were coming proved an excuse for desperate deeds. That night the wintry sky above the Red Water reflected the glare of a mile of flame. Cars, grain sheds and an elevator went up in smoke. There was a barbecue where one section of a cattle train could not be rescued and run out in time. All this, telegraphed to Chicago and the officials scattered over the length of the road, called for strenuous action. The wires hummed with appeals and orders and a calm, placid man, a dark, brown eyed man, who looked the soldier in spite of civilian dress, drove into Brentwood at dawn the following day, sent certain telegrams to eastern points and one to old Fort Pawnee, far away to the south, got a light breakfast and another buggy at the hotel and drove out to the yards. When he returned an hour before noon, the eyes of many citizens followed him in eager curiosity. The first of the regulars was here. At 2 o'clock the news was whispered about the streets that a big force of strikers had gone down to the narrows of the valley where the Red Water, turning from the rectitude of its ways, lashed and foamed between rocky bluffs and heights and the rival lines, Seattle and Big Horn, twisted and turned for some 20 miles not 400 yards apart. A troop train had left the river bent on forcing a way to Brentwood, and in desperation the strike leaders had determined to topple it into the stream.

It was but a few minutes after 2 when, through the Western Union, the stranger received the following dispatch:

> Major Melville, U. S. A., Brentwood:
> Nathan reports serious obstacles. Strikers opposing movement of train every mile. He has only 100 men. Four companies state militia go out by M. V. at once and may get first to Red Water gorge. The two commands should act in concert.
> CROOK.

The major replaced the dispatch in its envelope, stowed the packet in an inner pocket and walked slowly from the office into the slanting sunshine without. The street was filled with men sauntering up and down or gathered in knots at the corners. It was a still, wintry afternoon, though but little snow as yet had fallen east of the mountains. Melville noted that all eyes were on him, but not in open hostility. Whatever the hands might have in store for the officials of the road or for trainloads of troops, their rancor took no shape against a single man, apparently, even actually, unarmed. Melville carried neither flask nor pistol. He was reflecting on the miscarriage of the plans for the concentration of troops so far as Brentwood was concerned and wondering by what evil chance Nathan had been chosen to command the detachment ordered thither from the south. It was odd to think of light artillery men being so employed at any time, but these were the economical days. Companies, batteries and "troops" could rarely muster more than 30 men for duty. Pawnee's garrison had been split up and sent to three or four important points, and, being senior in date of commission to the two cavalry captains sent with it, Nathan had been given the lead, and Nathan looked anything but blissful when "Old Cat" ordered him off. "Leave enough men to care for your barracks, stables and gun sheds," said he, "draw 30 carbines from the cavalry, let your men leave their sabers and go with carbine and revolver, then you'll be uniform with the troopers." "Cat" thought that when a soldier was uniform with a trooper he couldn't be better off; Nathan thought he couldn't be worse. Next to an Indian Nathan hated a mob. Two hours from the time the orders reached him the command was ready to go, but not so Nathan. Two days from the time they started they were still two days' march from Brentwood, and their train met no detention whatever until it got well into northern Nebraska. Then it was found so easy to induce the commanding officer to believe that the track was all torn up just ahead or that strikers had blown up or burned down bridges that sympathizers with the wageworkers kept up the practice at every station, and Nathan was sending dispatch after dispatch to Omaha the tidings of which, when it all came to be investigated, proved utterly untrue, as the general held them to be at the time, and naturally he grew indignant and nervous. While most of the troops had been hurried to Chicago and the Mississippi crossings, the garrisons west of Omaha had been ordered to rendezvous there or go direct to other designated points in the northwest. Brentwood was making no great trouble, was the first report. Two or three companies of state militia were all that was needed, according to the original views of the authorities, and they were sent there, with the result that jeering telegrams came back to the magnates, the marshals and the military authorities called into action. All of a sudden people woke up to the realization that Brentwood was a railroad town and the whole community practically in sympathy with the operatives. All of a sudden the news came flashing over the wires that Captain Nathan, with 100 men from Fort Pawnee, had been stoned and compelled to retire when his command was detrained at Gunnison, and, though officers and men declared their readiness to push ahead afoot, their cautious captain forbade any man to push a foot ahead until he could again communicate by wire with department headquarters.

"What did I tell you?" growled the veteran Indian fighter, now taking his first turn of any consequence against the mob. "You've heard the old saying, 'An army of sheep led by a lion can whip an army of lions led by a sheep,' and that's what's side tracked now at Gunnison."

And at the very moment that Nathan was holding back there, alarmed and irresolute, with 100 fighting men ready for any duty and chafing at their commander's inaction, another troop train came steaming into the station. Two alert, clear eyed, sturdy men in civilian dress sprang from the engine cab, and at sight of the foremost the men who had so easily daunted the commanding officer of the first train seemed to slink away. He dived into the telegraph office, spent a few minutes in sending and receiving dispatches, and in that few minutes the platform swarmed with a laughing, shouting, shoving, altogether hilarious crowd of young fellows in loose, flapping blue blouses and greatcoats, eagerly seeking something—anything to eat or drink. Aboard the first train, far up ahead, was grim silence. Not a soldier showed himself outside the cars. Orders were orders. Around this second train it seemed as though, officers and men in a bunch, the battalion of militia had turned out for a frolic. It didn't last long. A grizzled, sharp featured little man in a major's uniform swung off the rearmost car and came up the track three ties to the stride, his eyes snapping. So were his words when he got to the platform. He wasted none till within hail. "Captain Clark, get your men aboard your car instantly. Captain Geisenheimer, this is the second time I've spoken to you. Go to the rear car in arrest! Lieutenant Meinecke, take command of the company and the company to the car. I told you supper would be ready for all hands at 5 o'clock. It's only 4. Back to the train, every mother's son of you! Back!" And, somewhat crestfallen, somewhat awed and abashed, yet realizing that the little major "meant business," back they went, still keeping up the semblance of jocularity by horseplay and racing. Then out came the first of the newly arrived civilians, followed by the younger, a silent man.

"All serene for ten miles anyhow, major, but you might put four of your best men on the pilot and tender. We will be there too." "All right, Mac!" he sang out to the engineer. "We push ahead as soon as we get this gang aboard. Look at the regulars' train up the track. They're not straggling all over creation!"

"No, and they ain't gittin ahead any too fast either," snickered the station agent. "It's taken 'em two hours to come 20 miles, and now the cap's waitin for orders."

"Then, by gad, that gives us the right of way and the lead," was the gleeful answer. "We go on at once. How's that for high, major? Better come forward to the baggage car."

Then pandemonium broke loose on the rear troop train. The words went from car to car like wildfire that the regulars were side tracked ahead, and "the boys," as they called themselves, would have the lead. From every door and window one head at least and sometimes two protruded as the engine gathered way and presently rolled past the heavier but shorter train at the water tank. A chorus of yells of rejoicing, chaff and fun arose from the throats of 300 lively young westerners on their first campaign. Silent, somber faces looked out at them from the other windows, though occasionally some light hearted Irishman would fling back a laughing answer. Three officers stood on the rear platform of the regular train intently eying the oncoming engine. The guardsmen on the pilot were hanging to their rifles with one hand and the rail with the other. The tender seemed bristling with bluecoats. The keen, bright eyed face of the railway official was peering forth from the fireman's side of the cab, and he waved his hand to the trio. None knew him, but all looked and saw, peering over his shoulder, another face. It was only an instant's glimpse, but a flash of recognition leaped into the eyes of the nearmost. He leaned forward from the step and gazed after them as they rushed by, regardless of the jocular hails of the crowd in the cars, then, as the engine was shut from view, drew back on the platform once more.

"Whom did I see?" he repeated in reply to a question asked by Mr. Torrance. "Eric Langdon or his ghost!"

CHAPTER VI.

Midway up the Red Water gorge and ten miles southeast of Brentwood there comes tumbling and foaming down from the north a stream that is little more than a big brook eight months of the year, but is advertised all the year round as one of the scenic attractions of the Seattle road, much to the disgust of the general passenger and ticket agent of the Big Horn, whose right of way is, in his opinion, twice invaded, first by the stream itself and then by the Seattle. Following the north bank of the Red Water, the Big Horn had to encounter all the engineering difficulty of laying out a stable roadway across the mouth of this little tributary that in the months of melting snows became a boiling torrent and the expense of constructing a massive bridge, while the spectacular effect was lost on its passengers because that right of way was scooped out at the base of steep, rocky cliffs that shut entirely the view of the cascade and rapids until the car was directly under best effect, whereas from the opposite bank the passengers of the Seattle line, sweeping round a fine curve, concave to the north, were treated to a capital view not only of the foaming, spray tossing little cataract and the leaping rapids back of and above the Big Horn bridge, but of the fine bridge itself and the really magnificent gorge of the Red Water between the lines. Big Horn people thought it rough that the Seattle should so profit by what was practically their property. Some of the directors advocated boarding up the whole north side of their steel truss, thus hiding the sight from Seattle's eyes. But, said others, that would spoil it for our own patrons, besides making it dangerous for the bridge, for whenever a blizzard did sweep from the north—a rare occurrence near Brentwood—it came for all it was worth, down that selfsame crosscut gulch and beat in fury against the bridge at its foot. The massive stone piers were of double strength, and the stanch truss of tempered steel, that would and any vertical strain the possibilities of railroading could heap upon it, had twice been perceptibly shifted by this lateral pressure. It was for this reason that a siding had been let into the bank for a quarter of a mile west of the bridge, and a train of flat cars, heavily laden with railway iron, was kept there until certain guys and anchors could be made and set and the bridge stiffened laterally—a long operation. The object was to run those cars out on the bridge, set the brakes and by this vast increase of weight so add to its stability as to bid defiance when the elements threatened. The repairs had been made and that auxiliary train removed before the management was called on to resist a storm of far greater magnitude and very different character. But the siding was still there. "It may come in handy some day," said the division superintendent, and the day appeared to have come. Old hands minded them of that old train, and some flat cars were "loaded up." The American is never satisfied with the powers of his own verbs—to add, to load, to open, to saddle and others of that ilk. He must, as he conceives, strengthen each by the superposition of "up," despite the fact that when correctly done there is no difference in the result of adding up or adding down. The schoolboy still talks of adding up a column, the section boss "loads up" his teams, the railway "opens up" the new region, the trooper "saddles up" his steed, and the newspaper sanctions and follows the example. Old hands knew it wouldn't do to hinder the mail trains, so the bridge was not destroyed or even blocked against them, but on the rumor that troops were coming conservative fellows among the strikers ran those iron laden cars down grade to the siding and there held them in readiness to be shoved out on the bridge the moment it was known the dreaded train had started from Gunnison, 20 miles to the east. One by one the heavy cars were then shoved across the bridge until the east approach and the span itself were covered. Then the more determined took things in their hands, also picks, crowbars and shovels, and so undermined the track at a point some 20 yards west of the bridge foundation that, should the troops succeed in reaching the bridge and then attempt to move the obstructing flats westward out of the way, their weight would break through the weakened roadbed and pile up a barricade of tangled rails and ruined flat cars that, without damage to either engine or troop train, would effectually block their passage, since men and tools and the wrecking train would be needed to clear the track, and as matters stood on this 28th of November these were not to be had.

And now at 4:30 in the wintry gloaming, silent save for occasional muttering, shivering a bit from mingled cold and excitement, a hundred or more of the hands, backed by twice their number of "toughs" and tramps, were gathered about the bluffs at Bridge siding, listening with all their ears for the first sound of the coming train. The rush of the Red Water over its rocky bed in the gorge below was the only sound that steadily bore upon the ear. Some few of the men, panting not a little, were laboring up the steep with hats or hands full of rocks. Over on the opposite—the southern—shore the concave curve of the Seattle was lined for a third of a mile with sympathizing operatives of the rival road, and for a time shouts of encouragement to each other and defiance to the management had echoed from bank to bank. Now, however, the gravity of the situation weighed upon the leaders, and in the mournful twilight the consciousness that they were "up ag'in the government," as several expressed it, caused some of the older men, who had gone through a harder tussle to utter defeat in 1877, to draw aside and confer together in cautious tones. From mere bravado an uncouth looking fellow began climbing the telegraph pole west of the bridge, and the applause of certain among the tramp element, at other times the natural enemy of the trainhands, attracted the attention of the leaders on the bluff. Instantly the query was bellowed from above:

"Hold on! What are you at?"

"Cuttin de wire, of course," was the shouted answer, and an unkempt face peered upward through the dim twilight.

"Let it alone, you fool! We're runnin the telegraph!" And a down spinning "dornick," sent by no reluctant hand, skimmed so close to the fuzzy head that, amid jeers of derision now, the would be wire clipper slid back to earth and skulked in among his cronies in the shadow of the bluff.

Barely 200 yards away eastward, across the deep rocky gulch, two men, muffled in overcoats and fur caps, had just alighted from a buggy. One, standing at the horse's head, nodded appreciatively.

"Hear that, major?" he asked. "They have not lost their senses, anyhow. I'll join you quick as I have blanketed and tethered the horse."

CLOGGING THE PIPES

A SENSIBLE SERMON ON HOUSEHOLD SANITATION.

Some Suggestions About the Plumbing and the Care That Should Be Exercised In the Avoidance Both of Expense and Disease.

Nowadays the plumber and his bill are your true household specters. Like other specters, careful common sense will put them to rout and confusion nine times in ten. Wise men have been studying this subject ever so long to devise plumbing that would take care of itself, but they have not yet succeeded. Neither are they likely to without a revolution in mechanics whereby the tendency of fluids always to seek their own level may be eliminated and other things as wonderful brought to pass. So long as knowledge remains nearly static so long will it behoove every housemistress to look well to the usage of her pipes and her traps.

A bit of rag or even string, a burnt match, a wisp of hair, seems a very little thing, one that the pipes can carry off with no possible hurt, but the rag, by hanging over the bend of the trap, may serve as a siphon to take away the water seal, which is all that stands between the household and unlimited sewer gas. And the rag may keep on doing it for weeks and weeks until deadly disease is rampant.

A string snarled and twisted may work the same ill. The match end, of course, ought to float away harmless, but is very much likelier to be caught in some eddy of the flush water, jammed into a crevice and there to take to itself other solid particles until they form a clot both offensive and dangerous.

As for hair, there is no end to the harm it harbors. A wisp quickly forms itself into a sort of strainer, catching and holding all that passes. Aside from that, it has a trick of lodging in the most inconvenient places, catching upon the least roughness inside the pipe and staying there until by accretion it has clogged the whole space.

Hair has special affinity for bits of soap. Solid soap, by the way, should never be sent down the pipes. Very strong soapsuds even is objectionable unless you follow it with a flood of clean water, preferably hot water.

Coffee grounds and tea leaves either clog a pipe very soon or else, if the flush water prevents that, wear it through quickly, partly by mechanical action, partly by chemical. Neither should ever be permitted in a sink. Even if you are wise enough to keep out all grease, and thus make sure that the grounds shall get safe away from your own pipes, in the sewer they may come in contact with grease from pipes less carefully kept and cake and clog your whole pipe system, making necessary costly and inconvenient unclogging.

Every kitchen ought to have its grease can, emptied once a week in winter and in summer every three days. All sorts of refuse fat should go into it, even the scrapings from plates and dishes. Greasy water, as from boiling hams or corned beef, should be allowed to cool thoroughly, then have the grease carefully taken off before it goes down the pipes. Skillets and frying pans ought to be filled with very hot soda water and let stand half an hour before washing. This gives time for the soda to partly saponify the grease and keep it from sticking to the pipe or caking on top of the trap.

In scouring faucets be careful to keep the scouring grit out of the joints. Even the finest particles cut away screw threads turning many times a day. After scouring also take care to let the water run at least a minute before catching any for use. In washing sandy vegetables, as spinach, turnips, potatoes, use a big pan and drain off the dirty water, so the sand may be caught. Even a spoonful of sand going down a pipe will cut and wear it more than a hogshead of water.

Milky water is one of the hardest things to manage. Even a small quantity daily fouls pipes unless the milky water is followed by a flushing of soda water moderately strong, with a limewater flush about every three days. The limewater is made more effective by adding salt to it. Sea salt is best. Put a lump as big as the fist in an earthen or wooden vessel along with twice the bulk of quicklime and cover with four gallons of hot water. Stir well and let settle. Pour the clear liquid down the pipes and follow it in half an hour with a flush of clear water boiling hot. Thus every kind of a sink may be kept sweet and fresh.—New York Sun.

Wait Till He Sees You.

A Zulu chief, when you enter his hovel, remains silent for some moments and seems quite unconscious of your presence. At length he says in a tone of grave dignity, "Ge saku bona" (I see you), to which you reply in the same way. The longer he takes to "see you" the greater man you are supposed to be, and until you are thus "seen" you must keep silent and appear as much as possible not to be there at all.

In the Museum.

"The legless man is always putting his foot in it," observed the living skeleton to the snake charmer.

"What has he done now?"

The two thunder storms of last Thursday night made telephone people an immense amount of trouble all over Michigan. Many exchanges were put out of service entirely and it will be weeks before they can be put in good shape. In Tecumseh we were more fortunate but even here the lightning burned out many telephones and switchboard coils and even burned off the line wire in many places, while the great wind produced many crosses of the wires. While we have had an usually large number of severe thunder storms this year, those of Thursday night were by far the worst with which our exchange has had to contend.

CAUGHT AT OGDENSBURG.

M. S. Loucks, of Detroit, is in Jail for Cheating Richard Meade out of $600.

M. S. Loucks, until recently of Detroit, was arrested at Ogdensburg last Thursday night on charge of grand larceny. He is accused of buncoeing Richard Meade out of $600.

Loucks induced Meade to go to Rochester to buy an automobile, saying that he was trying to secure the Rochester agency for the machine, and that he was very anxious to sell two of the machines. Meade went there picked out the automobile he liked and gave Loucks $600 which he secured on a draft at a local bank to pay for it. Loucks telling Meade the machine would be there in a short time, went away and failed to return. Meade, then becoming anxious about his machine wrote the Rochester people concerning it. In reply they stated that they had not received any order for such a machine.

It was promptly reported to the police and a detective traced him to Ogdensburg, where he was arrested. Loucks has been here several times, having sold Don Bowen his automobile. He was a short thick set fellow apparently about 30 years of age.

Of these 28 proved fatal, and over 500 of the victims were crippled for life. A newspaper editor is blamed with a lot he can't help, such as using partiality in mentioning visitors, giving news about some people and ignoring the coming and going of others, etc. He simply prints the news he can find and some people inform him of such things while others do not. A minister's wife, a doctor's wife and a traveling man's wife met one day and were talking about the forgetfulness of their husbands, The minister's wife thought her husband was the most forgetful man living because he would go to church and forget his notes and no one could make out what he was trying to preach about. The doctor's wife said her husband had a poorer memory still for he would often start out to see his patients and forget his medicine case and travel nine or ten miles for nothing. "Well," said the traveling man's wife, "my husband beats that. He came home the other day and patted me on the cheek and said: 'I believe I have seen you before—what is your name?" Morenci Observer.

Wheat is King.

Wheat is today as it has been for centuries past, the staple food article of civilized man. No other product of the soil ranks with wheat as human food, and the consuming nations are most careful to garner a sufficiency to serve their people for a given period, and to watch most eagerly the sources of supply. The demand for wheat has never yielded an inch to the onslaught of other food products that have vigorously sought for generations to supplant it. This present year we appear to have entered upon a period of decreasing world's supply. We hear of partial failures in Germany, France and Russia, and the outlook is for a record-breaking export demand upon the wheat supply of this country. Michigan wheat growers have for two years been unfortunate in seeing their crops attacked by the Hessian fly, but we should not forget that in 1898 we raised the largest and best crop that was ever grown in the state. What we have done we can do again. Persistence commands success, and our wheat growers should apply all known remedies and preventives against the fly and endeavor next year to equal past records in wheat growing.

The ravages of the fly can be very materially counteracted in Michigan by several methods not difficult of application.

1. By burning the stubble. This is very effective, and is being largely practiced in the west, and is effective not only in destroying the Hessian fly in the stubble, but hordes of other injurious insects. It is of course impracable in fields seeded to grass.

2. By thorough fertilization, especially with commercial fertilizers. This gives to the young plant strength and vigor to withstand the first attack of the destroyer. Thorough stirring of the ground before seeding is desirable.

3. By sowing a strip of wheat around the field very early in the fall and allowing this to become a harboring place or trap for the Hessian fly, and then plowing it under deep before the field is seeded.

4. By late sowing; in Michigan from the 1st to the 10th of October, not before Even later sowing is permissable. This is generally very reliable, notwithstanding the experience of 1900 was unfavorable. Much, of course, depends upon the time in the fall when frosts appear and also the time when freezing weather sets in sufficient degree to stop the growth of the plant. With winter coming as late as it did last year, even sowing in the first part of October is too early, while if we had an early setting in of winter it would of course be desirable to sow sufficiently early to get a reasonable amount of growth in the plant before winter. In nine years out of ten we have a nipping frost in this state in October, which will destroy the insects near the earth before the eggs are laid in the young plant.

5. Seed wheat should be most carefully selected with reference to the variety, the purity, plumpness and strength of the grain, and its freedom from smut or mixture of other grains. Smut may be cured by proper treatment of the seed wheat when it is not convenient to obtain seed that is free from it. Plump, large kernels will always produce the best and healthiest stand. Dawson's Golden Chaff has withstood the Hessian fly and other pests very well and has proved to be an excellent and reliable Michigan yielder. Some of the red varieties, notably the Rudy, have also proved excellent for Michigan.

A Great Man.

I count him a great man who inhabits a higher sphere of thought, into which other men rise with labor and difficulty. He has but to open his eyes to see things in a true light and in large relations, while they must make painful corrections and keep a vigilant eye on many sources of error. * * * He is a great man who is what he is from nature and who never reminds us of others.—Emerson.

A Model.

Mr. Jones came home at an unseemly hour the other night and was surprised to see Mrs. Jones sitting up for him below stairs, with no other light than that of the gas lamp, which faced the door, to keep her company.

"M-M-Marie," he said huskily, "y-you shouldn't sit up s'late when I'm out on business."

As Mrs. Jones did not answer him, he continued in an alarmed voice:

"Shorry, m'dear, but it's last time—tell you I'm sorry—won't shpeak to me?"

At this moment Mrs. Jones called from above stairs:

"Mr. Jones, who are you talking to at this hour of the night?"

"Thash what I'd like to know m-m-myself," stammered Jones.

Mrs. Jones hastened down stairs, lamp in hand. When she saw the situation, she laughed in spite of being very angry.

"It's the model," she said—"the model I bought today to fit my dresses on."

"Yes, thash so," said Jones tipsily. "Model woman—didn't talk back—make some fellow good wife."—London Tit-Bits.

The Odd Shillings.

There is very little difference between a pound and a guinea; only a shilling, and yet the keen business man insists that the shilling shall be considered. After Thackeray's series of lectures on the four Georges had been delivered in London, Willert Beale says that he called upon the novelist in Onslow square with a check for £250.

"What's this, W. B.?" cried Thackeray, reading the check. "Pounds? Our agreement says guineas, and guineas it must be."

"You are aware that the lectures so far have involved very heavy losses," said Beale apologetically.

"That's not my affair," said Thackeray. "I don't know what occult means you have to protect yourself from loss. Guineas, W. R.! Guineas it must be, and nothing else. I must have the shillings."

And the shillings were sent him immediately.

Painting Black Eyes.

"The painting of blackened eyes, of which you hear little nowadays," said a man of experience, "is so well established a business now that it does not even need advertising. A sign which I just passed aroused memories of earlier days within me. It was merely the name of a man who does this kind of painting, with the brief announcement, 'Black Eyes Painted.'

"Some years ago such a simple statement was not enough to enable one in that business to live. The artist whose calling this sign declared is the same man who some years back used to have a place on the avenue farther west, and in front of that old office he used to have an expansive and gorgeous sign which told his accomplishments in the phraseology which the only Tody Hamilton after perfected in describing the charms of the best that Barnum offered."—New York Sun.

Tests of Culture.

The chemist Liebig proposed to measure the standard of civilization by the consumption of soap, a creation which would put the inhabitants of North Holland at the head of all civilized nations. As a more reliable test Edmund About suggested the sale of steel pens, the socialist Bebel the frequency of reform meetings, Dr. Bernard the use of undergarments, a luxury unknown to the semicivilized tribes of Asia and South America; Professor Ebers the sale of postage stamps. The mileage of railroads per hundred square miles of territory might do in comparing countries of equal density of population.—Exchange.

Telegraphing With Cannons.

When the first vessel completed the passage of the then new Erie canal in 1825, there being no such thing as a telegraph in those days, the news was communicated to New York and to Buffalo by cannons placed within hearing of each other all the way along from Albany to each of the other cities. The signal was passed along in this way from Albany to New York city and back again to Albany in 58 minutes. The experiment was a costly one, but was a success in every particu-

One Passenger Too Many.

A good story is going the rounds of the offices of the Metropolitan Street Railway company concerning the wonderful presence of mind displayed recently by a new conductor on one of the company's trolley cars. This particular car was bowling along up Broadway recently when it was hailed and boarded by a company inspector.

The official hurriedly counted the passengers in the car and found that there were nine. Then he cast his eye up to the register and found that there had been only eight fares rung up. He disclosed his identity to the new conductor and called attention to the discrepancy.

Slowly and painfully the new hand counted over his passengers and then scanned his register.

"Begorra, an you're roight, sir," he said and promptly stopped the car.

"Say," he demanded, addressing the passengers in an authoritative manner, "wan o' youse fellows'll hov to git off the car-r."—New York Times.

The Captain of an Ocean Liner.

Nowadays the captain is the host of the ship. He is no longer the gruff, rough seadog in a pea jacket of years gone by. He must observe some of the social amenities; he must talk to the passengers now and then when the weather is fine; he must take his seat at table when he may; he must be a kind of diplomat also and possess wit and tact and a patience sublime; he must see that no jealousies develop among the passengers. I have been told of the very obliging captain who, to please the lady who asked to be shown the equator while the ship was in southern seas, pasted a hair across the large end of a spyglass and told the lady to look. And the lady through the glass declared she could see the equator "as plainly as A B C." One other polite captain I have heard of—one who directed an officer on the bridge to "do as the lady wishes," when the lady requested that the captain steer the ship over to the horizon so she could see what the horizon was like.—Captain Jameson in Collier's.

A Korean Prison.

The gate was wide open, and the courtyard was full of prisoners, and the surrounding buildings were old and tottering. I asked the chief, whom one of the two or three listless attendants called for us, why the prisoners did not run away. "Oh," he replied, "they would be caught and beaten again and kept longer. Now they will get out soon."

But as I looked at them I saw they did not run because they could not. The life was beaten out of them. The keepers brought the heavy red cord with a brass hook at the end and trussed up a man with it to show how the beating was done and then brought us the stiff rods with which victims were pounded over the shins, and thighs until the beaten spots were simply masses of festering rottenness. There was a room, black, foul, leprous, in which the men were fastened in the stocks. The Black Hole of Calcutta was scarcely less merciful than this.—Ladies' Monthly.

Like any itchiness of the skin

Itching piles almost drive you crazy.

All day it makes you miserable.

All night it keeps you awake.

Itch. Itch. Itch. With no relief

Just the same with eczema.

Can hardly keep from scratching it.

You would do so but you know it makes you worse.

Such miseries are daily decreasing.

People are learning they can be cured.

Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema or any itchiness of the skin.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, book binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all the other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doans ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

Everything comes to him who waits including despair and decay.

Ten thousand demons gnawing away at one's vitals couldn't be much worse than the tortures of itching piles. Yet there's a cure. Doan's Ointment never fails.

TALK OF MARRIAGE.

It Is Proper For the Man, but Not For the Girl, Apparently.

A man may remark on his intention to marry at some indefinite future time, when prudence or other considerations may make it possible or advisable, without having, as a rule, to run the gantlet of a chorus of impertinent and stupid would be witty remarks. But should a girl be bold enough, or, rather, natural and simple enough, to say the same thing what would be the result? Why, every one knows that she would be promptly sneered out of countenance.

And why? Is it immodest for a woman to express a determination to enter into a state which we are being continually reminded is a natural and honorable state, while it is modest and proper for a man to do so? Such a distinction would never be drawn except for the "cheapness" to which reference has been made.

If a man wants to marry, he can marry. If the first woman he asks refuses him, he has only to ask a second or perhaps a third or fourth. It would be safe to guarantee that within a month any man of fairly respectable life and position and appearance who cared to make the experiment could marry in his own class, could marry probably a woman much superior to himself.

But what about the girl who intends to marry "some day?" Is she not in a very different position from the man? Here is a girl of good character—much better than the man's, probably—average intelligence, average good looks. Theoretically she is free to marry whom she will, but is she? If she receives one distinct offer of marriage, she has had more than her share, according to the probable average.

The fact that by an unwritten law a woman must not take, and, indeed, does not want to take, the initiative has very little to do with the extremely limited choice which modern conditions impose upon English women.—Nineteenth Century.

A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

A GENTLE HINT.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the death resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syruy kept about home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. "POLICE! POLICE!"

Shouted Mr. Redmund, and He Was Immediately Suspended.

London, July 30.—There was wild uproar in the house of commons between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning at the conclusion of the debate on the taxation of agricultural property. The conservatives interrupted Mr. Walton, liberal, with cries of "divide." William Redmond, on a point of order, called the attention of the speaker to the interruption, but the speaker ruled that the point was not well taken. Mr. Walton resumed, but quite inaudibly owing to the persistent cries of "divide."

Mr. Redmond shouted "police, police."

The speaker said this expression was disorderly.

Mr. Redmond: "Why don't you keep order?"

The speaker directed him to leave the house and named him.

Mr. Balfour, the government leader, moved Mr. Redmond's suspension, and this was carried by a vote of 303 to 71.

Patrick O'Brien persisted in the same point of order and was in turn named and suspended. The bill was adopted.

Canadian Boat Won.

Montreal, July 30.—For the fifth time the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht club successfully defended the Seawanhaka cup, the defender Senneville, yesterday defeating the English challenger Grey Friar by 4 minutes 56 seconds. A moderate breeze was blowing and Grey Friar once more got away in the lead, but was soon overhauled by Senneville and never recovered the lost position. The English boat again displayed inferiority in windward work and superiority on reaches, actually beating the Canadian in this respect by eight seconds.

Swallowed Two Pounds of Stone.

Stones do not form part of the recognized diet of the cormorant, but one of these birds in the National Zoological park in Washington had a craving which could be satisfied only by eating two pounds of stones. The keeper's attention was attracted to the bird because after having once sat down it couldn't get up. He was picked up, and then the stones were heard rattling inside of him. An official connected with the park decided that something must be done, and he promptly cut the cormorant open and relieved him of his burden. One of the stones, of irregular shape, was 3½ inches long. The incision was sewed up, and for five days the bird got along all right, the wound healing finely, but at the end of that time the cormorant grew restive and pulled out the stitches with his hooked bill. As a consequence of opening up the wound he died.
